The Year in Perspective

This is the final report of the Department of Welfare and Institutions.

The year 1973-74 represented both an end and a beginning. The 1974 General Assembly enacted legislation separating the Department into a department of welfare and a department of corrections, effective July 1, 1974.

The Department of Welfare and Institutions was created in 1948 through merger of the old Department of Public Welfare and the former Department of Corrections.

The action again placing these functions of government in separate state agencies was recommended by outgoing Governor Linwood Holton, returning Governor Mills E. Godwin, Jr., the State Crime Commission and others, including the Board of Welfare and Institutions.

It was a turbulent year for the Department, particularly for its Division of Corrections. It was the year when, perhaps inevitably, rapidly changing times marked by a sudden public awakening to the problems of the nation's prisons overtook a system afflicted by the results of long-standing public apathy and neglect.

When these two forces met, an outcry arose from citizens, officials and investigative and study groups. The catalyst was a series of escapes, disturbances and other occurrences reflecting in many cases deficiencies in facilities, staffing or resources.

While strides toward a modern, innovative correctional system had been made through the years, these were overshadowed by shortcomings brought on by the traditional unpopularity of correctional programs and resulting budgetary restrictions.

After the separation legislation was enacted, the Department began preparing for the establishment of the two new agencies.

William L. Lukhard, director of the Department of Welfare and Institutions, was appointed by Governor Godwin to become commissioner of the new Department of Welfare, which was to absorb the Division of General Welfare.

The Governor chose his senior executive assistant, Jack F. Davis, to become director of the new Department of Corrections when it began operations. It would consist of three operating divisions. The Division of Youth Services would remain intact. The Division of Corrections would be renamed the Division of Adult Services. A new division, the Division of Probation and Parole Services, would take over the administrative responsibilities of the Probation and Parole Board, which would continue its adjudicatory functions.

The 1974 General Assembly also created the Rehabilitative School Authority to be composed of all educational facilities operated in the Department of Corrections' institutions. The Authority's board consists of three gubernatorial appointees, plus the directors of the divisions of Adult Services and Youth Services, the Chairman of the Probation and Parole Board, and the director of vocational education for the Virginia Department of Education. The board will employ a superintendent and present its own budget to the General Assembly.

Among top-level personnel changes to occur during the year was the appointment by Governor Godwin of Nathaniel W. Perdue, executive secretary of the Probation and Parole Board, as a member of the board. Perdue succeeded Charles P. Chew, the board's long-time chairman and director, who retired after a thirty-year career in probation and parole work.

Richard M. Oliver, who had been superintendent of the State Farm, became Director of the Division of Corrections.

Despite the controversies, criticisms and difficulties, the Department, each of its divisions and its personnel continued to serve its clients and the Commonwealth with diligence, determination and dedication.

As the year ended and the Department divided into separate agencies, the men and women of the Department of Welfare and Institutions resolved to carry on in that same spirit.

DIVISION OF CORRECTIONS*

The Division of Corrections found itself under intense public security brought about by several well publicized escapes and unusual incidents at the institutions; investigations by a special grand jury and by the State Crime Commission; and increased interest on the part of citizens and legislators in programs and facilities for adult offenders.

A select committee of departmental employees developed minimum standards for the operation of all adult institutions. Areas studied included classification; security; discipline; work, education, and recreation programs; health, food, library, and chaplain services; inmate activities and privileges; and physical facilities.

Another major study produced a Blueprint for Action in Virginia Corrections. The "Blueprint" provided specific proposals for upgrading field units, suggestions for revising the classification process, new definitions of custody status, and recommended expansion of the wage incentive plan to all industrial programs.

A central furlough committee was established for the purpose of reviewing furloughs approved at the institutional level. The committee is charged with notifying the chief law enforcement officer and the Commonwealth's attorney of the jurisdiction to which an inmate is to be furloughed, and the same officials in the sentencing jurisdiction.

