FORWARD

The Bureau of Justice Statistics is pleased to announce its DIRECTORY of CRIMINAL JUSTICE DATA in the UNITED STATES. Like its predecessor, the Criminal Justice Data Directory, this Directory helps researchers find and obtain data collections to meet their special needs. Data collections compiled from the major national surveys sponsored by BJS are identified in it as are data collections from other major studies in the field of criminal justice. The Directory is published by the National Criminal Justice Archive under contract with BJS. In addition to publishing the Directory, the Archive also disseminates BJS data collections. Researchers interested in obtaining a BJS data collection are encouraged to contact the Archive for more information (National Criminal Justice Archive, P.O. Box 1248, Ann Arbor, MI 48106; phone 313/763-5010). We hope you find the Directory useful.

INTRODUCTION

The Criminal Justice Archive and Information Network (CJAIN) has been in operation since 1977 at the Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research. Funded currently by the Bureau of Justice Statistics in the Department of Justice (Grant No. 82-BJ-CX-K001), it is designed to provide three basic services to analysts, policymakers, and researchers in the criminal justice fields: 1) development of computer-readable data resources for the quantitative study of crime and the criminal justice system through archiving and dissemination; 2) technical assistance in selecting appropriate data and the computational hardware and software resources to use them in an efficient and effective manner; and 3) training in the methods of social science data analysis appropriate to analysis of data.

During the past nine years the CJAIN staff has assembled a large collection of data relevant to its mission in the ICPSR archive. For a variety of reasons, it has never been the intention of the project to acquire and process all possible data of relevance to crime and the criminal justice system at the ICPSR. Limitations on the availability of resources would never have permitted such an ambitious undertaking. Some data are currently housed in other archives where access is open and available; acquisitions of such data would simply involve a duplication of effort. Furthermore, some data are archived at locations in which a specially-trained staff is available to provide advice, consultation, and special tabulations where considerations of protection of the confidentiality of individuals is an issue.

Much of the information about the availability of data from these other sources has not been available to researchers in an assembled form. The DIRECTORY of CRIMINAL JUSTICE DATA in the UNITED STATES is designed to serve as such a central resource for analysts, policymakers, and researchers in the criminal justice field. It is a guide to quantitative, computer-readable resources relevant to the study of crime and the criminal justice system, indicating their availability, general content, and where additional information can be obtained about the detailed characteristics of specific data collections. As is the case with any well-documented computer-readable data collection, complete information about the contents of a collection, the research design under which it was collected, and other relevant processing information can be found in its codebook. The reader will have to request such information from the institution from which the data are available. A list of all such sources is appended to the Directory.

The Directory is actually a living document of sorts in that it also exists in computer-readable form as a SPIRES subfile on The University of Michigan computing system (MTS), where it can be accessed remotely for computerized searches. This second published version of the Directory contains descriptions of 671 data collections which existed in the subfile as of February, 1986. Future printed versions of the Directory will be published as the size of the computer-readable database grows.

In this regard, the CJAIN staff would appreciate receiving information about the existence and availability of other computer-readable data relevant to the study of crime and the criminal justice system. This information will be added to the SPIRES database as it is received, and it will be published in subsequent versions of the Directory.

Any project of this magnitude must necessarily involve the contributions of several staff members. The principal investigator for the CJAIN project is Dr. Michael W. Traugott, Director of Resource Development for the ICPSR. Dr. Victoria Schneider has had direct supervisory responsibility for the staff working on the Directory project which has included Robert Adler, Phil Sinco, Brian Roddy, and Julio Borquez. Mr. Adler has recently taken on the responsibility for updating the SPIRES subfile which is the basis for this publication. The project Officer at the Bureau of Justice Statistics has been Dr. Pat Langan.

Information on remote access to the SPIRES subfile is included in the following section or can be obtained by writing to:

USING SPIRES TO SEARCH THE CJ DATA DATABASE

INTRODUCTION

CJAIN maintains an online version of the printed directory you are presently reading. The online directory, entitled CJ DATA, is a SPIRES subfile (otherwise known as a database) which resides on The University of Michigan's Amdahl mainframe computer. The database will be updated continuously to provide researchers with a current catalog of criminal justice data collections.

This section will briefly introduce users to SPIRES (Stanford Public Information Retrieval System) and the procedures for retrieving information through searches of the CJ DATA database. This discussion is not intended to be a complete description of the SPIRES system, but rather to enable the user to start to use the database quickly. SPIRES is a database management system which was originally developed by members of the Data Base Systems Group of the Stanford Center for Information Processing. SPIRES may be used to search, retrieve, and display records from the database in a simple and straightforward manner without extensive knowledge of a particular programming language. Use of SPIRES, which runs on the Michigan Terminal System (MTS), requires familiarity with some of MTS's technical conventions. SPIRES maintains online introductory materials to help the user learn about the system while running it. These can be examined with the TUTORIAL, HELP, and EXPLAIN commands that can be issued once the user is in SPIRES. By using telecommunication networks such as TELENET, TYMNET or AUTONET, the remote user may gain access to the CJ DATA database at the University of Michigan via the MERIT Computer Network. TELENET and the other networks provide access to the Michigan computer with a local telephone call and for a small surcharge to the regular computing charges.

ORGANIZATION OF INFORMATION IN SPIRES DATABASES

A SPIRES subfile or database is made up of a body of information organized into two kinds of records: "goal records" and "index records." A typical goal record in the CJ DATA database is a collection (study) description containing a number of elements. These elements include study title, principal investigator(s), study abstract, keywords, and more.

Index records can be used to find goal records containing particular types of information. Just as you look in a book's index for references to pages containing a certain word, SPIRES looks in a subfile's indexes to identify goal records containing certain words. A SPIRES database may contain one or more indexes. Study title, keyword, and principal investigator name are among the indexes in the CJ DATA database.

It is important to realize that the indexes found in CJ DATA are "word" indexes. This means it is the individual words in, say, a study's title that are indexed rather than the single string of characters that make up the entire title. With "word" indexes the search term (or value) should not be longer than one "word." If, for example, you wished to find studies whose title contained the phrase "juvenile delinquency" you would search the title index for "juvenile" and then narrow the result by searching for "delinquency".

SPIRES goal records are made up of units of information which are called elements. Some of the elements in a record may be PI name, study title, or keyword. Within each goal record is an element which uniquely identifies each goal record from all other records in the subfile. This element is called the goal record key.

CONVENTIONS

The following pages identify and describe some of the basic commands and features available in SPIRES and examples using these commands are provided. In the examples the commands to be typed in by the user are printed in lower case letters, while SPIRES and MTS responses and prompts are in upper case. Quotation marks around a term usually indicate that the term within the " " is to be typed in exactly as it appears. (Therefore, this document may occasionally take liberties with standard punctuation rules.) In most examples, square brackets ([]) are used to indicate that a command, operator, or type of term is optional. Also, when describing contents of either indexes or elements, the words "values" or "terms" will be used interchangeably. Both refer to the contents of the index or element.

The examples in this section were generated from the CJ DATA database. However, since the database continues to change as more records are added, the user may not be able to obtain the exact same result numbers when issuing the same commands used in the illustrations. This is to be expected and should not cause alarm.

GETTING STARTED - SIGNING ON TO MTS

Remote users of CJ DATA can take advantage of local telephone rates when using CJ DATA by routing their calls through TELENET or any of the other telecommunications networks. Before reaching the University of Michigan

Computer you will be automatically connected to a regional network named MERIT. You must inform MERIT that you wish to use the "UM" host computer.

CONNECTED

%MERIT:X.25 (AN77:TX0F:CRT)

WHICH HOST?um

The ICPSR staff has prepared two documents which deal with initiating access to the Michigan Terminal System. These are "Accounting and Services for the Remote User" and "MTS via TELENET for the Beginning User." Both are available upon request.

When you have reached the University of Michigan Computer, you are ready to sign on as though you are a local user. You must show that you have a valid account at the Computing Center and you must be able to identify yourself as an authorized user of the resources.

#$signon ccid [ccid should be replaced with your MTS account number]
#password     [enter your own password]
[MTS will return with a "#" prompt]

ENTERING AND EXITING SPIRES

After you sign on to the University of Michigan computer through MERIT, SPIRES may be initiated by typing the command "$run *spires" and hitting the <carriage return> key. MTS will acknowledge with "#EXECUTION BEGINS" and display a short message about SPIRES. Then you will be prompted with "->" and SPIRES will now be ready to receive additional commands from you. (Please note that MTS prompts with "#" while SPIRES prompts with "->".) A summary of the commands issued from the signon to MTS and invoking SPIRES is as follows:

#$signon ccid
#password
#$run *spires
#EXECUTION BEGINS

A SPIRES session can be terminated by typing "stop" or temporarily suspended by an MTS command. When an MTS command is issued, a record is kept of the point at which you left SPIRES. The command "$restart" resumes the SPIRES session at that point. However, once the "stop" command has been issued, SPIRES cannot be re-entered with "$restart".

When a SPIRES session is completed, typing "stop" returns you to MTS. The "#" signals that the computer is accepting MTS commands. For example:

```
->stop                [you terminate the SPIRES session]
#EXECUTION TERMINATED [MTS acknowledges]
#$.79, $.81T          [costs are displayed]
#signoff              [you are now in MTS command mode]
                     [in order to leave MTS, you must give the signoff command]

ON-LINE AIDS

There are a number of online aids available to users during a session. Whenever you are using SPIRES and you are not sure what to do next, you can issue the HELP command:

```
->help

SPIRES will make suggestions about what you can do based on the commands that you have issued prior to the HELP command.

Another online SPIRES aid is the EXPLAIN command. Whenever SPIRES produces a term or phrase you do not understand, you can ask SPIRES to clarify it by using the EXPLAIN command. Almost 2,000 explanations and descriptions of SPIRES commands, codes, subfiles and features are available.

->explain [term]

SPIRES maintains a large inventory of manuals available to users online and which can also be routed to the printer. By issuing the command "explain documentation" users can get information at their terminal about the manuals available and a description of the contents of each as well as instructions for obtaining copies.

The TUTORIAL command starts an online demonstration, including explanations and examples of SPIRES commands and responses. Simply giving the TUTORIAL command gets the user a tutorial on tutorials. The appropriate tutorial can then be selected as follows:

->tutorial [tutorial name]

SELECTING A SPIRES DATABASE

Before you can work with a database in SPIRES, you need to communicate to SPIRES which database you will need from the set of public subfiles that are available. The SHOW SUBFILES command will list all the databases available:

```
->show subfiles
```

In order to work with a given database, a SELECT command must be given to instruct SPIRES to load that subfile.

```
->select CJ DATA
-> [the returned "->" prompt shows that the CJ DATA subfile is ready to use.]
```

Please note that you must specify "CJ DATA" and not only "CJ" or "DATA" in order to properly identify this subfile to SPIRES.

THE "IN ACTIVE" PREFIX

SPIRES has an attractive option which allows a user to save all or any part of a session by placing the commands and search results in a file. By simply inserting the "in active" phrase before a command, the user can instruct SPIRES to place the information into a file that is referred to as the "active file." Later in the session the user can examine, save, manipulate or print the contents of the active file. To specify which file you wish SPIRES to consider the "active file" issue the following:

```
->use filename [where "filename" is the name of the MTS file to be used as the active file.]

By default, the SPIRES active file is set to -SPIRES, a temporary MTS file whose contents remain available to the user throughout a given session on MTS, unless destroyed or emptied before signoff. The file disappears when the MTS session is terminated.

To place SPIRES commands and/or search results into the active file use the following:

->in active [clear|continue] [command]

The "clear" option will cause the system to clear an active file before placing data into it. The "continue" option will cause the information to be appended to the end of the file. If neither "clear" nor "continue" have been indicated, SPIRES assumes that the previous information in the file is to be destroyed.

PRE-SEARCH COMMANDS

There are several commands which give you a better sense of the organization of material in the CJ DATA database. Among the most common pre-search commands are "show indexes," "show subfile size," "show elements" and "browse."

1. SHOW INDEXES

The records in a SPIRES subfile are indexed to enable users to search the file more easily and more economically. The command "show indexes" will show which indexes are available for searching and the acceptable abbreviations for each index. The indexes in CJ DATA are below:

```
->show indexes
GOAL RECORDS: COLLECTION
SIMPLE INDEX: AD, ADDED
SIMPLE INDEX: UP, UPDATED
SIMPLE INDEX: T, TITLWORD, TW
SIMPLE INDEX: K, KEY, KEYTERMS, KW
SIMPLE INDEX: P, PIAUTH, PINAME, PIWORD, PN, PW
SIMPLE INDEX: C, CLASS, CLASSWORD, CW,
TOPICCLASS, TOPICWORD

2. SHOW SUBFILE SIZE

SPIRES subfiles may range in size from thousands of goal records to only a few. The CJ DATA database is at present relatively small, but it will be continuously updated and expanded as more studies are added. You can determine the size of the subfile at any given time by issuing the command "show subfile size". For example:

```
->show subfile size
-THE SUBFILE HAS 671 RECORDS

3. SHOW ELEMENTS

For certain uses of a SPIRES subfile, such as displaying only parts of records or information from a given element, it is useful to know the data elements that comprise the subfile selected. The "show elements" command produces a listing of the data element names. A list of the elements in the CJ DATA database and a brief description of each is also found on page xxxii. The form of the command is:

```
->show elements

4. BROWSE

The "browse" command allows you to peruse the possible values for the indexes before initiating a search. After you type the command "browse" followed by any of the index terms, SPIRES responds by displaying a partial alphabetic list of the values of a given index, and then asks whether you want to see additional values for the index. You can continue the listing by responding "yes" or you can terminate it by typing "no".

