FROM THE DIRECTOR:

Ohio's halfway houses furnish a valuable community resource for the returning offender.

We endorse and support the efforts of halfway house administrators and their staffs as they speed the transition from institution status to that of a productive, taxpaying community citizen.

Bennett J. Cooper, Director
 Department of Rehabilitation and Correction

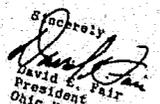

---

June 5, 1974

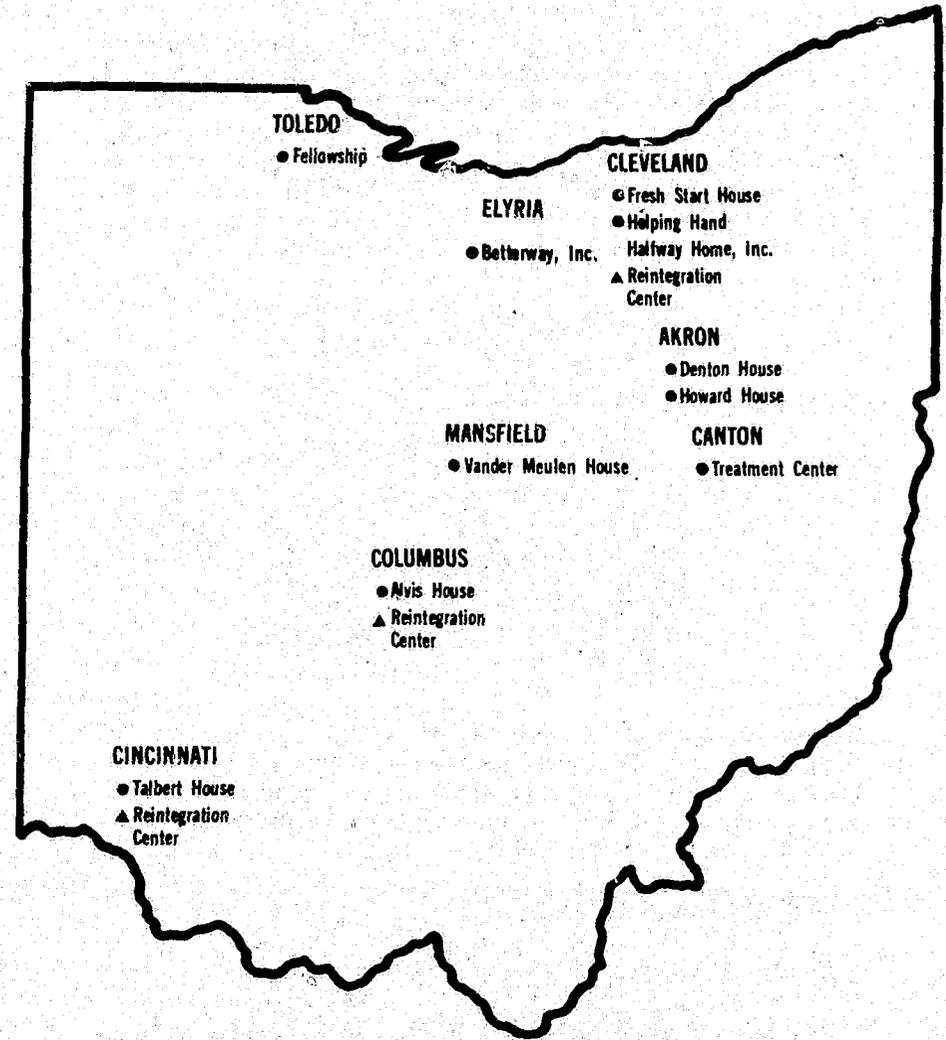

Dear Reader:

Today the halfway house serves a vital role in our correctional system by matching the resources of the community to the needs of the individual coming out of prison. In addition to this, the halfway house is becoming increasingly more involved in the role of an alternative to sentencing. Through these services, the halfway house program is assisting the community in developing a sense of responsibility toward the offender, as well as assisting the offender in developing responsible attitudes and behavior toward the community.

We commend the Adult Parole Authority and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration for your continuing efforts to support and strengthen the halfway house programs throughout the state.