Among new guidelines issued were those establishing uniform regulations for inmate transportation, institutional count procedures, visiting, inmate grievances, educational release, and community activities.

Security at the State Penitentiary was increased by the division of two cellblocks into quadrants, improved lighting, the purchase of television surveillance equipment, and the utilization of metal detectors. In February, a relief valve was provided for the Penitentiary's receiving unit with the conversion of a cellblock at the State Farm, Powhatan, for use as an additional receiving and classification center for felons.

Governor Godwin announced in June that correctional officers would receive a one-step pay increase on July 1 in addition to the one-step increase for all state employees on that date. With these two steps, the range for qualified correctional officers is now $7,344 to $9,600. The Governor said that an additional two-step raise for correctional officers would be among the highest priorities proposed to the 1975 legislature.

A new facility was added in August with the leasing of the former Norfolk City Jail Farm property. The opening of the institution, St. Brides Correctional Center, made possible the conversion of the former Tidewater Correctional Unit to a work release unit. St. Brides also has housed inmates engaged in the final phases of a contingency management program. The Center operated under the jurisdiction of the Bureau of Correctional Field Units until the end of the fiscal year, at which time it was upgraded to major institution status.

In April, Governor Godwin ordered an inspection team to visit each of the state's correctional installations where wooden barracks are still in use and to report any improvements needed. In June it was announced that $340,000 would be expended on repairs and equipment at the 10 "temporary" facilities.

Other major changes within the Bureau of Correctional Field Units included the establishment of three geographic areas—Northern, Western, and Eastern—each with an area administrator.

The 1974 session of the General Assembly passed legislation striking the requirement that 1,600 inmates per day be furnished for road work; the Director of Corrections now furnishes inmate labor subject to availability.

Three buildings to be used for vocational training in air conditioning and refrigeration, general building trades, and welding were completed at three field units.

Six field units were converted into all misdemeanant housing, making it possible to assign misdemeanant inmates within a reasonable distance of their homes, as well as separating them from felon inmates.

The Floyd Correctional Unit, which was closed in February, was reopened in June to house geriatric inmates.

The Pamunkey Unit was closed during the year, with its agricultural operations being transferred to the State Farm. Farming operations at other field units were phased out with the exception of vegetable gardens and the Wise Correctional Unit's apple orchard.

Three field units (two of them "temporary" facilities) were removed from the Bureau's supervision and placed under the jurisdiction of the Pre-Release Activities Center. These "ACE" facilities (Adult Correctional Enterprises) are the former Tidewater, Woodbridge, and Pulaski Correctional Units. They house work release inmates, and the former Pulaski unit houses study release inmates as well.

The Harrisonburg Correctional Unit was converted from both work and study release to a total work release unit. Work release and study release were discontinued at the Pocahontas Correctional Unit in order that the facility might be utilized to help reduce the population at the Penitentiary.

A 15-month program was launched in May with the aim of improving the reading and mathematics skills of offenders under age 21 who have not received the equivalent of a high school diploma. The project is financed through Title I funds (Elementary—Secondary Education Act,) employs Virginia Commonwealth University instructors, and is operating at all the major institutions, plus several field units. In addition, individually prescribed instruction (IPI) was introduced at two institutions.

Several Penitentiary projects, including the newly formed Creative Workshop and the Spring Street Free Theater, received much favorable attention. Also during the year, the Penitentiary hired its first female correctional officers.

The Penitentiary's Spring Street Jaycees were named the state's most outstanding chapter and the nation's most outstanding institutional chapter. The Jaycee chapter at the State Farm, Pewhatan, won second place honors in the national competition.

The State Board adopted amendments to the Rules and Regulations for the Administration of Local Jails and Lock-Ups and approved minimum standards for the employment of paramedics. In addition, the jails section held its fourth annual jail management seminar.

Legislation was passed in 1974 allowing the state to reimburse localities for the salaries of treatment, classification, and other personnel employed by jails; previously, such reimbursement was allowable only for physicians and other medical personnel.