It is also possible to further identify a specific area that you want browsed alphabetically. Modifying the "browse" command with "first" or "last" allows you to examine the first or the last values for an index. Two examples will illustrate:

->browse first titleword
ABC
ADMINISTRATION
ADOLESCENTS
ADULT
ADULTS
AFRICA
AGE
-MORE?n
```

->browse last piname
 WHITE
 WICE
 WILLARD
 WILLIAM
 WILLIAMS
 WOLFGANG
 WRIGHT
 YANKELOVICH
 YEAGER
 YORK
 -MORE?y
 UNREST
 URBAN
 VAN
 VERA VERBA
 WAGNER
 WALKER
 WAR
 WHITAKER
 -MORE?n

Occasionally you may have a value such as "societal" and may want to see what other values can be found around it. This is especially true if you want to see how many different variations may exist for a given term before constructing a search request. You can modify the "browse" command so that it searches for the term and the values that are found right before and after the term. For example:

->browse keyterms societal
 SELECTIVE SENTENCE
 SERVICE
 SERVICES SOCIAL SOCIOECONOMIC STATE
 STATISTICS
 TREATMENT
 TRIAL

SAMPLE CJ DATA SEARCHES

Given the nature of the CJ DATA database, many of the searches are likely to be conducted on the basis of words in the title, principal investigator names, or subject terms (i.e. keyterms) and as such, represent situations where indexes may be fruitfully employed to locate pertinent data collections. Below are two examples of how these search requests may be structured:

Example 1: Searching for a Specific Title

->in active find titleword family
  -SPIRES ACTIVE FILE SET TO: -SPIRES
  -RESULT: 2 COLLECTIONS
->in active type title
->type title
```

TITLE = YANK 76 FAM 8084: 1976 FAMILY STUDY;

TITLE = SASKATCHEWAN UNIFIED FAMILY COURT
EVALUATION;

In this example, the user has looked for "family" as a word in a study title, placed the results of the search into an active file, and then displayed the titles of the retrieved collections on the screen. Please note that first the information was typed in the active file with the "in active type" command and subsequently displayed to the terminal with the "type" command. Additionally, the user has requested that only the contents of the "title" element be displayed in the records that are typed. (See page xxxii for a full list of elements and aliases in the CJ DATA database).

Example 2: Searching for a Study by Principal Investigator's Name

->find piname williams
  -RESULT: 3 COLLECTIONS
->type

SYNTAX OF A SPIRES SEARCH COMMAND

To start searching you must issue several SPIRES commands: which subfile you want SPIRES to search, which index you want to use in the search, which values you want SPIRES to find in that index and how you want to display the records retrieved by the search. The mechanics of selecting a subfile and identifying some of its characteristics have been described above. You are now ready to go on to locating the information you want by constructing a search request.

Search requests can be made using the indexes that have been created for the subfile you selected or they can be made on the entire goal records. Both methods of searching will be described below. Searching using the index records will be presented in more detail since that is a simple and yet versatile technique and because it is more economical than sequential searching of the goal records.

When you issue a search request, SPIRES scans the index(es) you name for values that match the criteria you specify in the search request. SPIRES then reports the number of goal records meeting those criteria. These retrieved goal records are the "search result." Search requests can be simple or complex, cheap or expensive, depending on how carefully you construct them.

The SPIRES command "show search terms" displays those indexes that contain valid search terms for a particular subfile. One of the simplest commands for these searches is "find". As subsequent examples illustrate, the search command with "find" can be very simple, but it can also become quite complex. SPIRES provides the means to search for combinations of terms including searches that employ the Boolean operators "and", "or" and "and not". All SPIRES search commands have the basic structure:

"find"	"piname"	[string, prefix, suffix,] [with, having, word, =]	"smith"	[and, or, and not] command	index	relational operators	search verb	name		term	logical operators

SIMPLE SEARCH REQUESTS

Once you have specified a SPIRES subfile, in this case the CJ DATA database, and have identified the indexes in the subfile, you can search the database by giving the command verb "find" followed by a value for any of the indexes. In a simple search, "find" must be followed by an index (e.g., "titleword", "piname", or "keyterms") and a value for that index. The commands for three simple searches might appear as follows:

Run 1

->find t time
-RESULT: 40 COLLECTIONS
```

Run 2

->find p johnston
-RESULT: 9 COLLECTIONS
```

Run 3

->find k family
-RESULT: 26 COLLECTIONS

Users who search the CJ DATA database on a regular basis may want to search only those records that have been added to the database either before or after a certain date. This can be accomplished easily by beginning the search sequence with a search request that selects only those records that meet certain date criteria:

```
->find added after 1/1/86
-RESULT: 2 COLLECTIONS
```

```
->find added before 1/1/86
-RESULT: 669 COLLECTIONS

RELATIONAL OPERATORS

Relational operators express the relationship between one or more of the indexes and the specified value for the index(es) in the search statement. There are four kinds of relational operators: equality, inequality, range, and content.

1. Equality

The simplest of the relational operators is the equality (=) operator. It is used to search an index for a value that is equal to the one specified in the search request. In the examples of simple searches above, the equality operator is assumed to be part of the value for the search term. That is, the following three search requests are equivalent:

->find k family ->find k=family ->find k = family

Equality is the default relational operator.

2. Inequality

The inequality operators are: ">", "<", ">=", "<=". Example:

->find updated <= January 1, 1986

3. Range

Range operators are those words corresponding in meaning to the inequality symbols or signs. They include: 1) "after", and 2) "before". For example:

->find added before 1/1/86

4. Content

The last set of relational operators are referred to as content operators. They include: 1) "string", 2) "with", 3) "having", 4) "prefix", 5) "suffix", and 6) "word". The most frequently used content operator is the string operator. With it, you can designate a string of characters as the value for an index and SPIRES will retrieve records which contain the specified characters contiguously and in the order written. If you were to issue the command "find k string age", the system would retrieve all studies whose keywords contained the letters "age" occurring in that order and not separated by blanks.

->find k string age
-RESULT: 63 COLLECTIONS

The result would include studies with the keywords "images," "aged," "agencies," and "management."

LOGICAL OPERATORS

The logical operators "and", "or", and "and not" connect search expressions and thus broaden or narrow the field of a search. The "and" operator specifies that the search result must satisfy the criteria on both sides of the logical operator. The "and not" operator limits the search field by specifying that one criterion but not another must be met. "Or" specifies that either criterion must be satisfied. Unlike many programming languages which evaluate "and" before "or", SPIRES evaluates logical operators in search commands from left to right.

COMPOUND SEARCH REQUESTS

Compound searches can be accomplished in two ways. You may specify more than one value for an index, and/or more than one index in a single "find" command. Alternatively, you may perform an iterative search where you specify additional information after obtaining an initial search result.

1. The Compound "find" Command

It is possible to specify multiple search criteria in a single "find" command by joining the search expressions with logical operators. The syntax of the compound "find" command is:

```
->find [index value] [logical operator] [index value]...
```

The compound "find" allows you to specify more than one criterion for a single index or to specify criteria for more than one index:

```
->find k national and crime and attitude
```

This result would consist of collections that include "national," "crime," and "attitude" as keywords.

```
->find k crime and piname williams

The result would be collections with "crime" as a keyword but only those by principal investigators named Williams.

Note that when you are specifying one index with multiple values, as in the first example, you need only specify the index once and the system will assume that the additional values are for that index. When you are specifying more than one index, however, you must attach the appropriate index name. For example, the command:

```
->find k police and johnston

will not yield a valid result since the system will be trying to locate "johnston" as a keyword. The command is correctly entered as two separate search expressions "keyterms police" and "piname johnston" connected by the logical operator "and" and prefixed by "find" as follows:

->find k police and p johnston

It is important to avoid ambiguity in the compound search since the system may evaluate your request differently than you intended. For example, if you want to locate a collection whose principal investigator is Johnston and whose keyword list includes either "political" or "attitude" you might incorrectly type:

->find p johnston and k political or attitude
-RESULT: 194 COLLECTIONS

The system would evaluate your request from left to right and retrieve studies conducted by Johnston having the keyword "political," or any studies having the keyword "attitude." The left-to-right order for evaluating expressions has caused the problem. The appropriate entry would be:

->find k political or attitude and p johnston
-RESULT: 9 COLLECTIONS

The use of parentheses is another way to order the logical operations to be performed in a meaningful fashion. In the incorrect search request above, parentheses could have been used to obtain the appropriate result. The use of parentheses in the example below serves to clarify the focus of the search:

->find p clarke and (k family or attitude)
-RESULT: 1 COLLECTIONS

Here the system retrieved all studies conducted by Clarke which include either "family" or "attitude" as keywords.

You may also nest parentheses. SPIRES will evaluate expressions contained in parentheses algebraically beginning with the innermost set. For example:

->find k attitude or (fear and not (p johnston or jackson))
-RESULT: 248 COLLECTIONS

The system retrieved all studies which included the keyword "attitude" and all studies having the keyword "fear" which are not conducted by Johnston or Jackson.

2. Iterative Compound Searches

Compound searches may also be done iteratively. That is, after a "find" command has been issued and a result obtained, you may specify additional search criteria in successive commands. Iterative searching requires the presence of a search result and allows you to enlarge or contract that result. This procedure has the advantage of retaining the intermediate results of a series of searches. For example:

```
->find k attitude
  -RESULT: 186 COLLECTIONS
->and fear
  -RESULT: 50 COLLECTIONS
->and not economy
  -RESULT: 48 COLLECTIONS
->and p gallup
  -RESULT: 4 COLLECTIONS
->and k crime
  -RESULT: 3 COLLECTIONS
```

This search began with all studies pertaining to attitudes. It was then narrowed to include those studies which deal with fear but not the economy. The search was further restricted to studies by the Gallup organization, and then finally narrowed to studies which directly pertain to crime.

THE BACKUP COMMAND

When a search yields a zero result or for some reason the user would like to return to the result from a previous search, this may be accomplished by "backing up" to the previous result rather than executing the search sequence again. When you issue the "backup" command, SPIRES substitutes the current result of your search with the preceding result. The system will backup automatically when you have reduced the number of studies in a result to zero through iterative searching. Note that you cannot issue two consecutive "backup" commands, nor can you issue the "backup" command until at least two results (the current result and a preceding one) have been returned. Some examples will illustrate:

```
->find k murder
  -RESULT: 39 COLLECTIONS
->or prison
  -RESULT: 66 COLLECTIONS
->or rights
  -RESULT: 177 COLLECTIONS
->backup
  -RESULT: 66 COLLECTIONS
```

```
->backup
-Backup NOT POSSIBLE

->find t string sex
-RESULT: 3 COLLECTIONS

->backup
-Backup NOT POSSIBLE

SEARCHES WITH INCOMPLETE INFORMATION

It is possible to carry out a SPIRES search with less than complete information. A truncated value search allows you to obtain a valid search result without knowing, for example, the full name of the principal investigator or the specific keywords. For such a search, the "find" command verb is followed by the incomplete value of the index. Truncation is performed by placing a "#" sign at the end of the search term.

The advantage of truncated value searching is that it allows you to search with only an approximate value for a specific index. For example, "drugs" is a keyword in the SPIRES subfile CJ DATA database, whereas "drug" is not. The search command "find k drug" produces a result of 0 collections. However, when you give the search command "find k drug#" the system retrieves records whose keyword list includes "drugs," or "drugged," etc.

->find k drug
-ZERO RESULT

->find k drug#
-RESULT: 143 COLLECTIONS

SEARCHING UNINDEXED INFORMATION

Occasionally a user may want to see information that has not been indexed in the database. In CJ DATA, for example, the user might want to see the distributor, funding agency, or some similar element that has not been indexed. SPIRES has two ways in which the user can do such a search: "global for" and the "also" command. Since in these searches all information in each goal record is examined in sequence to determine if it meets the search criteria, this method of searching is more time consuming and expensive.

The "global for" commands are really an entire array of commands and warrant their own SPIRES manual. Given the complexity of these commands and the amount of information needed to successfully use this search method, we will not describe these commands here but only alert the user to their existence. Users who do wish to learn more about "global for" processing can consult the appropriate manuals for further information. Introductory information about "global for" can be found in the SPIRES Guide to Data Base Development primer. Experienced users may want to consult the "SPIRES Searching and Updating," the "Sequential Record Processing in SPIRES: Global For," and the "SPIRES File Definition" manuals.

The "also" command helps you to narrow an existing search result by using unindexed criteria. This command can only operate on an existing search result. What this means is that at least one "find" command using an indexed element must have been issued prior to the "also" or "also not" commands. Searches that are part of an earlier search result may be done iteratively, using the "also" and "also not" commands. Like the "and" command, "also" can only narrow the search. The "also" and "also not" commands enable you to specify values for unindexed elements using the equality and inequality operators, and content operators such as "string". Additionally, the "also" and "also not" command words must begin the command statement. They cannot be embedded in a line.