Sincerely,

 David E. Fair

Alvis House

Office: 844 Bryden Road
Columbus, Ohio 43205
(614) 252-5270
Maurice A. Breslin, Executive Director

Philosophy: The objective of Alvis House is to assist its clients in understanding and accepting the values of successful socialized living. This goal is to be reached through both in-house assistance to the resident and by close cooperation with other community agencies who provide additional services. Volunteer workers assist in bringing the resident into a successful relationship with society as a whole. Clients who successfully complete the program are eligible for out-client counseling if they require it.

Program: The key to Alvis House programming is individualized treatment. Each new arrival is referred to a house Treatment Team, which consists of an experienced senior caseworker and one or more professional and para-professional counselors. The team then designs a program for each of its clients, and will consult with residents before making decisions which will affect them. Reality Therapy underlies all aspects of treatment and assistance.

Alvis House assists a variety of ex-offenders, including federal, state, and local referrals. A separate Probation Diversion Program exists within the general treatment framework, and probation clients are generally housed separately from other residents. However, counseling and supervision are the same as for other men.

Resident Obligations: Must attend one-hour group meetings twice a week, obey house rules, and counsel with the Treatment Teams as required. Housework duties are assigned by resident councils and must be fulfilled. Employed residents will pay $10 per week rent unless the conditions of their placement bar such payments.

Community Corrections and Treatment Center

609 Cleveland Avenue South
Canton, Ohio 44702
(216) 453-8401
Robert K. Devies, Director

Philosophy: The Center bases its treatment upon the totality of its program. The staff includes individuals with a wide variety of talents, who together provide assistance to clients as the latter attempt to reverse the irrational and self-destructive behavior patterns of their past. All such assistance is offered within a comprehensive program. Residents participate in the planning process as it affects themselves.

Territory Served: Stark County and its municipalities.

Limitations on Admissions: Probationers Only

Housing Capacity: 30

Admission Procedure: Potential residents are referred by the local courts, probation officers, and jails. Applicants are then screened by the Center for admission. Anyone seeking further information should contact the Center.

This is consummated in a written contract which is prepared jointly by the resident and the staff. The client then enters upon a course of action which is tailored to his needs yet which takes place within a highly structured setting. Counseling is based upon the concept of Rational-Emotive Therapy. The resident progresses through programmatic phases to the status of an out-client, and then gains his release.

Resident Obligations: Must participate in group and individual counseling sessions as required by each resident's program. Work schedules for house duties are formulated weekly, and all must assist. Clients who are employed will pay 25 percent of their take-home income as room and board.

Denton House

Office: Akron YMCA, Room #409
80 West Center Street
Akron, Ohio 44308
(216) 253-3181
David E. Fair, Executive Director

Philosophy: Denton House attempts to provide a suitable environment in which men may learn to live responsibly. Each resident is viewed as an individual who possesses unique assets and limitations, and who therefore must be viewed differently. The philosophy of Denton House is based upon the principles of Christianity, and this is reflected in the daily functioning of the house. Just as Jesus never forced Himself or His lifestyle upon others, neither does Denton House.

(216) 253-5927

Furlough and

Residence

Program: Denton House gears its treatment to the concept of individualized personal counseling and Reality Therapy. A new resident will be matched with professional counselor, and over the first two weeks of residence this staff member will assist the client in establishing specific personal goals in seven related areas. Weekly meetings then focus on the individual's progress towards achieving these goals. Group therapy is employed on a limited basis.

Each of the three residences serves certain categories of clients. Most probationers and parolees live in the YMCA. State furloughees and federal pre-releesees usually live at Denton House, if they are employed or seeking employment, or at Denton Hall, if they are part of a schooling program. In this manner the staff is able to meet the special supervision requirements which are part of furlough and pre-release programming without imposing them upon other categories of residents.

P.O. Box #4536
Toledo, Ohio 43620
(419) 241-3231
Garnett Phibbs,
Executive Director

Philosophy: Citizens Aiding Public Offenders (CAPO), the corporate name of Fellowship, offers the ex-offender a residence which is therapeutic in nature yet informal in its life style. Here the public will find a community-based alternative to the impersonal and counter-productive penal institution.

Territory Served: Most residents come from Lucas County and adjoining counties, but previous residence is not a requirement for admission.