Also as a result of 1974 legislation, a local governing body may enter into agreements with hospitals or private clinics for the purpose of securing medical services for jail prisoners. Compensation for such services will be governed by regulations of the State Board of Corrections.

The 1974 General Assembly provided for compensation to be awarded in the event of death, permanent injury, or injury materially reducing earning power, when sustained by an inmate or juvenile ward in the performance of work.

DIVISION OF GENERAL WELFARE

Conversion of three categories of public assistance to the new federally administered Supplemental Security Income program on January 1, 1974, probably represented the most significant change in Virginia's welfare system during the year 1973-74.

Former recipients of aid under the Old Age Assistance, Aid to the Permanently and Totally Disabled, and Aid to the Blind categories became beneficiaries of the new program administered by the U.S. Social Security Administration.

Another major change was the General Assembly action adopting the Flat Allowance system of determining financial need of welfare clients. The new method, implemented on July 1, 1974, was expected to simplify the process and reduce the program's error rate.

Other legislation enacted in 1974 included the subsidized adoption program, whereby adoptive parents of children with special needs could receive assistance payments in a state-local cooperative effort; protective services for adults; and establishment of a support enforcement unit in the state agency in an attempt to require support from absent parents for children receiving assistance.

A manpower utilization unit was established in the division's central office, providing coordination of all work and training programs in localities in relation to their availability to recipients.

The Work Incentive (WIN) program was extended to the cities of Lynchburg and Martinsville and the counties of Henry, Madison, Montgomery and Pulaski, making a total of 19 localities participating in the program. In addition, the Job Orientation Motivation Demonstration project was extended.

Federal authorization was obtained for extending the Metropolitan Legal Aid Project until January 1, 1975.

There was an increase in referrals of children for health screening to detect the need for possible medical treatment under Medicaid.

It was required that family planning services be available to all recipients, where appropriate.

The Food Stamp Program was extended to 36 additional localities and planning was conducted for including six more localities early in the 1974-75 fiscal year, thus providing statewide coverage of the program.

Licensing standards for Family Day Care Homes were revised.

The Department worked in cooperation with the State Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation toward making the purchase of services a reality for the mentally retarded and developmentally disabled citizens of Virginia. The Department of Welfare has access to federal funds through Federal Social Security Act service programs and has amended the State Plan to provide for the Purchase of Services for the mentally retarded in the State. This provision has the potential for making badly needed resources available to mentally retarded persons who are in need of special services if they are to successfully return to and function in the community.

DIVISION OF YOUTH SERVICES

The central treatment facilities operated by the Division of Youth Services are in the midst of a major reorganization. This effort, being undertaken as a part of the Learning Environments Program, has as its major thrust the development and implementation of treatment programs based on the individual needs of children.

Development of the plan was completed in 1973-74. Included were name changes for the facilities to reflect the learning center concept, administrative reorganization, and staff training in specialized treatment units. Planning is underway and timetables have been developed to coeducate a number of the centers, develop more specialized cottage treatment units and upgrade staff skills for working with children in the specialized units.

The Learning Environments Program is an effort to provide a continuum of services for a small percentage of those children who come in contact with the juvenile justice system. This is not an entity unto itself but an effort to deliver services based on the needs of individuals. It must be viewed as a part of the total youth services system with all efforts being directed toward the goal of bringing together resources to meet the ever-changing needs of youth.

The Delinquency Prevention Service, which has as its goal the development of a network of youth service systems to carry out its mission of youth development and delinquency prevention, was active across the Commonwealth to encourage related program planning and development. Two formally organized Youth Service Systems offices were created in Hampton and Newport News. The prevention service expects to be able to accelerate the development of the youth service system concept as a consequence of a recent grant which will allow the placement of regional systems specialists in two of the Division's regional offices.

The Reception and Diagnostic Center made gains in expediting the intake and evaluation process, both by internal adjustments and by taking advantage of the steadily increasing capabilities of the community components. It also made considerable headway in instituting guidelines and procedures for the whole rapidly expanded special placements program.