In the CJ DATA database, the collection's TITLE (TI) is an indexed element, while related PUBLICATIONS (PUB) is an unindexed element. If, for example, the object of a search is all studies containing the keyword "juvenile" which may have a publication with "criminal" as one of the components of the publication title, the procedure would be as follows:

->find t juvenile
  -RESULT: 14 COLLECTIONS
->also pub string criminal
  -RESULT: 9 COLLECTIONS
```

Note, however, that when an unindexed element is part of the search request, the name of the element must be used since there is no index term for that element. In the above example, "pub" is the name of the element for publications. In order to obtain a list of the elements found in a subfile, issue the command "show elements" described earlier. A list of CJ DATA elements is also found on page xxxii. You will see that, in the example above, the value for element "pub" ("criminal") is prefaced with the word "string". "String" tells SPIRES to search the publications element for the string "criminal". If "string" is not given in this instance, the user would never find "criminal" because SPIRES will be looking for a value in the publications element consisting of the single word, "criminal". That is, if the "string" operator is not included in the search request SPIRES will retrieve only those records which have a publications element whose entire string of characters matches the search term, character for character.

DISPLAYING THE RESULTS OF A SEARCH

When you have specified search criteria and the system has returned a result, you will generally want to examine the records retrieved. The "type" command allows the user to display the records that were retrieved as a result of any given search. The amount of information that is displayed can be controlled by the user. The user can let SPIRES display the entire record or can limit the information to just certain elements. You limit what is displayed by qualifying the "type" command verb with a list of the specific elements that you wish to examine. The element list which follows the "type" command ("ti" and "pi" in the example below) will restrict the display so that only the specified elements and not the full display will be printed.

```
->fin k juvenile and p johnston
  -RESULT: 2 COLLECTIONS
->type ti pi
```

TITLE = MONITORING THE FUTURE: A CONTINUING STUDY
OF THE LIFESTYLES AND VALUES OF YOUTH, 1976;
INVESTIGATOR = Bachman, J.G., L.D. Johnston, and P. O'Malley.;

TITLE = MONITORING THE FUTURE: A CONTINUING STUDY
OF THE LIFESTYLES AND VALUES OF YOUTH, 1980;
INVESTIGATOR = Bachman, J.G., L.D. Johnston, and P. O'Malley.;
```

You may continue to search the subfile iteratively after you have issued a "type" command. Also, you can save the typed display in your active file by prefixing "type" with "in active".

The syntax of the "type" command is:

"type"	"pi", "ti"	[skip = n]	[keep or pause]	[clean]
command verb	element list	number of records to skip before typing	mutually exclusive options	eliminates extra lines in display

OPTIONS WITH THE TYPE COMMAND

1. Skip

Occasionally the user may want to skip a number of records before displaying the remaining records of the search result. The "skip=n" option of the "type" command can be used to do this. The "skip=n" specifies that "n" records should be passed over before the display starts.

->type skip=50
```

The "skip" option is useful when you are interrupted in the process of viewing the results of a search and do not wish to display all of the records again, or at any other time you do not wish to view all of the records. In the following example:

```
->find k violence
-RESULT: 111 COLLECTIONS
->type skip=99
```

SPIRES will display only the last 12 records of the search result.

2. Pause

The "type" command's "pause" option instructs the system to stop after displaying each record until the <carriage return> key is struck. This is especially helpful with video terminals that lack a scroll-back feature.

When you employ the pause option, the list of elements to be typed in the display must precede the word "pause." That is, "pause" must be the last word in a command expression. Using the earlier example:

```
->find k violence
-RESULT: 111 COLLECTIONS
->type skip=99 pause

3. Keep

When "keep" is appended to the "type" command, the system will prompt you with "KEEP?" after the display of each record in a search result. A response of "yes" will cause SPIRES to retain the record in the current search result; "no" will drop the record from the search result. In this way, you can modify the results of a search as you examine each record.

```
->type skip=5 keep
```

Note that the "keep" and "pause" options may not appear in the same "type" command expression, since "keep" necessarily pauses between individual records.

4. Clean

When you display search results using the "type" command, the display will automatically contain a blank line between each record. If you are storing the search results in your active file using the "in active type" command, the records will be separated with a line of asterisks (*), and a semi-colon (;) will appear at the end of each record. Although these lines are helpful for visually separating records, they add unnecessary lines to a large display or an active file. "Clean" eliminates these extra lines.

The syntax of the "type" command requires that "clean" follow the command verb, element list, and any of the other options you wish to use.

```
-RESULT: 14 COLLECTIONS
->type ti pi skip=11 keep clean

SEQUENTIAL ORDERING OF SEARCH RESULTS

The typed results of a search request often appear to be randomly ordered. You may specify the order in which results are printed by the system by employing the "sequence" command. The sequential stacking of search results can be performed on indexed as well as unindexed elements. To order records of a search result sequentially you must first decide the element on which you want the results to be organized. Next you type "sequence" followed by the name of the organizing element. SPIRES will inform you that it has arranged the results in sequence by returning "STACK:" and will indicate the number of studies in the result.

->find k appeal
-RESULT: 5 COLLECTIONS
->sequence ti
-STACK: 5 COLLECTIONS
->type ti pi
```

If the user finds a difference in the result totals between the number of studies located and the number stacked, that is usually explained by the fact that some of the studies may not have values for the element used for sequencing. If each study has a value for the sequencing element, there is no change in the result totals between the studies located and those sequenced.

SHOW SEARCH

The "show search" command allows you to review the steps you have taken in the search process. This feature of SPIRES is helpful when you are using a video terminal which does not scroll back, or when you lose track of the criteria which you had specified in order to arrive at a particular result. The "show search" command, however, does not print out the results you generated in the course of the search. The "type" command will display these results.