Limitations on Admissions: None

Housing Capacity: 10

Admission Procedure: A potential resident must formally request admission. A final decision will be made on the basis of information available, and the applicant will then be informed of the result. Upon arrival, a new resident meets with a member of the treatment staff and begins a one-week orientation period within the house.

Program: All residents enter a four-phased treatment program. It is individually geared to develop within each client a motivational level which will enable him to reenter society as a stable and productive citizen. This goal is achieved by challenging each man to assume greater degrees of responsibility for his actions.

Resident Obligations: Must attend once-a-week house meetings, a weekday evening educational program offered by the public library, and other meetings as may be required by individual treatment programs. All clients must also assist in house chores. Employed residents, except state furlougees, must pay rent of up to 25 percent of their net income, to a maximum of $25 per week.

Housing Capacity: 30 in each house.

Admission Procedure: A potential resident will be interviewed twice, once by an Assistant Director and once by a representative of the county welfare department's Alcoholic Rehabilitation Unit. A conference between the two then determines acceptance or rejection. If an applicant is not available for personal screening, casework material will be used to reach a decision.

Program: New clients enter upon a thirty-day orientation period, during which they may not be employed. Thereafter they are encouraged to seek employment while remaining in the program. Ordinarily they will not stay more than six months, with the exact time of release to depend upon the staff's evaluation of a man's prospects for continued sobriety. Aftercare services are available through local AA groups.

Resident Obligations: All clients must attend a weekly AA meeting which is held in the house. In addition, new clients must attend AA orientation meetings once a week and assist in house maintenance. Akron, Ohio 44307
(216) 762-8859

, Director

Philosophy: Howard House seeks to ease the transition from institutional confinement to community living by providing a positive home-like atmosphere in which the resident can accustom himself to society. Individual and group therapy sessions are also employed, and the staff assists each client in his attempts to obtain employment or to advance his education. Representatives from other segments of the community assist in counseling in an attempt to break down the barriers between former offenders and other citizens, and every effort is made to involve a resident's family in the rehabilitative effort.

Resident Obligations: Must be present for evening meals and attend counseling sessions as required. In addition, clients must assist in maintenance chores throughout the house. Employed residents will pay $18 per week rent.

2525 Victory Parkway
Cincinnati, Ohio 45206

Talbert House is now engaged in the fields of juvenile corrections, drug treatment, and crisis intervention. Through all of these runs a continuing thread: assisting the socially disadvantaged who need help.

Talbert House currently sponsors four adult halfway houses. Three service the ex-offender, the fourth is a drug therapeutic community.

The informal, family-style residence offers a positive alternative to an institutional atmosphere. Counseling focuses on the establishment and achievement of individual goals, while group therapy addresses the solutions of common problems faced by all residents.

Resident Obligations: Must attend required counseling sessions and house meetings. All residents will assist in house duties for an average of two hours per week. Employed residents will be expected to pay rent of $21 per week.

Other Types of Halfway Houses

Halfway houses also exist in related fields. Agencies sponsoring mental health, alcohol abuse, drug abuse, and juvenile rehabilitation programs increasingly employ community-based residential treatment centers. In the juvenile field, such facilities are commonly known as "group homes."

These halfway houses, like the ones in corrections, engage in a variety of programs. Some specialize in assisting individuals who have just left hospitals or prisons, others offer alternatives to institutionalization. Their sponsorship is as varied as their services. Federal, state, and local governments, together with religious and non-sectarian private corporations, all assist in establishing and funding these houses. Such varied sponsorship and programming is indicative of both the vitality of the halfway house movement and of the growing conviction that social problems must be solved within the community where they originated.

Ohio Community Reintegration Centers

Reintegration Center Program

1050 Freeway Drive North
Columbus, Ohio 43229
Robert L. Corder, Executive Director
(614) 466-8488

Three Community Reintegration Centers (CRCs) are one result of this policy. They are diversionary programs, designed to offer an alternative to the sentencing of men and women to prison even though they have demonstrated shortcomings while under supervision in an open society. Through an intensive intervention effort at this point, the department believes that it is possible to redirect such clients into productive channels and to avoid the social and economic costs of imprisonment.
