FY 1997 Discretionary Grant Program Awards

FY 1997 Discretionary Grant Program Awards Report

Dear Colleague:

Based on the positive interviews, responses, and reports I have received from the field concerning the value of the FY 1996 Discretionary Grant Program Awards document, I am pleased to present you with the FY 1997 edition.

In talking with you we have learned the value as a planning tool of last year's discretionary report. The FY 1997 edition will cover the same ground in describing the awards, grantees, amounts, and contact persons. As a guide to funding and descriptions of innovative programs, I am sure it will be helpful as you plan your own strategies and initiatives for this year.

As background, these discretionary awards are made possible through an appropriation from Congress to the Edward Byrne Memorial State and Local Assistance Program. The Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA) administers the funds and is the grant maker and monitor of the awards. Falling into two categories—formula and discretionary—the majority of the funds are awarded to State governments on the basis of population. The second category falls within the discretion of the Director to award funds for innovative crime- and drug-reduction programs directly to the applicants from both the public and private sectors.

Some awards are earmarked by Congress to continue important national programs such as the Boys and Girls Clubs of America and the "Take a Bite Out of Crime" McGruff Campaign from the National Crime Prevention Council. Other discretionary awards are made to State and local agencies to test innovative programs.

To foster this response from urban and rural communities, BJA was proud to announce its first Open Solicitation Call for Concept Papers program. More than 1,700 concept papers were received from large and small constituencies covering innovative ways to handle issues in law enforcement, adjudication, rural community crime, and special challenges in the Native American and Alaskan Native tribal communities. Awards of $50,000 to $150,000 were made to 37 finalists after an extensive peer panel review process.

Learning what was important to all of these communities, many of which were rural and tribal, was a giant step in reaching out to all Americans interested in arresting crime and reducing illegal drug use. The Open Solicitation program will be offered again during FY 1998.

Building partnerships, coordinating resources, developing performance measures, and comprehensive planning are the stepping stones to developing successful programs. We hope that this document will help you achieve these goals.

Adjudication

The mission of the Bureau of Justice Assistance's Adjudication Branch is to improve the effectiveness and efficiency of all aspects of the adjudication process—the courts, prosecution, and defense. Toward this end, the Branch is committed to the development of partnerships among the components of the criminal justice system. Branch initiatives focus on community justice, including a collaborative effort with the Red Hook, Brooklyn, Community Justice Center and the Community Justice Assistance Center in New York City to establish community justice assistance centers nationwide. Other major areas of program activity include enhancing the operation of courts; ensuring access to justice; developing pretrial and posttrial programs; and training State and local judges, prosecutors, and defense counsels.

Comprehensive Communities Programs

BJA's Comprehensive Programs Branch is demonstrating an innovative, comprehensive, and integrated multiagency approach to violent crime control and community mobilization in 16 jurisdictions across the Nation. Two key principles underlie this initiative. First, communities must play the lead role in fostering violence prevention partnerships. Second, State and local jurisdictions must establish strong coordinated and multidisciplinary approaches. Under the Comprehensive Communities Programs (CCP), communities faced with high rates of violent crime and drug abuse develop a comprehensive strategy for crime and drug control that requires police departments and other city agencies to work in partnership with the community to address crime- and violence-related problems and the environment that fosters them.

Corrections

BJA's Corrections Branch supports the planning, development, implementation, and evaluation of demonstration projects to test a broad range of alternatives to traditional modes of incarceration. These projects assist offenders in their transition to the community following their release by providing security, discipline, and services—including diagnosis, counseling, substance abuse treatment, education, job training, and placement assistance—while the offenders are under correctional supervision. The projects also provide linkage to similar services in the community. All BJA correctional options demonstration projects have four basic goals: reduced incarceration costs, relief of prison and jail crowding, reduced recidivism rates for youthful offenders, and advancement in correctional practices.

Evaluation and Technical Assistance

The Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988 mandates that all programs funded under the Byrne Memorial Grant Program be evaluated. The goal is to identify and disseminate information about programs with proven effectiveness so that jurisdictions throughout the country can replicate them. In addition, evaluation results guide the formulation of policy and programs within Federal, State, and local criminal justice agencies.

The National Institute of Justice (NIJ) is an active participant in BJA's evaluation program. BJA and NIJ jointly develop evaluation guidelines and conduct comprehensive evaluations of selected programs receiving discretionary and formula grant funds. The Director of NIJ is required to report to the President, Attorney General, and Congress on the nature and findings of the Byrne Program evaluation activities.

During FY 1997, BJA continued to make awards and work with State and local units of government to determine the effectiveness and impact of funded programs. BJA's evaluation strategy emphasizes working with its partnerships with State Administrative Agencies, local programs, and NIJ to coordinate evaluation activities. By building strong foundations for evaluation in the 50 States and 6 territories, and by working with NIJ and others, BJA increasingly is able to identify and publicize effective, proven programs for replication.

Special Programs

The Special Programs Division (SPD) within BJA expedites high-priority programs of national interest specializing in arranging grants for complex programs with particular emphasis on program design, development, and implementation. SPD comprises two branches: the Public Safety Officers' Benefits (PSOB) Program Branch and the National Initiatives Branch (NIB).

PSOB administers the Federal Death and Disability Benefits Program for fallen firefighters and law enforcement officers and the Federal Law Enforcement Dependent Assistance (FLEDA) program, which provides financial assistance for higher education to the spouses and children of Federal law enforcement officers killed or permanently and totally disabled in the line of duty. PSOB also provides crisis intervention and emotional support services for the families and coworkers of Federal, State, and local public safety officers killed in the line of duty. This assistance is provided through grants to Concerns of Police Survivors Inc. (COPS) and the National Fallen Firefighters Foundation (NFFF).

NIB is tasked with implementing programs and issuing grant awards as required by several legislative mandates. NIB has successfully implemented the Church Arson Prevention Grant Program, the National First Responder Training Grant Program for Terrorist Incidents and Weapons of Mass Destruction, the Denial of Federal Benefits Program, the Motor Vehicle National Theft Prevention Grant Program, and the Motor Vehicle National Titling Program.