-RESULT: 3 COLLECTIONS
->show search
  FIND K EMPLOYMENT
  AND URBAN AND DRUGS

ABBREVIATIONS IN SPIRES

SPIRES commands or search terms can usually be shortened using the first three letters of the command or another acceptable abbreviation. Terms with three or fewer letters when unabbreviated cannot be abbreviated, nor can specific values for indexes. For example, when searching for studies whose principal investigator is the Institute for Social Research, "ISR" is not understood by the system as an abbreviation. Some examples of common terms and their abbreviations:

```

bac = backup
exp = explain fin = find in act = in active sel = select sho = show
tut = tutorial typ = type

ROUTING SEARCH RESULTS TO THE MTS PRINTER

In addition to (or instead of) displaying a search result at the terminal using the "type" command, the user may want to route the search result to the MTS printer. This is nearly always the case with large search results wherein the user would be required to wait at the terminal for a display of, say, 100 records.

Keeping in mind that the name of the default SPIRES active file is -SPIRES, the following search will place all the result records in -SPIRES. -SPIRES can then be routed to the printer:

->find p smith and k juvenile or t crime
  -RESULT: 49 COLLECTIONS
->in active type
->stop
#list -spires print
PRINT ASSIGNED RECEIPT NUMBER 609669
PRINT RELEASED TO CNTR, 22 PAGES

Remote users of MTS can make arrangements with the University of Michigan Computing Center to have copies of printout mailed to them. They should inquire about this service when they request an account with the Center. A number of capabilities also exist whereby users can download information from the -SPIRES file to their local microcomputers.

MISCELLANEOUS DETAILS

When the FUNDING.AGENCY field lists multiple agencies for a particular data collection it may not be clear which of the grant numbers listed in the GRANT.NUMBER field correspond to which agency. To help resolve any confusion please keep in mind that each agency issues grant numbers that conform to a fairly distinctive pattern and that the grant numbers are entered in their field in the same order in which the funding agencies were entered in FUNDING.AGENCY. In addition, if one of the agencies provided more than one grant in support of the data collection, that agency's grant numbers are listed in ascending order. For example:

FUNDING.AGENCY = United States Department of Health and Human Services. National Institute of Mental Health./United States Department of Justice. National Institute of Justice.;
GRANT.NUMBER = MHZ7568, MHZ7593, and 76NIAX0006;

Also, please note that users cannot directly search the database for the keyword "ex-offender." In order to locate those studies to which "ex-offender" has been assigned, follow these steps:

- (1) Search the database for the keyword "offender":
->find k offender
- (2) Place the result in the active file:
->in active clear type
- (3) Edit the active file:
->edit
- (4) Scan the active file for "ex-offender" (note that ":" is the edit prompt):
:scan@all@anycase/ file #ex-offender#
- (5) Position yourself at the last line in which "ex-offender" was located:
:print [linenumber]
- (6) Scan backward in the file for the immediately previous REC01 number:
:scan@anycase/back #REC01 = #
- (7) Position yourself at the line in which the previous "ex-offender" was found:
:print [linenumber]
- (8) Again scan backward for the immediately previous REC01 number:
:scan@anycase/back #REC01 = #
- (9) Repeat steps (7) and (8) until you have identified the REC01 number for each record to which the keyword "ex-offender" has been assigned.

GLOSSARY OF SPIRES TERMS

The following is a list of some of the more commonly used SPIRES terms and commands. The commands are presented in capital letters.

Active File	A file that is available for the user to place results of searches and/or commands executed during a session (cf. IN ACTIVE).
BROWSE	Command used with index search term which gets a list of sample values from that index.
Element	The smallest data unit in SPIRES. In other systems, the equivalent of an element is the data field. Examples of elements are a date, a salary, or a person's name.
EXPLAIN	Command displays pertinent SPIRES documentation to define and describe a term.
Goal Record	Is the data record that can be located as a result of a SPIRES search operation.
IN ACTIVE	Command used to save the results of a SPIRES session in the active file (cf. Active File).
Index	Is a collection of index records created and maintained by SPIRES.
Index Record	Is a record built out of elements in a goal record. The purpose of an index record is to facilitate searching a SPIRES database by pointing to the appropriate goal records per the criteria specified in a search command.
Key	Is the element in a goal record whose value uniquely identifies that record from all other records in the collection.
Record	Consists of a series of data elements and their values. A record is a collection of all data elements relevant to an entity in a data collection.

SELECT	Command issued to tell SPIRES which subfile you want to us.
SHOW ELEMENTS	Displays a list of the elements in a subfile.
SHOW INDEXES	Command used to determine what indexes are available for searching in a given SPIRES subfile.
STOP	Command issued when you want to terminate a SPIRES session and return to MTS.
Subfile	Is a set of goal records along with the indexes for the goal records.
TYPE	Command to display the results of a search operation on an index.

HOW TO USE THIS DIRECTORY

This Directory is intended to make available by conventional means the information contained in the CJ DATA database. It is organized into five sections.

The first section on page xxxvii contains a list of the principal investigators (a total of 225) cited in the Directory. They are arranged in alphabetical order. Scanning the list, the reader can readily locate a specific investigator.

The second section, DATA COLLECTION DESCRIPTIONS, is a listing of all 671 records or data collections as they presently appear in the CJ DATA database. If one were to use SPIRES to retrieve all 671 records, the the result would be identical to the one appearing on pages 1-270, with the exception that the records have been put into order by topical category, and alphabetically by principal investigator within each topic.

Section three, located on page 271, is a list of all keywords used to describe the data collections in the Directory. There are a total of 115 keywords. If the reader does not have a particular investigator in mind but wishes to locate all the data collections available in the Directory on a particular topic, this may be accomplished by examining the list of keywords. Once one or more keywords have been selected as descriptive or related to the topic in question, the reader should turn to the KEYWORD INDEX (section four) beginning on page 273.

Section four contains all the keywords used to describe the data collections in the Directory. They are arranged in alphabetical order. The reader should locate the keyword he or she has chosen. Listed below the keyword are the titles of the data collections which have been described by the keyword and the page on which the description of the data collection appears.

Section five, the final section located on page 433, is simply a summary of all the sources distributing data collections listed in the Directory. There are a fairly small number of sources as many distributors offer a sizeable number of data collections.

PRINCIPAL INVESTIGATORS CITED IN THE DIRECTORY

The following is a list in alphabetical order of the Principal Investigators cited in the DIRECTORY of CRIMINAL JUSTICE DATA COLLECTIONS. The reader may wish to utilize this section to become familiar with the many contributors of the data collections contained in the Directory, or, if desired, may scan the list to locate a particular investigator. Descriptions of all collections in the Directory follow this section, and are arranged in ascending order by topical category, and alphabetically by Principal Investigator within the topic. We wish to take this opportunity to offer our sincere appreciation to the many contributors without whose effort this Directory would not have been possible.

DATA COLLECTION DESCRIPTIONS

I. COMMUNITY STUDIES

TITLE = RACIAL ATTITUDES IN FIFTEEN AMERICAN CITIES, 1968

INVESTIGATOR = Campbell, A., and H. Schuman.

SUMMARY = This study focuses on attitudes and perceptions related to urban problems and race relations of the black and white populations in Baltimore, Boston, Brooklyn, Chicago, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit, Gary, Milwaukee, Newark, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, St. Louis, San Francisco, and Washington, D.C. Data include variables on respondents' satisfaction with community services, financial expectations, and feelings about the effectiveness of government in solving urban problems. Additional questions concern the respondents' interracial relationships, attitudes toward integration, perceptions of discrimination in hiring, promotion, and housing, participation in civil rights organizations and violent and nonviolent protests, and attitudes toward various civil rights leaders. There are two files, Black and White, with 2809 respondents in the Black and 2584 in the White file.

TOPIC = I. Community Studies

DISTRIBUTOR = ICPSR, P.O. Box 1248, Ann Arbor, MI 48106

ARCHIVE ID = ICPSR3500

FUNDING AGENCY = National Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders.

TITLE = REACTIONS TO CRIME PROJECT, 1977 [CHICAGO, PHILADELPHIA, SAN FRANCISCO]: SURVEY ON FEAR OF CRIME AND CITIZEN BEHAVIOR

INVESTIGATOR = Center for Urban Affairs and Policy Research.

SUMMARY = This survey was conducted by the Center for Urban Affairs at Northwestern University. Its purpose was to gather information for two investigations which analyzed the impact of crime on the lives of city dwellers. These were the Reactions to Crime (RTC) Project which was supported by the United States Department of Justice's National Institute of Justice as part of its Research Agreements Program, and the Rape Project which was supported by the National Center for the Prevention and Control of Rape, a sub-division of the National Institute of Mental Health. Both projects were concerned with individual behavior and collective reactions to crime. The Rape Project was specifically concerned with sexual assault and its consequences for the lives of women. The survey was carried out by the Market Opinion Research Corporation between October and December, 1977, using a telephone interview scheme. Questionnaire preparation and initial pretesting, along with all sampling and telephone number preparation, was conducted at Northwestern. The three cities selected for study were Chicago, Philadelphia, and San Francisco. A total of ten neighborhoods were chosen from these cities along a number of dimensions—ethnicity, class, crime, and levels of organizational activity. In addition, a small city-wide sample was drawn from each city. General topics covered include how individuals band together to deal with crime problems, individual responses to crime such as property marking or the installation of locks and bars, and the impact of fear of crime on day-to-day behavior, for example, shopping and recreational patterns. Respondents were asked several questions which called for self-reports of behavior, these include questions about events and conditions in their home areas, their relationship to their neighbors, who they know and visit around their homes, and what they watch on TV and read in the newspapers. Also included were a number of questions measuring respondents' perceptions of the extent of crime in their communities, whether they knew someone who had been a victim, and what they had done to reduce their own chances of being victimized. Data are available in both OSIRIS and card-image formats, with machine-readable documentation. There are approximately 200 variables for each of the 5,121 cases.

INVESTIGATOR = Fowler, F.J.

SUMMARY = The Hartford data were gathered as part of the planning and evaluation of a crime opportunity-reduction program implemented in a residential neighborhood in Hartford. The program's target crimes were residential burglary and street robbery/purse-snatching. Both a 1973 survey of the specified target area and a 1975 survey of randomly selected households are included. Both surveys contain items on victimization: fear and perceived risk of being victim of the target crime, perceptions of neighbors, household characteristics, and respondent characteristics. There are 891 cases and approximately 300 variables in the 1973 survey. The 1975 survey has 556 cases and approximately 175 variables.

INVESTIGATOR = Hewitt, John.

SUMMARY = Muncie, Indiana which has more commonly been referred to as 'Middletown' in social science studies, is the location for this data collection. The purpose of this study was to examine crime over a period of 43 years. The data were collected from official records of the criminal courts in Muncie and Delaware County, Indiana. The unit of analysis is the criminal act charged. All charges were counted and appropriately categorized. The following rules were observed for cases involving multiple charges or multiple counts of single charges. First, each charge was counted separately when multiple charges were filed. Second, when a defendant was charged with multiple counts of a single charge, each count was considered to be a separate act and so recorded. Variables in this dataset include year of criminal act charge, first, second, and third offenses charged, amount of bail, length of prison term, sex, age, and race of the alleged defendant. There are six files in the data collection and the logical record length of each file is 80 characters. Two of the files are SPSS control cards that are associated with two of the data files. One file has a printed codebook, and the final file contains SPSS control cards followed by data.

TITLE = INTERACTION BETWEEN NEIGHBORHOOD CHANGE AND CRIMINAL ACTIVITY, 1979

INVESTIGATOR = Kobrin, Solomon, and Leo A. Schuerman.

SUMMARY = This study was conducted in 1979 at the Social Science Research Institute, University of Southern California with a grant from the National Institute of Justice. This study explores the relationship between neighborhood change and criminal activity between the years 1950 and 1976. The data were aggregated by unique and consistently defined spatial areas, referred to as dummy tracts or neighborhoods, within Los Angeles County. By combining United States Census data and administrative data from several state, county, and local agencies, the researchers were able to develop measures which tapped the changing structural and compositional aspects of each neighborhood and its interaction with the patterns of juvenile criminal activity. The Interaction Between Neighborhood Change and Criminal Activity data are available from ICPSR in two formats: a card image file and an OSIRIS dataset. The OSIRIS dataset consists of a single logical record for each case. There are 995 variables for each of 1,142 cases in the file.

TITLE = QUALITY OF LIFE IN THE DETROIT METROPOLITAN AREA, 1975

INVESTIGATOR = Rodgers, Willard L., Robert W. Marans, et al.

SUMMARY = A sample of the residents of the Detroit metropolitan area evaluated their urban environment for this study of the quality of life. The study was begun in October 1974 and was completed in February 1975. This study was a part of an extensive research project the purpose of which was to produce theoretically important and operationally useful research on the urban environment. The specific purpose of the Detroit area study was to develop valid indicators of the subjective quality of urban life and to examine the residents' evaluations of their environment. Respondents answered questions about the public transportation system, the schools, recreational opportunities, public safety, and housing, neighborhood, and population characteristics. The respondents were either the head, or the spouse of the head, of household and were part of a stratified sample of Detroit area residents. The sample provided adequate representation of both Detroit itself and of the surrounding area, and of racial and economic subgroups. The sample was taken from the geographic area defined as the 1971 Detroit SMSA, which includes Wayne, Oakland, and Macomb counties. There were 1,194 respondents who answered questions in face-to-face interviews lasting approximately 75 minutes each. The data were made available by the principal investigators and the Survey Research Center, the Institute for Social Research, The University of Michigan. There are 1,477 variables.

TITLE = DRINKING AND DRIVING: A SURVEY OF LICENSED DRIVERS IN THE UNITED STATES, 1983

INVESTIGATOR = Snortum, John.

SUMMARY = This study focuses on the drinking and driving habits of Americans. The universe for the study was adults 16 years of age and older who possessed a valid driver's license. The first 1000 cases were drawn using a national probability sample of the 48 contiguous states, while the final 400 cases were selected from oversampling in 20 states. Conditions were imposed to yield approximately 50 percent males and 50 percent females resulting in 1401 cases in all. Respondents were interviewed over the telephone using random digit dialing. The questionnaire contains 51 questions. Respondents are asked about their frequency of consumption of alcoholic beverages, where they most often drink and their mode of transportation to and from this location, their driving and drinking experiences, and their age, sex, educational attainment, and socioeconomic status. The study contains one file that has a logical record length of 80 characters for each of the 1401 cases.

TITLE = REACTIONS TO CRIME IN ATLANTA AND CHICAGO: A POLICY-ORIENTED REANALYSIS, 1979-1980

INVESTIGATOR = Spelman, William.

