Increasingly, information systems are entering the nation's courtrooms to perform an array of information management tasks. The influx of computers has provided court personnel with new tools and has dramatically altered court operations.

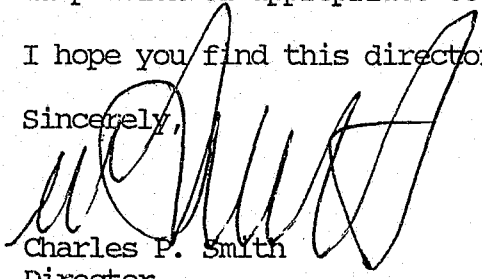

The Bureau of Justice Assistance (BJA) is committed to aiding state and local agencies in the process of designing, developing and implementing improved information and workload management systems. By supporting operational systems and encouraging criminal justice practitioners to share their knowledge in and experience with system development, we believe we can make lasting improvements in the management of all criminal justice agencies.

With the goal of improving court operations while meeting specific judicial information management needs, the Bureau of Justice Assistance is proud to provide the Automated Court Management Information Systems Directory. This directory of over 1800 court management systems is a valuable reference tool for any court designing, developing or otherwise acquiring an automated system. Using the directory, practitioners can easily identify and contact agencies with similar application and information processing needs to learn more about the actual operation of their systems.

This joint effort of the National Center for State Courts and SEARCH Group, Inc. is intended to aid court leaders and practitioners in their quest for effective and efficient information and workload management systems. It is the view of BJA that communication among developers and users alike will facilitate the exchange of information and encourage the transfer and adaptation of appropriate court systems.

I hope you find this directory useful.

Sincerely,

Charles P. Smith
Director

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

SEARCH would like to thank the hundreds of court management professionals from across the country, who voluntarily provided the raw data necessary to create the Directory of Automated Court Management Information Systems. We would also like to acknowledge the National Center for State Courts, whose staff meticulously compiled the data and assisted in creating an organized format for presenting the many and varied automated court systems. A special word of thanks is extended to Keith Bumstead, Director, and Gilbert A. Persley, Senior Staff Associate, Administration and Technical Services, of the National Center for State Courts, whose cooperation and hard work kept the project on track. And finally, we are grateful for the support of the Bureau of Justice Assistance, whose leadership in the use of information and workload management systems has improved the operation of criminal justice agencies nationwide.

Introduction

Introduction

SEARCH Group, Inc. and the Bureau of Justice Assistance are pleased to present the Directory of Automated Court Management Information Systems, an extensive compilation reflecting the most up-to-date information on court management systems nationwide. The National Center for State Courts (NCSC) provided technical assistance on this project, generating the database records and corresponding indices. The database for the following court system records is maintained at NCSC's headquarters in Williamsburg, Virginia.

Purpose

The Directory of Automated Court Management Information Systems is intended to assist court administrators and data processing managers in developing, acquiring or enhancing information systems. It is hoped that this compendium of operational systems will encourage practitioners to share information about their systems and thereby minimize duplicate efforts. The Directory may also be useful in developing functional requirements statements for inclusion in court system Request For Proposals.

Use and Organization

The Directory of Automated Court Management Information Systems contains indexed listings, or records, of over 1800 automated systems currently operating in court environments. It is divided into three parts: Part One sets out the purpose and organization of the Directory and provides a detailed explanation of the records, and Part Two contains the actual system records. Part Three includes two extensive indices and two appendices.

System Records

Each record briefly describes a system, outlining its applications and functions, equipment configuration, software and communications ability. The record also indicates the jurisdictional level of the operating agency, the geographic area served by the agency and the volume of court cases processed by the agency's system. In addition, the Directory provides contact names and addresses, and notes related technologies used by the agency. The individual records are separated by a double line of dashes.

The following excerpts from the first record in the Directory, and the corresponding explanations, should guide the reader in understanding the records. The example used here is the record of a system operated by the Alaska Administrative Office of the Courts.

STATE and CITY:	Alaska, Administrative Office/Courts
COURT NAME:	Administrative Office of the Courts
JURISDICTION:	Adminis. Office of Courts
POPULATION SERVED:	402,000

— Identifying the Agency

The Directory's records represent information management systems from courts around the country. The records are organized alphabetically by state, listing the state and city, court name and jurisdiction of the agency operating the court information management system, and the size of the population served by the agency. This block of text also includes contact names, addresses and telephone numbers for both administrative and technical personnel. (See Figure 1.)

COMPUTER MANUFACTURER:	International Business Machine
COMPUTER MODEL:	3030
DATABASE MGMT SYSTEM:	ADABAS
COMMUNICATIONS NETWORK:	SDLS/SNA
APPLICATION TYPES:	JU, PM, PP

— Identifying the System

The next block of text identifies the computer manufacturer and model, the database management system used, the communications software and the applications for which the system is used. The types of applications are referenced by two-letter codes. In Figure 2, System Identification Information, the codes JU, PM and PP indicate that the system is used for Jury Management, Property Management and Payroll/Personnel/Fringe Benefits. (See Appendix A for the complete list of codes and translations.)

