INTRODUCTION

This report is a statistical summary of sex offense cases submitted to the Connecticut State Police Sex Crimes Analysis Unit during the 1987 calendar year.

A total of 517 cases were reported to the Unit, primarily from state and local police departments, rape crisis centers, and private treatment agencies. The cases are processed, placed in a computer file and used as data for this report and as intelligence information for police investigators involved in active sex crimes investigations.

Of the 798 reported forcible and attempted forcible rapes reported to police in 1987, 200 incidents or 25.1% of those reported were submitted to the Sex Crimes Unit for statistical and investigatory purposes.

Current practices for making an estimate of the number of forcible rapes in Connecticut yields somewhere between 7500-8000 such incidents occurring during 1987. It should be clear that analysis of 200 reported incidents cannot furnish accurate data which would provide a comprehensive picture of what is occurring regarding this crime in Connecticut. The purpose of this data is to infer trends regarding what is known of these incidents.

To restate our reporting practices, only data of a summary nature is released to reporters. Names of offenders are referred to police investigators only when those offenders have been convicted of a criminal offense in Connecticut. Names of victims, witnesses or juveniles are not released to anyone. If a case pertains to an active investigation, the requesting party is referred to the submitting police department. Case reports from rape crisis centers and other non-police agencies are used for statistical purposes only.

Copies of this report are furnished free to anyone who requests it. Please direct requests to the Connecticut State Police Sex Crimes Analysis Unit, 294 Colony Street, Meriden, CT. 06450, or by telephone to (203) 238-6575.