SUMMARY = Two previously released data collections from ICPSR are combined in this dataset. The first is Characteristics of High and Low Crime Neighborhoods in Atlanta, 1980 by Stephanie Greenberg (ICPSR 7951). Information was obtained from 523 residents interviewed in six selected neighborhoods in Atlanta, Georgia. A research team from the Research Triangle Institute sampled and surveyed the residents. The second dataset is Crime Factors and Neighborhood Decline in Chicago, 1979 by Richard Taub of the National Opinion Research Center (ICPSR 7952). This collection contains 3,310 interviews of Chicago residents in eight selected neighborhoods. The Spelman data contain 156 variables including residents' demographics and socioeconomic status, personal crime rates, property crime rates, neighborhood crime rates, and neighborhood characteristics. There are three pieces of information for each variable: variable reference numbers for both the Atlanta and Chicago datasets, the complete wording of the questions put to respondents of each survey, and the exact wording of the coding schemes adopted by the researcher. The combined dataset contains 3,833 cases with three logical records per case. The logical record length of the files is 133 characters.

SUMMARY = In this study 3341 respondents were queried about the types of incidents which occurred on their campuses. These included incidents in which the National Guard was called, off-campus police were used, one or more protesters were arrested, temporary restraining orders or injunctions were obtained, teach-ins, rallies or discussion groups took the place of regular academic activities, and black demands or racism were issues. II. CORRECTIONS

TITLE = SURVEY OF AMERICAN PRISONS AND JAILS, 1979

INVESTIGATOR = ABT Associates.

SUMMARY = The survey consists of two parts, a survey of state and federal adult correctional systems and a survey of community based pre-release facilities. The survey attempted to more precisely assess institutional conditions in state and federal prisons and halfway houses. Questionnaires were mailed to 559 federal and state prisons and 402 community based pre-release facilities. The response rate was 100%. Variables include inmate counts by sex and security class, age of facility and rated capacity, spatial density, composition of inmate population by race-age-offense type, inmate labor and earnings, and race-age-sex characteristics of prison staff. The federal and state prison survey contains 292 variables for 559 cases. The community based pre-release facility survey contains 207 variables for 402 cases.

TITLE = PROBATION STATISTICS (FORMS 3, 3A, AND 9)

INVESTIGATOR = Administrative Office of the United States Courts. Statistical Analysis and Reports Division.

SUMMARY = The probation statistical reporting program covers all persons placed under the supervision of Federal probation officers. This includes those placed on probation by United States district judges and by United States magistrates. It also includes a growing group of persons who are referred to the probation office for supervision by United States attorney. These pretrial diversion cases involve young persons who have had no prior contact with law enforcement or the courts. Also included in the program are those persons released by the United States Parole Commission from federal institutions for parole or mandatory release supervision by probation officers, as well as persons placed on special parole under provisions of the Drug Abuse and Prevention Act of 1970. Reports on persons received for supervision are provided by each probation office to the Statistical Analysis and Reports division. The types of data recorded on these reports include the district and office number, the docket or institution register number, the type of case, the date received from supervision, and demographic data (sex, race, age, marital status and education). Also, prior criminal record and type of pre-sentence investigation are reported. When supervision ends, the probation officer reports the conditions under which the person was removed from supervision. If a violation of the rules or conditions of probation or parole should be the reason for the removal, the type of violation is recorded. In the event a new crime has been committed, any new sentences or sanctions connected with these violations are shown on the reports. If there is no violation or the person under supervision is removed from supervision before his term is completed because of satisfactory behavior, this is also documented.

Data were collected from several sources: input-intake forms used by the State of Maryland, probation officers' case record files, Maryland state police rap sheets, FBI sources, and from interviews with Maryland probationers. Non-violent, less serious offenders who normally received probation sentences of 12 months or less were offered randomly selected assignments to one of three treatment methods over a five-month period. Baseline data for probationers in each of the three samples were drawn from an intake form which is routinely completed for cases. An interim assessment of recidivism was made at the midpoint of the intervention for each probationer using information drawn from police records. Probationers were interviewed at a point six months and twelve months after probation ended. This study was conducted by the Research Triangle Institute under a grant provided by the National Institute of Justice. The study contains eight files. The logical record lengths of the first four files are 147, 87, 24, 17 characters while the remaining four files have lengths of 80 characters each.

TITLE = EFFECTS OF DETERMINANT SENTENCING ON INSTITUTIONAL CLIMATE AND PRISON ADMINISTRATION: CONNECTICUT, MINNESOTA, ILLINOIS, 1981-1983

INVESTIGATOR = Goodstein, Lynne., John H. Kramer, John R. Hepburn, and Doris L. MacKenzie.

SUMMARY = The effects of determinant sentencing on prison climate and administration are examined in this data collection. Three data collection periods are included in the dataset, and there are nine files. The first three files contain data taken from a total random sample of offenders housed at five prisons. File one was taken from the first data collection period, file two from the second, and file three from the third data collection period. The fourth file is an additional sample from the state of Connecticut of those inmates serving determinate sentences, collected during the third period of data collection. The fifth file is indeterminate sample data from data collection periods one and two while the sixth file is intermediate panel sample data taken from collection period three. The seventh and eighth files are determinate panel sample data from collection periods one and two, respectively. The ninth and final file is determinate panel sample data from collection period three. There were six questionnaires used in collecting these data. The following issues are covered in the questionnaires: inmates' feelings about their arrest, court case, and conviction, feelings about the law, physical problems developed during prison term, how time is spent in prison, family contacts outside prison, relationships with other prisoners and staff (guards), involvement in prison programs, and criminal history. Each file has 550 records. The logical record length of each file is 80.

TITLE = EARLY IDENTIFICATION OF THE CHRONIC OFFENDER, [1978-1980: CALIFORNIA]

INVESTIGATOR = Haapenan, Rudy, and Carl F. Jesness.

SUMMARY = The patterns of adult criminal behavior are examined in this data collection. Data covering the adult years of peak criminal activity (from approximately 18 to 26 years of age) were obtained on three samples of delinquent youths who had been incarcerated in California Youth Authority institutions during the decade of the 1960s. Data were obtained from three sources: official arrest records of the California Bureau of Criminal Investigation and Identification (CII), supplementary data from the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and the California Bureau of Vital Statistics. Follow-up data were collected between 1978 and 1980. The unit of analysis in this dataset is the individual offender and the numbers of cases in the three samples are 1715, 982, and 210. There are two files per sample. The first is a background data file containing information obtained while the subjects were housed in Youth Authority institutions, and the second is a follow-up history offense file containing data from arrest records. Each individual is identified by a unique ID number, which is the same in the background and offense history files. Each case has 56 arrest variables. The samples have differing numbers of variables for the background information.

TITLE = COST EFFECTIVENESS OF MISDEMEANANT PROBATION IN HAMILTON COUNTY, OHIO, 1981-1982INVESTIGATOR = Hartigan, Richard.

SUMMARY = This research was designed to determine whether or not the supervision of misdemeanor probationers was cost-effective for increasing the level of successful probation completions in Hamilton County, Ohio. The primary objective was to examine the relationships among these factors: supervision costs, the collection of court costs, fines, and restitution, types of supervision, risk assessment and probationer conduct for the population of probationers. Probationers were initially classified according to risk assessment and then randomly assigned to a supervision category. Probationer's risk potential was a numerical score derived from demographic background variables, prior record, and history of substance use. The DSCP (Degree of Successful Completion of Probation) was developed specifically to measure probationer conduct and to compare trends and relationships. Data were collected on 2756 misdemeanor probation experiences between January 1, 1981 and December 31, 1982. The variables examined in the study include: risk assessment at intake, supervision level assigned, number of times the probationer was assigned to probation, start and planned termination dates, date of last status change, status at termination, degree of successful completion of probation achieved, costs incurred in administering probation, and amounts collected from each probationer for court costs, restitution and fines. The data are contained in three files. Although data were collected on 7072 misdemeanor probation experiences, there are only 2756 probationers included in the study. The remaining 4316 cases were excluded due to failure of the probationer to show up for screening or for other reasons that did not meet the research criteria. For these 2756 probationers, there are 6618 records of actual misdemeanor experiences in the data file. Each record represents one experience, so it is possible for an individual probationer to have multiple records. There are 16 variables per case. All three files have logical record lengths of 80 characters.

TITLE = OPERATION HARDCORE [CRIME] EVALUATION: LOS ANGELES, 1976-1980

INVESTIGATOR = Los Angeles District Attorney's Office.

SUMMARY = The Operation Hardcore [Crime] Evaluation was a special prosecutorial program which was developed and implemented by the Los Angeles District Attorney's Office to examine the effectiveness of specialized prosecutorial activities in dealing with the local problem of gang violence. The aims of the program were: to describe the problems of gang violence in Los Angeles and the ways that incidents of gang violence have been handled by the L.A. criminal justice system, to document the activities of the special gang prosecution unit (Operation Hardcore) and the criminal justice handling of the cases prosecuted by that unit, and to evaluate the extent to which Operation Hardcore has affected criminal justice handling of gang violence. The study is in 6 parts: the incident file (14 variables, 526 cases), case file (16 variables, 223 cases), victim file (14 variables, 659 cases), suspect file (17 variables, 1,016 cases), defendant file (17 variables, 319 cases), and charge file (19 variables, 722 cases).

TITLE = NATIONAL SUPPORTED WORK EVALUATION STUDY, 1975-1979: PUBLIC USE FILES

INVESTIGATOR = Manpower Demonstration Research Corporation.

SUMMARY = The National Supported Work Demonstration Program targeted four groups of persons with longstanding employment problems: ex-offenders, former drug addicts, female welfare recipients, and school dropouts. From 1975-1979, the program provided from 12 to 18 months of employment to a total of 10,000 individuals at 15 locations. Respondents were given pre- and post- interviews in which questions were asked about demographic characteristics, employment history, job search, mobility, household income, housing, and the respondents' drug use. Welfare recipients were asked about children in school and welfare participation. The collection contains two files. The employment and earnings file contains data from the interviews except the drug and crime sections. The deviant behavior file contains all the interviews plus the drug and crime information. Each file contains data for 6,500 persons for up to five interviews.

The data are arranged by year and type of movement. Each record contains information on certain characteristics of the person involved, such as age at admission, race, marital status, education, military history, occupation, number of prior arrests, escape record, date and type of releases, and parole violations. TITLE = SURVEY OF CALIFORNIA PRISON INMATES, 1976

INVESTIGATOR = Peterson, M.A., S. Polich, and J.M. Chaiken.
SUMMARY = This survey uses the self-report technique with anonymous, self-administered questionnaires distributed to groups of 10-20 inmates at a time. The survey obtained detailed information about the crimes committed by prisoners prior to their incarceration. Variables examine the characteristics of repeatedly arrested or convicted offenders (recidivists) as well as offenders reporting the greatest number of serious crimes (habitual criminals). The variables include crimes committed leading to incarceration, rates of criminal activity, and social-psychological scales for analyzing motivations to commit crimes. The collection contains three files: the survey data, the documentation provided by the Rand Corporation, and frequency counts for the variables in the study.

INVESTIGATOR = Peterson, Mark, Jan Chaiken, and Patricia Ebener.

SUMMARY = This survey was funded by the National Institute of Justice and was conducted as part of the Rand Corporation's research program on career criminals. Rand's Second Inmate Survey was administered in late 1978 and early 1979 to convicted male inmates at 12 prisons and 14 county jails in California, Michigan and Texas. The purpose of the study was to provide detailed information about the criminal behavior of offenders and their associated characteristics. Emphasis was placed on investigating other major areas of interest such as the quality of prisoner self-reports, varieties of criminal behavior, selective incapacitation, and prison treatment programs. There are 24 files in this data collection. These include 11 data files, a SAS dictionary, a study codebook, and frequency counts for each of the 11 data files. The number of records in the files ranges from 204 to 21,900, and the number of variables from 62 to 455. The files and their accompanying documentation are distributed by ICPSR in the form received from the principal investigators.

TITLE = EVALUATION OF INTENSIVE PROBATION IN MILWAUKEE, 1980-1981

INVESTIGATOR = Romm, Joseph.

SUMMARY = The purpose of this study was to evaluate the results and impact of a two-year experiment in innovative probation practices in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. After being classified according to the Wisconsin risk and needs assessment scale, individuals who had been sentenced to probation between January 2, 1980 and June 30, 1981 and had reported to the probation department for intake were randomly assigned to one of eight experimental and control groups. The experiment was limited to adult residents of Milwaukee County who were not already on probation, were not judged to be severe psychotic or severe sex-deviant cases, and were not assigned to jail work-release sentences of more than ten days followed by probation (Huber cases). There are three files in this data collection: the Reassessment file, the Admissions/Terminations file, and the Chronological file. Each case in the Reassessment and Admissions/Terminations files represents data on an individual probationer. There are 84 variables for 1343 cases in the Reassessment file and 218 variables for 1922 cases in the Admissions/Terminations file, both files have logical record lengths of 100 characters. Of the 1922 cases for which admissions data were collected (about 133 variables), 397 cases also have termination data available (an additional 85 variables). Cases in the Chronological file are records of probation agent contacts with probationers over the course of the study. There are 17 variables for 47,169 cases (contacts) in this file which includes information on 1781 probationers. As many as 270 contacts with a single probationer are recorded. This file has a logical record length of 80.

TITLE = IMPROVING CORRECTIONAL CLASSIFICATION, NEW YORK, 1981-1983

INVESTIGATOR = Wright, Kevin.

SUMMARY = There were three specific goals of this research. The first was to evaluate three procedures currently available for the classification of correctional inmates: the Risk Analysis method, Megargee's MMPI Typology, and Toch's Prison Preference Inventory. Second, the research devised and tested a postdictive model of adjustment to prison life. Third, a new classification scheme was developed for predicting inmate adjustment to prison life that considers individual and organizational (contextual) level factors and various interactions between the two. These data were collected from a sample of 942 volunteer inmates from ten New York state correctional facilities, five of which were maximum security and five of which were medium security facilities. Only one-half of the original 942 inmates completed the MMPI. Background and questionnaire data were collected during the summer and fall of 1983. Outcome data on each inmate infraction were collected for a three-year period prior to that time. Each case in the first file represents survey response data from an individual inmate. There are 172 variables for 882 cases in this file. Of the 172 variables, 56 are from the Prison Preference Questionnaire (PPQ), 86 are from the Prison Environment Inventory (PEI), and the remaining 30 are from the Prison Adjustment Questionnaire (PAQ). Cases in the second file are records of medical contacts and diagnoses of inmates' illnesses. There are five variables for the 12,502 cases. The third file contains 35 variables for 529 cases, cases are personality assessment information and scores for each individual offender. Data in the fourth file consist of 54 individual-based variables covering inmates' background characteristics. The fifth file contains records of offenses and disciplinary action by individual offender, there are 32 variables. The client number is unique and consistent across all data files. The first file has a logical record length of 80, the second, 264, the third, 968, the fourth, 264, and the fifth, 80.

