Larry Boothby

- Over 36 years of security and law enforcement experience
- Retired from Secret Service
- Conducted risk assessments for stadiums, Madison Square Garden, Camp David, schools, Governors' mansions, Capitol Buildings and more

Because the social landscape of campuses and universities are constantly evolving, so too must the programs and techniques used to help provide a safe and secure environment for all those who live, work, and visit these institutions. Key to implementing a successful program is conducting a safety and security risk assessment. In this webinar, we will discuss

- Why conducting risk assessments is vital to campus safety and how this affects the institution's bottom line
- Discover the types of assessments as they pertain to safety and security
- Understand the role(s) that campus officials play in responding to an event as well as students and staff in maintaining security
