juvenile court statistics

1950-52

Juvenile court statistics IN GENERAL show the volume of delinquency, dependency or neglect and special proceedings cases (adoption, custody, etc.) disposed of by juvenile courts.

Because several factors affect the volume of cases referred to juvenile courts, the statistics by themselves do not measure completely the extent of delinquency, dependent or neglect situations in a community.

One factor affecting the number of cases referred to juvenile courts is the variation among communities in the organizational pattern for child welfare services. For example, in one community with well-equipped child welfare agencies, the court may be used for only its judicial function; in another community, it may provide many services to children. Also, some communities have screening agencies, such as police juvenile aid bureaus, that may adjust the cases themselves or may refer them to community agencies other than the court.

Another factor affecting the volume of juvenile court cases is the age of children and the type of cases over which the courts have jurisdiction. These vary among courts and may even change for the same court.

THE 586 COURTS REPORTING IN 1952 WERE LOCATED IN 29 STATES

Their jurisdiction cover 29% of the child population of the 53 States

juvenile court statistics | 1950-52

report by I. RICHARD PERLMAN Division of Research

Juvenile court delinquency cases in 1952 were approaching World War II peaks as the number increased for the fourth consecutive year. Within a year's time (1951 - 52) the increase was 10 percent. Over the four-year period (1948 - 52) the jump was 28 percent.

Dependency and neglect cases also went up in 1952. The increase for that year over 1951 was 4 percent, continuing the rise which began in 1951.

These and other highlights of juvenile court statistics are presented in graphic form in this bulletin. For a more detailed discussion and interpretation of juvenile court data than appears in this bulletin see: Children's Bureau Statistical Series No. 8, "Juvenile Court Statistics, 1946 - 1949."

Juvenile court statistics IN THIS BULLETIN show the volume of delinquency, dependency or neglect and special proceedings for those courts that voluntarily transmitted "complete reports" to the Children's Bureau through State agencies. "Complete reports" are those that give information on all types of cases--delinquency, dependency or neglect and special proceedings--including cases disposed of unofficially as well as officially.

About 200 juvenile courts have sent in complete reports regularly for a number of years. The number of courts currently reporting is much larger and has increased recently. In 1951 there were 458, and in 1952, 586 courts which sent in complete reports. An additional 245 courts reported in 1952 on official cases only. Their data are shown in table 2 but are not included in the charts or other tables.

Charts showing trends are based on the information supplied by the smaller group of about 200 comparable courts. Other charts are based on data for the latest year available. For some this is 1951 and for others 1952. The year used is noted in each chart.

Because of the limited geographic coverage of the courts reporting (see map on opposite page) and because large urban areas are better represented than are the smaller rural areas, the data may not be representative of all courts in the country.

THREE - FOURTHS
OF ALL
JUVENILE COURT CASES WERE DELINQUENCY CASES

MORE THAN HALF
OF ALL
JUVENILE COURT CASES
HANDLED UNOFFICIALLY

A referral to a court can be a disturbing experience for a child. Many unofficial cases that do not require the formal judgment of a court might preferably be handled by other community agencies equipped to deal with such cases.

delinquency

JUVENILE DELINQUENCY CASES ARE RISING

An estimated 385,000 children (or about 2% of all children in the U. S. aged 10-17) were dealt with by juvenile courts in delinquency cases in 1952.

(see table 5)

The increase in delinquency cases exceeds the increase in the child population.

By 1960, the child population 10-17 years of age (the predominant age group of delinquents) will be 40 percent higher than it was in 1952.

How will this population increase affect the future volume of delinquency?

delinquency

BOYS OUTNUMBER GIRLS ABOUT 5 TO 1 IN DELINQUENCY CASES.

Boys are referred to courts mostly for stealing or malicious mischief. Such aggressive acts are more likely to come to a court's attention than are the behavior problems most frequently found among delinquent girls, such as ungovernable behavior, running away, and sex offenses.

1952 data

MOST DELINQUENT CHILDREN BROUGHT TO COURT
WERE 14 YEARS OF AGE OR OLDER.

1951 data
(see table 8)

The average age for boys was slightly higher than that for girls.

delinquency

1951 data
(see table 7)

An estimated 30,000 delinquent children are held in jails or police stations annually waiting for a court hearing. Another 70,000 are held in jails by police or other law enforcement agencies without referral to a juvenile court. However, some of these may be awaiting hearing in another court, such as criminal court.

delinquency

MOST FREQUENT DISPOSITION OF OFFICIAL DELINQUENCY CASES WAS "PROBATION"

MOST UNOFFICIAL CASES WERE
"DISMISSED" OR "ADJUSTED"

1951 data
(see table 8)

The disposition of boys' and girls' cases differed considerably. Dismissals or adjustments were higher for boys; commitments or referrals to agencies or institutions were more frequent for girls. This difference is attributable in part to the different reasons for which boys and girls are brought to court. Girls are usually referred because of sexual misconduct or related offenses. This is considered a more serious offense than stealing or malicious mischief, for which boys are most frequently referred.

dependency and neglect

IN 1951, DEPENDENCY AND NEGLECT CASES INCREASED
FOR THE FIRST TIME SINCE 1947

( see table 9 )

Since 1950 dependency and neglect cases have increased at about the same rate as the child population. (For this chart the child population under 18 is used because this is the population at risk.)

dependency and neglect

CHILDREN DEALT WITH IN DEPENDENCY AND NEGLECT
CASES WERE MUCH YOUNGER

THAN THOSE DEALT WITH IN DELINQUENCY CASES

This age difference is to be expected from the difference in the nature of the two kinds of cases. The delinquent child comes to court because of anti-social behavior;

the dependent or neglected child because of inadequate care or support by the parents.

1951 data
(see table 10)

WHEN SHELTER CARE PENDING COURT HEARING WAS NEEDED FOR DEPENDENT AND NEGLECTED CHILDREN, THE MOST FREQUENT TYPE WAS BOARDING HOMES AND HOMES OF FRIENDS OR RELATIVES

b/ Courts serving areas with population of 100,000 or more are listed separately, showing the chief city located in each area. Courts serving areas with less than 100,000 population are combined for each State and are presented as "small courts."

c/ Breakdown by type of case not available for 1,871 official dependency and neglect and special proceedings cases (included in total all cases), for one court in Pennsylvania.

d/ Breakdown by method of handling cases not available for 15,666 delinquency cases, 5,354 dependency and neglect cases, and 779 special proceedings cases (included in totals) for Michigan and Washington.

e/ The age under which court has original jurisdiction is different for boys and girls. The age for boys appears first.

f/ Age shown is the one under which court has jurisdiction for delinquent children. Montana courts have jurisdiction for dependent and neglected children under 17 years of age; Texas under 16 years of age.

a/ NOTE WELL: The data in this table should not be used to make comparisons between communities regarding the extent of delinquency. Questions concerning changes in an individual court's data from one year to another should be directed to that individual court.

b/ Courts serving areas with population of 100,000 or more are listed separately, showing the chief city located in each area. Courts serving areas with less than 100,000 population are combined for each State and are presented as "small courts."

c/ The age under which court has original jurisdiction is different for boys and for girls. The age for boys appears first.

d/ Age shown is the one under which court has jurisdiction for delinquent children. Montana courts have jurisdiction for dependent and neglected children under 17 years of age.