INVESTIGATOR = Vera Institute of Justice.

SUMMARY = CEP was designed to divert accused offenders from routine court procedures of criminal prosecution, sentencing, and possible incarceration, and to place them into jobs, training, or vocationally-oriented counseling services. Eligible defendants must agree to attend mandatory counseling sessions, devise and execute an individual plan for securing training and employment, and avoid arrest and conviction during their participation. Charges are dismissed by the court if, at the end of the six-month period, CEP counselors determine that the defendant has participated successfully. This study compares a control group of non-CEP offenders with an experimental group of CEP participants. Variables include age, sex, race and charges against the defendant, previous training and work experience, satisfaction with CEP services, attendance at counseling sessions, type of employment found, job attendance, and subsequent arrests and convictions for 666 subjects.

INVESTIGATOR = Yankelovich, Skelly, White.

SUMMARY = This survey focuses on issues of caseload management rather than on issues of policy-making. Federal and state judges in five districts (Milwaukee/Eastern Wisconsin, South Carolina, Philadelphia/Eastern Pennsylvania, Albuquerque/New Mexico, and Los Angeles/California) were questioned about the amount of time spent on certain types of cases, their techniques for reducing or more expeditiously handling heavy caseloads, and their suggestions for extra-judicial dispute settlement processes that could serve as alternatives to courts. The 250 variables for each of the 104 respondents include legal education and experience, types of cases heard in the previous year, percent time spent on particular types of cases, characteristics of cases requiring excessive time, and techniques for caseload management.

TITLE = FELONY PROSECUTION AND SENTENCING IN NORTH CAROLINA, 1981-1982INVESTIGATOR = Clarke, Stevens.

SUMMARY = This research was designed to assess the impact of a determinant sentencing law, the Fair Sentencing Act, which became effective July 1, 1981 in North Carolina. Statewide data from twelve counties were collected on felony prosecution and sentencing from police departments, arrest reports, police investigation reports, and District and Superior Court files during a three-month period in 1979 and again in 1981. The twelve counties reflect a purposive sample of North Carolina counties and were selected on the basis of region, urbanization, and workload of the court. Variables in the dataset include information from official court records on witness testimony and quality of evidence, information from prison staff and probation/parole officers, and social, demographic, and criminal history data for defendants. In this dataset it is possible to trace defendants through the criminal justice system from arrest to disposition. The data include information on the defendant's entry point in the system, charge and charge reduction information, arraignment status, and mode and type of disposition. There are four files in all, two data files and two containing SAS control cards. Each case in the 1979 and the 1981 data files represents data on an individual defendant. There are 279 variables for 1378 cases in the 1979 data file and 322 variables for 1280 cases in the 1981 data file. Both data files have logical record lengths of 80 characters.

SUMMARY = Data for this study concerning felony court sentencing practices were collected from 18 jurisdictions in 15 states. The jurisdictions consisted of cities and counties with an average population of 886,000 persons, making them representative of urban and densely populated suburban areas. Among jurisdictions, the sentencing schemes available to the judiciary varied, both determinate and indeterminate sentencing practices are represented in the sample. The variables include information about the criminal charges, nature of convictions, sentences imposed, terms and location of prison sentences, and the age of persons sentenced. The data are arranged by jurisdiction into 18 files, each consisting of 20 variables with logical record lengths of 80 characters. The number of records per file varies from 146 to 1384 with an average of 830 records.

SUMMARY = This data collection includes information on robberies and burglaries in two cities, Jacksonville, Florida and San Diego, California. The unit of analysis is defendants in felony cases. Information on each defendant includes demographics, socioeconomic status, criminal history, weapon usage, relationship to victim, trial procedures, and disposition. There are five files in the data set: Jacksonville robberies, (N=200), San Diego robberies, (N=200), San Diego burglaries, (N=219), Jacksonville burglaries 1, (N=200), and Jacksonville burglaries 2, (N=200). The Jacksonville burglaries are divided into two separate files which, after merging, form the complete data set. The logical record length of each file varies.

THE PHILADELPHIA EXPERIMENT, 1981-1982

INVESTIGATOR = Goldkamp, John S., and Michael R. Gottfredson.

SUMMARY = The purpose of this study, sponsored by the National Institute of Justice and the National Institute of Corrections, was to test the utility of a first version of bail guidelines. A sample of judges, based upon a stratified quota sampling design, was selected from the Philadelphia Municipal Court. Eight judges were randomly selected to use guidelines or be 'experimental judges,' and eight were randomly selected to be nonguidelines or 'control judges.' Data were taken from defendants' files and include number of suspects involved, number of different offenses charged, most serious injury experienced by the victim(s), preliminary arraignment disposition, amount of bail, socioeconomic status and demographics of the defendant, prior criminal history, and reason for granting or denying bail. There are two files in this data collection. The first file is an SPSS control card file. The second file contains data for 1,920 cases (each case has 10 records of data). Both files have a logical record length of 80 characters.

TITLE = PROSECUTOR'S MANAGEMENT INFORMATION SYSTEM (PROMIS), RHODE ISLAND, 1979

INVESTIGATOR = Institute for Law and Social Research, Inc.

SUMMARY = The Prosecutor's Management Information System (PROMIS) is a computer-based information system for public prosecution agencies. PROMIS was initially developed with funds from the United States Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS) to cope with problems of a large, urban prosecution agency where mass production operations have superseded the traditional practice of a single attorney preparing and prosecuting a given case from inception to final disposition. The combination of massive volumes of cases and assembly-line fragmentation of responsibility and control has created a situation where one case is indistinguishable from another and where the effects of problems at various points or stages in the assembly line on ultimate case disposition go undetected and uncorrected. One unique feature of PROMIS which addresses these problems is the automated evaluation of cases. Through the application of a uniform set of criteria, PROMIS assigns two numerical ratings to each case: one signifying the gravity of the crimes through the measurement of the amount of harm done to society, and the other signifying the gravity of the prior record of the accused. These ratings make it possible to select the more important cases for intensive, pre-trial preparation and to assure even-handed treatment of cases with similar degrees of gravity. A complementary feature of PROMIS is the automation of reasons for decisions made or actions taken along the assembly line. Reasons for dismissing cases prior to trial on their merits can be related to earlier cycles of postponement for various reasons and the reasoning behind intake and screening decisions. The PROMIS dataset also includes information about the defendant, case characteristics and processes, charge, sentencing and continuance processes, and the witness/victims involved in the case. PROMIS was first used in 1971 in the United States Attorney's Office for the District of Columbia. To enhance the ability to transfer the concepts and software to other communities, BJS awarded a grant to the Institute for Law and Social Research (INSLAW) in Washington, D.C. The PROMIS datasets from Rhode Island are a product of this grant. These two data collections are organized into hierarchial data structures with over 98,000 records. There are six records per case. Each record includes data about a particular aspect of a case including data about the (1) defendant (about 14 variables), (2) case (about 131 variables), (3) charges (about 32 variables), (4) sentencing (about 24 variables), (5) continuance (about 27 variables), and (6) witness/victims (about 17 variables). INVESTIGATOR = Kerstetter, W.A.

SUMMARY = This study reports on the implementation of a proposal to involve, on a voluntary basis, victims, defendants, and police in judicial plea negotiation conferences in Dade County, Florida. The data consist of eight parts. Parts One to Three (Defendants, Victims, and Police Files), consist of questionnaires containing 140 variables for 320 cases in the Defendant File, 153 variables for 353 cases in the Victim File, and 95 variables for 431 cases in the Police File. Part Four is a Conference Observation File containing 215 variables for 533 cases. During the pretrial settlement conference, an observer wrote in sequence the verbal behavior. After the session the observer made some subjective ratings, provided descriptive data about the conclusion of the session, and classified comments into one of eight substantive categories. Part Five is a Case Information File drawn from court records and contains 91 variables for 1,073 cases.

TITLE = OFFENDER BASED TRANSACTION STATISTICS (OBTS), 1980: CALIFORNIA, OHIO, NEW YORK, PENNSYLVANIA, UTAH

INVESTIGATOR = United States Department of Justice. Bureau of Justice Statistics.

SUMMARY = The Offender Based Transaction Statistics (OBTS) consist of data which allow examination of offender characteristics and patterns of court action and case disposition. Collected by individual states from existing data, the dataset includes all cases which reached disposition during the calendar year 1980. Data were collected and submitted by California, Ohio, and Pennsylvania. Using the individual adult offender as the unit for analysis, selected information is provided about the offender and his or her arrest, prosecution, and court disposition. Examples of variables included are: arrest and level of arrest charge, date of arrest, charge filed by the prosecutor, prosecutor or grand jury disposition, type of counsel, type of trial, court disposition, sentence type, and minimum and maximum sentence length. Dates of disposition of each stage of the process allow for tracking of time spent at each stage. In cases where the offender is charged with multiple offenses, the most serious charge and most serious outcome at each stage of the process (from the offender's point of view) are provided. Individual offenders are also given unique identification which is consistently used when they are involved in subsequent cases. The file contains approximately 54 variables and has a logical record length of 134 characters. There are approximately 188,445 records for California, 7,953 records for Ohio, and 59,191 records for Pennsylvania.

SUMMARY = Project STAR was designed to collect information about the various roles of operational criminal justice personnel in order to assist in the design of educational and training programs for these personnel. Data were collected from a two-part questionnaire administered to criminal justice personnel in four states: California, Michigan, New Jersey and Texas. The first part of the questionnaire contains general information including personal, attitudinal, and opinion items as well as questions concerning the goals of the criminal justice system. The second part consists of 97 situations which the respondent was asked to rank using a five-part scale. The situations deal with the roles of police officers, prosecuting attorneys, defense attorneys, judges, probation officers, correctional officers and parole officers. The data are organized in four files by state. The logical record length is 3912 characters for all cases.

TITLE = ADULT CRIMINAL CAREERS, MICHIGAN: 1974-1977

INVESTIGATOR = Blumstein, Alfred, and Jacqueline Cohen.

SUMMARY = These data are intended to develop estimates of the extent and variation of individual offending. The data were taken from the computerized criminal history files of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Included are the adult criminal records of individuals 17 years of age and older arrested in Michigan from 1974 to 1977. The primary criterion for inclusion in the sample was at least one arrest in Michigan for murder, rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, or auto theft. Once sampled, the arrest history includes data on ALL recorded arrests through 1977, regardless of offense type. The full dataset includes records for 41,191 individuals for a total of 200,007 arrests. The dataset is organized by individual, including demographic aspects of the individual (birth date, state of birth, sex, and race) followed by information from the individual's arrest record in chronological order. The arrest records include the date of arrest, the offenses charged, the disposition (convicted, dismissed, or acquitted), and the sentence. Because the data are organized by individual, they are suitable for longitudinal analyses of individual offending patterns over a long period of time. The data are contained in one file with 57 variables for 241,198 cases.

SUMMARY = The study concentrates on an empirical investigation of the 582 largest publicly owned corporations in the United States: 477 manufacturing, 18 wholesale, 66 retail, and 21 service. Corporations in banking, insurance, transportation, communication, and utilities have been excluded because of the unusual nature of these businesses. The annual sales for 1975 of the corporations studied ranged from $300 million to more than $45 billion, with an average sales volume of $1.7 billion for parent firms. The data covered all enforcement actions that could be secured, initiated, or imposed by 24 federal agencies during 1975 and 1976. Variables include number and types of violations, investigation agency, and sanctions imposed. In addition, the researchers collected economic data on the corporations as well as industry-level economic data. These are presented in a separate data file. The variables in the Economic Data File include Net Income/Total Assets, Working Capital/Total Assets, and Sales/Total Assets. It Consists of 124 variables for 582 cases, while the Violations/Sanctions File consists of 132 variables for 2,052 cases.

Two communities in each area were designated high crime areas while the other two were low crime areas. Included among the variables are: the relationship of race and socio-economic class to crime, fear of crime and experiences, contacts and attitudes toward the police, gender, and religion. There are 621 cases in this dataset, which has a logical record length of 84 characters.

TITLE = POLITICAL VIOLENCE IN THE UNITED STATES

INVESTIGATOR = Levy, S.

SUMMARY = The purpose of this newspaper sample study was to examine the levels and changes in the levels of violence in the United States for the period 1819-1968. A politically violent event was defined as an attack on an official or group of officials for any reason, or an attack on an individual for political or social reasons. Three indices of political violence were used: the number of violent events, the number of deaths resulting from the events, and the number of injuries resulting from the events. Additional data collected include: date of event, nature of target, number of attackers, level of violence by attacker, violence by a group of attackers, motivation or reasons for attack, injury to target, property damage, injury to attacker, type of attacker, and size of the newspaper.

TITLE = JUVENILE DELINQUENCY AND ADULT CRIME, 1948-1977 [RACINE, WISCONSIN]: CITY ECOLOGICAL DATA

INVESTIGATOR = Shannon, Lyle W.

SUMMARY = These data are intended to be used in conjunction with the JUVENILE DELINQUENCY AND ADULT CRIME, 1948-1977 [RACINE, WISCONSIN]: THREE BIRTH COHORTS. These data are organized into 2 different types, Block data and Home data. The Block Dataset contains the characteristics of each block in Racine for the years 1950, 1960, and 1970 as selected from the United States Census of Housing for each of these years. The data are presented for whole blocks for each year and for blocks agglomerated into equal spaces so that comparison may be made between the 1950, 1960 and 1970 data. In addition, land use and target density (gas stations, grocery and liquor stores, restaurants, and taverns) measures are included. The data were obtained from land use maps and city directories. These block data have been aggregated into census tracts, police grid areas, natural areas, and neighborhoods for the purpose of describing the spatial units of each in comparable fashion for 1950, 1960, and 1970. The information contained within the Block data file is intended to be used to merge ecological data onto any of the files described in the JUVENILE DELINQUENCY AND ADULT CRIME, 1948-1977 [RACINE, WISCONSIN]: THREE BIRTH COHORTS codebook. The Home datasets contain selected variables from the block data files merged with the cohort police contact data or the cohort interview data. The Home datasets represent the merged files used by the Principal Investigators for their analysis and are included here only as examples of how the files from the cohort data may be merged with the block data.