MISCELLANEOUS TECHNOLOGIES:	Facsimile Transmission Equipment
	Inactive Records Microfilming
	Legal Research
	Video Court Recording
	Word Processing
	Printing and Duplicating Equipment

— Miscellaneous Technologies

After identifying the operating agency and the basic system information, the Directory record lists any related technologies that the agency may be using in tandem with the court information management system. (See Figure 3.)

— System Functions

Each record contains a nine column table which, for each system application, outlines the specific functions performed by the system, the programming language and the mode in which the function operates. This table also indicates agency and system location, system case load and origin. An explanation of the abbreviated table headings is provided beneath the table. (See Table 1, System Functions.)

TYPE	GEO LOC	SYSTEM LOC	CASE LOAD	LANGUAGE	DATE OPR	ORIGIN	MODE	SYSTEM FUNCTION
BD	State	EXECUTIVE		NATURAL	1980	O	O	Prior Year Expenditures Current Expenditures to Date General Ledger-Procs., Rpts, Statements
JU	State	EXECUTIVE		COBOL	1975	O	O	Juror Payroll Processing Juror Qualification and Summons
PM	State	EXECUTIVE		COBOL	1980	O	O	Indexing Equipment Inventory
PP	State	EXECUTIVE		NATURAL	1968	O	O	Position/Class Control Payroll Calculation and Preparation Affirmative Action Personnel File Vacation/Sick Leave Accrual
SP	County	AOC	4,000	COBOL	1984	O	O	Indexing Case Event Tracking Recipient Check Generation

Table 1: System Functions

TYPE — The two-letter code represents the system's application(s). (See Appendix A for code translations.)

GEO LOC — The geographic area served by the agency.

SYSTEM LOC — The physical location of the system equipment.

CASE LOAD — The volume of court cases processed by the system.

LANGUAGE — The primary computer programming language in which the system application was written.

DATE OPR — The year the system application became operational.

ORIGIN — Indicates whether the system was developed by the agency, was transferred from another jurisdiction, or is a proprietary software package. (See Appendix A for code translations.)

MODE — Defines the operational mode as on-line (O) or batch processing (B).

SYSTEM FUNCTION — The functions performed by the system within each application. The functions generally equate to court activities such as calendaring, case tracking and warrant generation.

Indices and Appendices

Two extensive indices and two appendices enable a reader to quickly locate specific systems and to understand the various codes used in the records. Please note that each index is separately page numbered.

— State and Court Index

This index assists the reader in locating a specific court's system and identifying the system's applications, computer manufacturer and model. The index is organized alphabetically by state, and then by court.

— Application Type and System Function Index

This index alphabetically lists application types (such as appellate case processing) and system functions (such as case aging, calendaring, etc.) and identifies the states where these systems are located.

— Appendix A: Code Translations

This appendix is a list of codes and translations used in the Directory to identify System Origins, System Modes and Application Types.

— Appendix B: List of Data Elements

This appendix identifies and defines the data elements used in the records.

Limitations

The database which generated the contents of this Directory was programmed not to print certain fields if the information was left blank by the survey respondents or was otherwise unknown. Such fields include:

- Contact Name and Address
- Telephone Numbers
- Additional Comments
- Operating System
- Database Management System
- Communications Monitor
- Communications Network

In addition, if the Geographic Area served by the agency is 'STATE', the City Name field was not printed. Similarly, if the jurisdiction of the agency operating the system is listed as 'GENERAL', the Jurisdiction field was not printed. Finally, if the field for Population Served is left blank or is listed as 'ZERO', this field was not printed.

The list of systems in the Directory of Automated Court Management Information Systems is extensive, however, it is not definitive. The information in the records is printed as reported (or not reported) by the various agencies, and was not independently verified by project staff. Before acting on the information in the Directory, the reader is advised to first contact the agency cited to learn first-hand about the particular system's scope and operational capabilities. This is especially important regarding function designations where semantical variations among agencies may cause misunderstandings. For example, the activity or function that one agency may call "Calendaring", could very well be the same activity that another agency refers to as "Docketing".

Errors/Omissions Notification

The Directory will be produced regularly and therefore the database will need to be updated for errors and omissions. We would appreciate your assistance in continuing this effort. Individuals wishing to update their system's record or add new records should contact:

Keith Bumstead, Director
Administration and Technical Services
National Center For State Courts
300 Newport Ave.
Williamsburg, Virginia 23187-8798
(804) 253-2000.

The value of the database and future editions of this Directory will be enhanced in direct relation to the accuracy and completeness of the information submitted.