The Mobile Psychiatric Clinic was able to achieve considerable improvement in the area of psychoeducational assessment and to add, perhaps as a first in the nation, the discipline of occupational therapy to the services it makes available to the Learning Centers.

On July 1, 1973, the Division of Youth Services began the development of the State operated court service system. From that date until June 30, 1974, State court service units were developed in whole or in part to serve 20 of the state's 31 judicial districts. In addition, all of the work was completed during the fiscal year for the acceptance of 4 more locally operated units into the State systems on July 1, 1974. With this addition, approximately 62% of the population of the state will be served by State operated units.

A system for the administration of the State-operated court system and community youth homes and consultation to the locally operated system, detention homes and probation houses was developed during the year. This was accomplished through the establishment of six Youth Services Regional Offices throughout the state. All are staffed and in full operation.

Interstate Compact functions and operations were transferred from the Compact Administrator to the Supervisor of After Care Services during the year. It is anticipated that the Divisional Director will soon be appointed Compact Administrator and the Supervisor of After Care Services will continue to function as Deputy Administrator.

The Training Section, which provides direct training services and scholarship aid to employees of those agencies encompassed by the Division, now has 12 Training Specialists positions. During the 1973-1974 fiscal year, this group was responsible for the training of over 1200 juvenile corrections employees in 16 different job classifications at 39 separate agencies. The subject matter covered 14 separate areas, with the trainees amassing over 21,600 total hours. Approximately 250 individuals benefitted from the part-time scholarship aid, and 11 benefitted from the full-time scholarships.

PROBATION AND PAROLE BOARD

During the year, community correctional centers were opened in Richmond and Charlottesville for new parolees who lack homes or jobs; inmates about to be paroled in an effort to ease their adjustment back to free society; and not-so-recent parolees experiencing domestic, employment or other difficulty.

The centers provide concentrated casework for up to 90 days. Each center is staffed by a superintendent and lay counselors who reside at the facility. The capacity of the Richmond center is 24 while that at the Charlottesville center is 30.

Teams of probation and parole officers and vocational rehabilitation counselors began a surveillance and treatment program for persons under supervision who have drug problems. The program operates under a contract between the Probation and Parole Board and the Virginia Department of Vocational Rehabilitation.

The job development program has branched out into additional areas of the state and now operates in Richmond, Roanoke, Northern Virginia, Tidewater, Danville and Charlottesville. The staff researches the area for available jobs in order that prospective parolees have job potentials in the community.

During the year, 1,536 persons were paroled, 1,098 were discharged from parole and 258 paroles were revoked.

(1) General Relief cases represent unduplicated count, excluding cases open in other programs that were supplemented from General Relief Funds. Amount of assistance includes supplementary payments.

(2) Cancellations and refunds deducted from totals shown in Table ... have not been deducted from the amount of assistance for the several programs shown in this table.

(3) Auxiliary Grant Program implemented in May, 1972. Emergency Assistance-ADC Cases are payments made for cases and recipients receiving money payments, therefore the amount of cases is duplicated, and is not included in the total cases receiving assistance column. Emergency Assistance-Other Needy Families are payments made for needy families with children who are not receiving maintenance assistance.

(4) Medical Assistance for the Aged program discontinued during fiscal year 1970 due to implementation of the Title XIX, Medicaid Program.

(5) Payments made to Intermediate Care Facilities on behalf of OAA and APTD recipients became part of the Title XIX, Medicaid Program January 1, 1972. The reporting of such payments and recipients was continued by this department through June 1972. The data shown in these categories for this year reflects only money payment recipients and amount of such payments.

(6) OAA and APTD recipients were converted to the Supplemental security Income Program January 1, 1974. The Auxiliary Grant Program is to supplement those recipients of assistance in December 1973 whose SSI payment is less than the December 1973 public assistance payment.