TITLE = JUVENILE DELINQUENCY AND ADULT CRIME, 1948-1977 [RACINE, WISCONSIN]: THREE BIRTH COHORTS

INVESTIGATOR = Shannon, Lyle W.

SUMMARY = This data collection contains data on juvenile delinquency and adult crime for three birth cohorts in Racine, Wisconsin. The three birth cohorts are 1942, 1949, and 1955. The 1942 cohort consists of 1,352 persons, the 1949 cohort of 2,099 persons, and the 1955 cohort of 2,676, a total of 6,127 persons. These data are organized into 3 basic types of datasets: 1) Individual-level 'Police contact' data for all 3 cohorts, 2) Individual-level interview and contact data for the 1942 and 1949 cohorts, and 3) Individual-level contact data classified by age for all three cohorts, 'Age-by-Age' data. There are 8 data files in all. The individual-level contact data sets, referred to as the 'police contact data,' contain equivalent data for all three cohorts. The data consist of the type and frequency of police contacts by individuals as well as the date, location, and number of the first contact. Individual cohort members are the units of analysis. The interview datasets contain data on police contacts as well as a number of variables measured during personal interviews with a sample of the 1942 and 1949 cohorts. The interview variables include retrospective measures of the respondent's perception of his or her past police contacts, attitudes toward the police, and a variety of other variables such as socioeconomic status and age at marriage. The 'age-by-age' dataset contains juvenile court and police contact data classified by age. The data are organized into three equivalent datasets, one for each cohort, and the individual cohort member is the unit of analysis. In contrast to the cohort data, however, the police contact data are organized according to the age of the cohort member at the time of the contact(s). Thus variables have been constructed which measure and summarize the number, type(s), and seriousness of contacts at a given age. These datasets also contain detailed data on the type(s) of disposition(s) received by cohort members at various ages. The number of cases in each of the 8 data files is as follows: Cohort year-1942: Police contact (1352), Age-by-age (706), Interview (333). Cohort year-1949: Police contact (2099), Age-by-age (1385), Interview (556). Cohort year-1955: Police contact (2676), Age-by-age (2149), Interview (—).

TITLE = CHICAGO LAWYERS SURVEY, 1975

INVESTIGATOR = Heinz, John P., and Edward O. Laumann.

SUMMARY = This study contains information collected in 1975 on attorneys in Chicago. The purpose of this data collection is to describe and analyze the social organization of the legal profession in Chicago. Several major aspects of the legal profession are investigated here: the organization of lawyers' work, the social stratification within the local (Chicago) Bar Association, prestige within the profession, lawyers' personal values, career patterns and mobility, networks of association, and the 'elites' within the profession. The data were collected based upon a stratified sample with simple random selection of elements within strata using Sullivan's Law Directory as a primary source, and as a supplementary source, Martindale-Hubbell Law Directory. The universe is all attorneys in the city of Chicago who are non-retired and not recent graduates from law school (one year) who had law offices. Interviews were completed by 777 attorneys, and the dataset contains approximately 870 variables. The logical record length of the data records is 1,221 characters.

TITLE = FORENSIC EVIDENCE AND THE POLICE, 1976-1980

INVESTIGATOR = Peterson, Joseph L., Steve Mihajlovic and Michael Gilliland.

SUMMARY = The focus of this collection is on adult cases in the serious crime categories of homicide (and related death investigations), rape, robbery, aggravated assault/battery, burglary, and arson. Data for four cities are included in this dataset: Peoria, Chicago, Kansas City, and Oakland. The collection uses three sources: police, court, and laboratory records. The primary source is police case files. These files consist of all reports submitted by police personnel during an investigation of a suspected criminal offense. Prosecutor or court files were reviewed for information regarding the dispositions of suspects who were arrested and formally charged. Crime laboratory reports include information concerning the evidence submitted and the examiner's work sheets, notes, and final results. There are eight files in this dataset. Each of the four cities has one file for cases with physical evidence and one file for cases where physical evidence was not collected or examined. The number of cases in each file varies. The total number of cases in the collection is 2,659 and there are approximately 120 variables. Each file has a logical record length of 80 characters.

INVESTIGATOR = Spelman, William, and Dale K. Brown.

SUMMARY = This dataset replicates the citizen reporting component of the Kansas City, Missouri Police Department's Response Time Analysis. Information is included on 3,300 reported crime incidents of aggravated assault, motor vehicle theft, burglary, larceny-theft, forcible rape, and robbery. The data cover citizen calls to police between April 21 and December 7, 1979. There are four files to this dataset, one each for Jacksonville, Florida, Peoria, Illinois, Rochester, New York, and San Diego, California. The data are taken from police dispatch records and interviews of citizens requesting police assistance. The variables taken from the dispatch records include the dispatch times, call priority, police travel time, age, sex, and race of the caller, response code, number of suspects, and area of the city in which the call originated. The variables taken from the citizen interviews include respondent's role in them incident (victim, caller, victim-caller, witness-caller), incident location, relationship of caller to victim, number of victims, identification of suspect, interaction with police, and others. There are approximately 250 variables in this dataset. Each file has a logical record length of 80.

TITLE = KEEPING THE PEACE: POLICE DISCRETION AND THE MENTALLY DISORDERED IN CHICAGO, 1980-1981

INVESTIGATOR = Teplin, Linda A.

SUMMARY = Data on police-citizen encounters were collected to explore the peacekeeping functions of the police and their handling of encounters with mentally ill persons. The data were gathered through observations by researchers riding in police cars in two Chicago police districts during a 14-month period in 1980-1981. There are two parts to this dataset. First, information was collected once per shift on the general level of activity during the shift and the observer's perceptions of emotions/attitudes displayed by the police officers he/she observed. Also, information is included for each of the 270 shifts about the personal characteristics, work history, and working relationships of the police officers observed. The second part of the dataset contains detailed information on each police-citizen encounter including its nature, location, police actions and/or responses, citizens involved, and their characteristics and behavior. A unique and consistent shift identification number is attached to each encounter so that information about police officer characteristics from the first ("shift-level") part of the dataset may be matched with the second ("encounter-level") part. There are 1382 police-citizen encounters involving 2555 citizens in this collection, and the data reside in two files. There are three cards per case in the Shift Level Data File and sixteen cards per case in the Encounter Level Data File. Missing data were recoded to 9's by the Principal Investigator and can mean either actual missing data or unknown or inapplicable data. The logical record length of both files is 80 characters.

include the rank of the law enforcement officer applying for the warrant, the type of agency applying for the warrant, general object of the search requested, specific area to be searched, type of crime being investigated, central offense named in the warrant, evidence upon which the warrant application is based, and disposition of the warrant application. The data contain 128 variables, and have a logical record length of 80 characters. The data file has 8,352 records. There is also a file of SPSS control cards.

XV. STATISTICS

TITLE = CRIMINAL STATISTICS (JS-1, 2, AND 3)

INVESTIGATOR = Administrative Office of the United States Courts. Statistical Analysis and Reports Division.

SUMMARY = The statistics on criminal cases are reported on cards prepared from a 'snap-out' docket set (A.O. 256). The clerk of court records the district and office number where the case was filed, the docket number, how the case was commenced (by indictment or information) and the name of each defendant. The offense charged (all counts) including the statutory offense citations are fully described. Further, pursuant to the Speedy Trial Act of 1974, data for speedy trial recording are supplied. At the time of disposition for each defendant, the clerk prepares a card showing the initial plea and, for those convicted, the last plea, together with the pertinent dates required for the Speedy Trial Act. When a defendant goes to trial, the outcome of a court or jury trial is likewise reported. The offense and type of sentence imposed is reported for defendants who were convicted. For all defendants disposed of, information concerning representation by counsel, including an appointment made under the provisions of the Criminal Justice Act of 1964, is obtained. The JS-2 and JS-3 cards and a control sheet for cases filed and disposed of are submitted monthly. For convicted defendants, the following additional data are entered: sex, race, age, prior criminal record and the type of presentence investigation (complete, limited, or none made at all).

TITLE = STATE COURT STATISTICS, 1978-1980

INVESTIGATOR = National Center for State Courts. Court Statistics and Information Management Project.

SUMMARY = The State Court Statistics are the product of a cooperative agreement between the two principal investigators, the National Center for State Court Statistics, and Information Management Project. The data were collected from annual reports supplied by the individual states as well as unpublished materials provided by different state court administrators and appellate court clerks. Follow-up correspondence and telephone contacts were utilized to collect any missing data and to verify the accuracy of the data. The Bureau of the Census population estimates published in the Statistical Abstract of the United States were used for the population figures for the data. The unit of analysis for the study is statewide data on courts with the same jurisdiction. The years 1979-1980 are covered, and five file types of data are included: 1. State Court Caseload Inventory: This dataset includes the number of begin-pending, filed, disposed, and end-pending cases for criminal, civil, traffic, and juvenile cases. There are 268 variables. 2. Criminal Disposition in State Trial Courts: The variables here include number of trials, guilty pleas, convictions, acquittals, dismissals, nolle proseques, bail forfeitures, bound overs, transfers, and dispositions for bench and jury trials for criminal cases. There are approximately 370 variables. 3. Civil Disposition in State Trial Courts: The data have information on the number of trials, uncontested/default cases, dismissals, withdrawn/settled cases, transfers, arbitrated cases, and other type civil bench and jury trials. There are a total of 258 variables in this file. 4. Traffic Disposition in State Trial Courts: The data include the number of trials, convictions, guilty pleas, acquittals, dismissals, bail forfeitures, fines, transfers, and other traffic dispositions for bench and jury trials. This file contains 145 variables. 5. State Appellate Court Caseload Inventory: These data have variables on the number of begin-ending, filed, disposed, end-pending, and 'certiorari granted' cases for various appeals, original proceedings, requests to appeal cases, and other appellate-level case types. Each file of this study has information on state population, number of judges, court's jurisdiction, court's reporting year, court's jury and bench trial definitions, and court's civil and criminal units of court. The data are for the fifty states, Guam, Puerto Rico, and the District of Columbia. The data for each file can be used with SPSS-X. There are 15 files each with logical record lengths of 80 characters.

TITLE = UNIFORM CRIME REPORTS: NATIONAL TIME SERIES COMMUNITY-LEVEL DATABASE, 1967-1980

INVESTIGATOR = Pierce, Glenn L., William J. Bowers, James Baird, and Joseph Heck.

SUMMARY = The Uniform Crime Reports National Time Series Data, 1967-1980 include detailed criminal offense and clearance information submitted monthly by over 3,000 consistently reporting law enforcement agencies in the United States. These data were processed at the Center for Applied Social Research, Northeastern University, Boston, Massachusetts under several grants from the National Institute of Justice in order to produce easily accessible and highly reliable time series data on officially reported crime. Originally provided by the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI), these data exclude Uniform Crime Report (UCR) data from infrequently reporting law enforcement agencies. In general, only those agencies which submitted ten or more monthly reports in every year during 1967 through 1980 are included in this dataset. The data include detailed breakdowns of offenses and clearances taken from disaggregated UCR Return A tapes. Of particular interest are weapon-specific robbery and assault variables, types of rape, burglary, larceny, and motor vehicle theft, and clearances by arrest (or other exceptional means) of adults and juveniles for each offense sub-type. Both monthly and annual counts of these are available. Finally, as an aid to the user, each agency is identified by its FBI 'ORI Code' as well as a sequential case number produced and documented by ICPSR in the codebook's appendix. Cases also may be identified by geographic region, state, SMSA, county, population size and group, and frequency of reporting. The time series data are stored in fourteen separate files of annually pooled cross-sections. Each file contains approximately 1,279 variables for 3,328 cases where each case represents a consistently reporting law enforcement agency. The data are available in OSIRIS and card-image formats.

TITLE = MORTALITY DETAIL FILE: EXTERNAL CAUSE EXTRACT, 1968-1978, 1979-1980

INVESTIGATOR = United States Department of Health and Human Services. National Center for Health Statistics.

SUMMARY = The Mortality Detail File: External Cause Extract is a special subset of data prepared from the Mortality Detail File 1968-1980 (ICSPR 7632). These data were collected by the National Center for Health Statistics and are of considerable importance to those individuals interested in criminological research. Due to changes in Cause of Death definitions incorporated in the Ninth Revision, International Classification of Diseases (ICD-9), the 1968-1978 data files differ slightly from the 1979-80 data files.

The 1968-1978 data reflect cause of death codes of the Eighth Revision of the International Classification of Diseases Adapted for Use in the United States (ICDA-8), the period immediately following (1979-80) utilizes ICD-9 cause of death codes. In addition to the differences in the Cause of Death codes and recodes, the 1979-1980 data include three variables not available in the 1968-1978 datasets. These are: (1) mortality by marital status, (2) state or country of birth, and (3) place of death and status of decedent when death occurred in a hospital or medical center. With these exceptions, the data are similar in structure and content to the 1968-1978 data and provide such detailed personal and geographic information as month and day of death, decedent's race and gender, age of deceased at time of death, place of decedent's residence (specific to the city level) and place of death (specific to the county level), and whether an autopsy was performed. For each data file in the years from 1968 to 1978 there are 35 variables for approximately 82,846 to 166,997 cases, and for the years 1979 and 1980 there are 38 variables for 159,635 and 161,374 records, respectively. The 1979-80 files also contain new variables pertinent to criminal justice research: handgun versus other gun accidents, handgun versus other gun suicides, handgun versus other gun homicides, and drug poison versus other poison homicides. These data are available in OSIRIS and card image formats and there is no hardcopy documentation available at this time.

TITLE = MORTALITY DETAIL FILES, 1968-1978 [VOLUME I] AND 1979-1980 [VOLUME II]

INVESTIGATOR = United States Department of Health and Human Services. National Center for Health Statistics.

SUMMARY = The first volume of the Mortality Detail files contain information on all deaths registered on individual death certificates in the United States from 1968 through 1978. The data represent every death or fetal death registered in the fifty states and the District of Columbia. Detailed geographic and personal items as well as data on the cause of death are included. Personal information includes the month and day of the death, the sex of the deceased, the detailed age of the deceased at the time of death, the deceased's place of residence and place of death, and whether or not an autopsy was performed. Cause of death information is recorded using codes from the International Classification of Diseases (8th Revision). There are 1,930,082 records for the 1968 file: 1,921,990 records for the 1969 file: 1,922,966 records for the 1970 file: 1,929,476 records for the 1971 file: 983,001 records for 1972: 166,997 records for the 1973 file: 157,471 records for the 1974 file: 156,796 records for the 1975 file: 152,444 records for the 1976 file: 1,902,106 records for the 1977 file: and 1,930,627 records for the 1978 file. The data contain 35 variables per case. These files are available in both OSIRIS and card-image formats. There are 716,554 card-images for these data. The second volume, covering the years 1979-80, contains information on all deaths registered on individual death certificates in the United States. The data represent every death and fetal death recorded in the fifty states and the District of Columbia transmitted to the National Center for Health Statistics (NCHS). These dataset differ from VOLUME I of the MORTALITY DETAIL FILES (1968-1978) due to changes in Cause of Death definitions incorporated in the Ninth Revision, International Classification of Diseases (ICD-9). Because of these changes, codebooks and data are not directly comparable between volumes, although attempts were made to standardize coding whenever possible. In addition to differences in cause of death codes and recodes, the 1979-80 data include several variables not available in the 1968-1978 volume. They are (1) mortality by marital status, (2) state or country of birth, and (3) place of death and status of decedent when death occurred in hospital or medical center. With these exceptions the data are similar in structure and content to the 1968-1978 data and provide such detailed personal and geographic information as month and day of death, decedent's race and gender, age of deceased at time of death, place of decedent's residence (specific to the city level) and place of death (specific to the county level), and whether an autopsy was performed. There are 38 variables in the 1979 and 1980 datasets, each with a logical record length of 86 characters. There are 1,916,766 records in the 1979 dataset, and 1,993,137 records in the 1980 dataset. For this last dataset, NCHS revised its SMSA codes using the 1980 Census SMSA codes. A list of these revised SMSA codes is appended to the codebook. These data are available in both OSIRIS and card-image formats. For data pertaining to criminally related deaths see also MORTALITY DETAIL FILE: EXTERNAL CAUSE EXTRACT, 1968-1978, 1979-1980 (ICPSR 8224).

TITLE = UNIFORM CRIME REPORTING PROGRAM DATA

INVESTIGATOR = United States Department of Justice. Federal Bureau of Investigation.

SUMMARY = The Federal Bureau of Investigation compiled the Uniform Crime Reports to serve as periodic nationwide assessments of reported crime not available elsewhere in the criminal justice system. By 1980, there were approximately 16,000 law enforcement agencies contributing reports either directly or through their state reporting program. The agencies reported the number of offenses that became known to them on a monthly basis, according to the Crime Index categories of serious offenses. This comprehensive and authoritative source of officially reported crime has been expanded to include data for 1979 through 1983. These data, processed from FBI Uniform Crime Reports (UCR) Master tapes, cover every monthly return submitted by law enforcement agencies in the United States between 1979 and 1983. There are 20 files in all—4 types of files for each year 1979-83: Part 1: Offenses Known and Clearances by Arrest, 1980 (3rd edition) Part 2: Property Stolen and Recovered, 1980 (revised) Part 3: Supplementary Homicide Report (SHR), 1980 (revised) Part 4: Police Employee (LEOKA) Data, 1980 Part 5: Offenses Known and Clearances by Arrest, 1981 Part 6: Property Stolen and Recovered, 1981 Part 7: Supplementary Homicide Report (SHR), 1981 Part 8: Police Employee (LEOKA) Data, 1981 Part 9: Offenses Known and Clearances by Arrest, 1982 Part 10: Property Stolen and Recovered, 1982 Part 11: Supplementary Homicide Report (SHR), 1982 Part 12: Police Employee (LEOKA) Data, 1982 Part 13: Offenses Known and Clearances By Arrest, 1979 Part 14: Property Stolen and Recovered, 1979 Part 15: Supplementary Homicide Report (SHR), 1979 Part 16: Police Employee (LEOKA) Data, 1979 Part 17: Offenses Known and Clearances By Arrest, 1983 Part 18: Property Stolen and Recovered, 1983 Part 19: Supplementary Homicide Report (SHR), 1983 Part 20: Police Employee (LEOKA) Data, 1983. The data within each of the following three file types—1) Offenses Known and Clearances by Arrest, 2) Property Stolen and Recovered, and 3) Supplementary Homicide Report—have been processed by ICPSR into identical formats so that a single codebook may be used to access different years of data. A brief description of the 4 basic file types follows: Offenses Known and Clearances by Arrest: (Parts 1,5,9,13,17). These data files include monthly data on the number of Crime Index offenses reported, the number of offenses cleared by arrest (or other exceptional means), and the number of adults and juveniles arrested by each reporting law enforcement agency. The figures include all reports of Index Crimes, (excluding arson), received from victims, officers who discovered infractions, or other sources. Part 1 contains 539 variables for 16,414 cases. Part 5 contains 1,200 variables for 16,615 cases. Part 9 contains 1,200 variables for 16,793 cases. Part 13 contains 1,420 variables for 16,177 cases. Part 17 contains 1,420 variables for 8,365 cases. Property Stolen and Recovered: (Parts 2,6,10,14,18). These data are collected on a monthly basis by all UCR contributing agencies. These data aggregated at the agency level, report on the nature of crime, the monetary value of the property stolen, and the type of property stolen. Similar information regarding recovered property is also included in the data. Part 2 contains 1,130 variables for 15,554 cases. Part 6 contains 1,130 variables for 15,698 cases. Part 10 contains 1,130 variables for 15,676 cases. Part 14 contains 1,130 variables for 15,676 cases. Part 18 contains 1,130 variables for 15,488 cases. Supplementary Homicide Report: (Parts 3,7,11,15,19). These data provide incident-level information on criminal homicides. Further, the data which was provided monthly by UCR agencies contains information on the victim of the homicide, the offender of the homicide, and the relationship between the two. Part 3 contains 152 variables for 22,215 cases. Part 7 contains 152 variables for 20,424 cases. Part 11 contains 152 variables for 19,668 cases. Part 15 contains 152 variables for 65,986 cases. Part 19 contains 152 variables for 59,927 cases. Police Employee (LEOKA) Data: (Part 4,8,12,16,20). These data provide information about Law Enforcement Officers Killed or Assaulted (LEOKA) in the line of duty. The variables created from these forms provide in depth information on circumstances involved in killings or assaults. The topics that the variables cover include type of calls officers were answering, type of weapon used, and type of patrols officers were on. Part 4 contains 2,256 variables for 16,414 cases. Part 8 contains 2,256 variables for 16,615 cases. Part 12 contains 2,256 variables for 16,793 cases. Part 16 contains 2,256 variables for 16,176 cases. Part 20 contains 2,256 variables for 16,913 cases. Because some parts of this data collection are very large, these data are normally available only in OSIRIS and logical-record-length formats. The data are aggregated by agency and not weighted.

INVESTIGATOR = United States Department of Justice. Office of Justice Assistance, Research, and Statistics.

SUMMARY = The Law Enforcement Assistance Administration File (PROFILE) System was designed for the automated storage and retrieval of information describing BJS-sponsored programs. The two types of data elements used to describe the projects in this file are basic data and program descriptors. The basic data elements include the title of the grant, information regarding the location of the grantee and the project, critical funding dates, the government level and type of grantee, financial data, the name of the project director, indication of the availability of reports, and appropriate identification numbers. The program descriptors elements form the program classification system and describe the key characteristics of the program. Key characteristics include subject, primary and secondary activity, whether it affects a juvenile or adult problem, and what specific crimes, clients, staff, program strategies, agencies, equipment or research methods are to be used or affected by the project. There are approximately 77,000 records in one data file with a total of 34 variables. Each record has a logical record length of 2,154 characters.

SUMMARY = Supplementary Empirical Teaching Units in Political Science (SETUPS) for American Politics are computer-based modules designed for use in teaching introductory courses in American government and politics. This SETUPS uses 27 variables from the Bureau of Justice surveys taken in 1973-1974. The data consist of a sample of 981 persons from San Diego and 1,017 from New York City. The exercises teach students about the frequency of various kinds of criminal victimization, the personal characteristics of the targets of those crimes, and the impact of criminal victimization on the fear of crime.

The primary objective was to measure the extent of crime in the District of Columbia and the impact of crime on the quality of life in the District. Also studied was the degree to which Congressional employees working in the Capitol Hill area were subject to victimization and the extent to which victimization and the fear caused by it affected their productivity. This data collection contains six files, three of which are data files. The first file contains person-level data such as residential mobility, crime prevention efforts, and socio-demographic characteristics. This file includes 5,542 cases with one record per respondent and has a logical record length of 334. The crime data file, called the "In Scope Crimes File," contains 1950 records. Each record in this file represents a reported criminal victimization, and the file's logical record length is 531. The third file, the "Out of Scope File," has 2,525 cases. An out of scope crime was defined as one which was either outside the analysis time period of May 1, 1982 to April 30, 1983 or not a crime of interest for this study. In addition, it contains a set of attitudinal measures dealing with inmates' thoughts and perceptions on a variety of subjects including their reactions to general statements about prison life and to a series of hypothetical and potentially provocative situations. TITLE = COMMERCIAL VICTIMIZATION SURVEYS, 1973-1977 [UNITED STATES]: CITIES SAMPLE

INVESTIGATOR = United States Department of Justice. Bureau of Justice Statistics.

SUMMARY = The National Crime Surveys, of which these Commercial Victimization Surveys are a part, were conducted to obtain current and reliable measures of serious crime in the United States. The Commercial Victimization Surveys, which are restricted to coverage of burglary and robbery incidents only, include all types of commercial establishments as well as political, cultural, and religious organizations. The survey includes a series of questions about the business, e.g., type and size, form of ownership, insurance, security, and break-in and robbery characteristics. Time and place, weapon, injury, entry evidence, offender characteristics, and stolen property data follow for each of the incidents mentioned in the first part of the interview. A multi-stage cluster sample design was employed to collect the data. Data on both victimized and non-victimized establishments in twenty-six different cities were collected during 1972, 1973, and 1974. In the 1975 survey, data from thirteen of these cities were collected again. These data are contained in thirty-nine hierarchical data files, one city per year. The data are fixed-blocked with 119,301 cases. The logical record length for both the business records and incident records is 181 characters. The printed codebook documents the 172 variables for the 1,509 to 8,154 cases of combined business and incident records.

TITLE = COMMERCIAL VICTIMIZATION SURVEYS, 1973-1977 [UNITED STATES]: NATIONAL SAMPLE

INVESTIGATOR = United States Department of Justice. Bureau of Justice Statistics.

SUMMARY = These Commercial Victimization Surveys were collected as part of the National Crime Surveys. They document burglary and robbery incidents for all types of commercial establishments, as well as political, cultural, and religious organizations. Business characteristics gathered include form of ownership and operation, size and type of business, and security measures. Detailed information regarding the reported incidents provided data on time and place, weapon involvement, offender and entry characteristics, injuries and deaths, and type and value of stolen property. The sampling procedure consisted of a stratified multistage cluster which, in the first stage, consisted of 34 Primary Sampling Units. Data were collected by calendar quarter for four quarters in 1973-1976 and for two quarters in 1977 while the actual incidents reported in the files reflect those occurring six months prior to the interview date. The eighteen files are hierarchical in structure and contain 2,080 to 23,204 business and incident records. The total number of cases is 188,271. Both the business records and the incident records have a logical record length of 230 characters. The data are fixed-blocked and there are 203 variables.

INVESTIGATOR = United States Department of Justice. Bureau of Justice Statistics.

SUMMARY = The National Crime Surveys were designed by the Bureau of Justice Statistics to obtain detailed information about crime, its victims, and consequences. The data were collected by the United States Census Bureau using a national sample of households drawn with a stratified multistage cluster procedure. Rotating subsamples were reinterviewed at six-month intervals. Interviews were conducted with each household member over 12 years old and recorded detailed information about each household or personal victimization. The data include type of crime, description of offender, severity of crime, injuries or losses, and demographic characteristics of household members and neighborhood. Data are available for over 35,000 households per collection quarter.

TITLE = NATIONAL CRIME SURVEYS: VICTIM RISK SUPPLEMENT, 1983

INVESTIGATOR = United States Department of Justice. Bureau of Justice Statistics.

SUMMARY = This special one-time survey was conducted in conjunction with the larger National Crime Survey and designed to collect data on noninterviewed and interviewed persons reporting household victimizations. The Supplement was administered in February, 1984 for a one-month period in place of the National Crime Survey. The purpose of the Supplement was to collect data on people's life-styles in order to determine whether certain life-styles are related to crime victimization. The Victim Risk Supplement is based on five questionnaires used by the Census Bureau for data collection. The first and second questionnaires, VRS-1 and VRS-2, contain basic screen questions and an incident report, respectively. VRS-3, the third questionnaire, was completed for every household member age 12 or older, and it includes questions specifically designed to determine whether a person's life-style at work, home, or during leisure time affects the risk of crime victimization. The interviewers completed the fourth and fifth questionnaires, VRS-4 and VRS-5. They were instructed to answer questions about the respondents' neighborhoods and behavior during the interview. The Victim Risk Supplement is a hierarchically structured data collection. There are 791 variables and the logical record length of the data is 481 characters. There are 14,258 households, 25,238 person records, and 2,952 incidences of crime. The VRS-3 questionnaire was completed for 25,138 respondents, the VRS-4 for 11,700, and the VRS-5 for 22,990.

INVESTIGATOR = Behavioral Research Institute.

SUMMARY = This dataset contains parent and youth data for the National Youth Survey. Youths and one of their parents or legal guardians were interviewed in early 1977 about events and behavior occurring during calendar year 1976. Included is information on demographics and socioeconomic status of respondents, disruptive events in the home, neighborhood problems, parental aspirations for youth, labelling, integration of family and peer contexts, attitudes toward deviance in adults and juveniles, parental discipline, community involvement, and drug use. The National Survey of Youth was supported by the Center for Studies of Crime and Delinquency, National Institute for Mental Health, and the National Institute for Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention. WAVE II, 1977

INVESTIGATOR = Behavioral Research Institute.

SUMMARY = Parent and youth data for the second wave of the National Youth Survey are contained in this data collection. The first wave was conducted in 1976 (ICPSR 8375). Youths and their parents or legal guardians were interviewed in early 1978 about events and behavior which had occurred in 1977. The second wave of the study was funded jointly by the National Institute of Mental Health and the Bureau of Justice Statistics (formerly the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration). Because of the funding arrangement, the interview schedules used in Wave I and Wave II are slightly different, e.g., there are differences in the "drug use" section. Data were collected on demographic and socioeconomic status of respondents, disruptive events in the home, neighborhood problems, parental aspirations for youth, labelling, integration of family and peer contexts, attitudes toward deviance in adults and juveniles, parental discipline, and community involvement. The data are contained in one file which has a logical record length of 80 characters. There are 963 variables.

The subjects were interviewed in a twelve-wave panel study beginning in their sophomore year of high school and continuing to age 30. The original base population consisted of 1,227 individuals. The first wave, conducted in the high schools in 1964, consisted of a 200-item questionnaire. The second wave, the first in the longitudinal design, involved face-to-face interviews with a 225-item instrument. The ten subsequent waves of the study were conducted by mail, at nearly one year intervals. The interview schedules are concerned with the issues of coming of age such as family relations, school performance, educational plans, dating, drinking, drug use, military service, delinquency, offenses and dispositions (civilian and military), and Vietnam experiences. The collection consists of one data file organized so that each of the 1,227 respondents is represented by 36 separate records. This results in a total of 44,172 records, each with a logical record length of 162. There are over 1,200 variables in the collection.TOPIC = XVII.
