The following table shows adult offenders first and re-released from Wisconsin adult correctional institutions during calendar year 1975. Table 1 presents characteristics of adult releases during the past five years. It may be reviewed in Tables A, B, C, D, E, and F. Information in this report was primarily collected from adult institutional control officers and social service staff.

Adult correctional facilities of release were by census station, Wisconsin State Reformatory, Wisconsin Correctional Institution, Jesse M. Allen Correctional Institution, Wisconsin Correctional Camp System, and the following for women: Fox River Correctional Institution.

Release information applying to adult males is reported under the heading "Males" in the following tables except Table 1. Supplementary tables except Table 1, concerning releases after table 1 include information about releases from temporary adult holding, zero-stay, transfer, transfer out of adult institutions, and transfers to or from unauthorized, and hospital releases in 1975.

Fluctuation occurred over the five-year period in the numbers of first and re-released adult offenders (males and females combined). After a high of 1,723 releases in calendar 1971, annual releases reached a low of 1,016 in 1974, then recovered slightly to 1,028 releases in 1975. A net decrease of 27 percent occurred in annual releases between 1971 and 1975. Both the total first and re-released males and total first and re-released females reflected about the same trends as for the combined male-female totals.

Adult Male First Releases

As may be noted in Table A, the 740 adult male first releases in 1974 were the annual low during the five-year period, with a high of 1,157 first-released males in 1971. There was a net decrease of 20 percent, from 1,157 in 1971 to 931 in 1975 (with a low of 740 male first releases out in 1974). The proportion of male first releases attributed to Milwaukee County fluctuated between a high of 45.9 percent in 1972 and a low of 38 percent in 1975.

After a slight increase in average (median) length of stay from 18.6 months in 1971 to 20.2 months in 1972, a gradual decline has taken place to 17.8 months in 1975. This reflects a net decline of 0.8 of one month over the five-year period.

Average (mean) lengths of stay ranged from just over four months to nearly six months higher than the median lengths of stay over the five-year period. This occurs because small numbers of offenders released have had much longer stays than the bulk of the first releases.

The proportion of male first releases with regular felony commitments increased rapidly from 86.8 percent in 1971 to 96 percent in 1972. This proportion has increased gradually since 1972 to 98.6 percent in 1975.

Adult Female First Releases

Beginning with 129 adult female first releases in 1971, this release group decreased by more than half, to 55 releases in 1974. They then recovered slightly to 64 releases annually in 1975. In 1975, 48 percent of the first-released adult females were committed from Milwaukee County. A high of nearly 58 percent of these releases were from that county in 1973.

During the five-year period median lengths of stay ranged between 9.3 months and 11.7 months for the first-released females. Table B shows that the mean lengths of stay were from 1.3 months to 4.9 months longer than the medians.

The table indicates considerable year-to-year variation in many of the remaining characteristics for first-released females. The trend toward an increased proportion of female first releases with regular felony commitments was similar to the trend displayed by male first releases. However, the female trend came to a more extreme percentage by ending at 100 percent for the 1975 first releases.

First Released and Re-Released Adult Males Compared

Trends during the past five years for selected characteristics of first and re-released adult males may be compared in Tables A and C. In Table C a downward trend may be noted for the percentage that male re-releases comprised of total male releases, from nearly 27 percent in 1971 to under 20 percent in 1975. Total males released decreased from 1,582 releases during 1971 to 1,160 releases in 1975, after a low of 915 releases in 1974.

Median stays of first-released males ranged from 0.1 month shorter to over five months longer than for the re-released males. The proportion of regular felony commitments increased sharply to over 96 percent in 1972 for the first-released males. The rise in the proportion of re-released males with regular felony commitments came in 1974 and reached the same level in 1975 as for the first-released males.

Note: Juvenile transfers to adult institutions were discontinued in March 1971.

First and Re-Released Adult Females Compared

Five-year trends for selected characteristics for first and re-released adult females may be compared in Tables B and D. Wider year-to-year variations were revealed among the female re-releases (Table D) than for parallel characteristics for the first-released females (Table B). This can largely be attributed to substantially smaller numbers annually of re-released females. The proportion of re-released females among total females released ranged from a low of nearly six percent to a high of 12 percent during the five-year span. Total numbers of females released annually (total of first and re-released females) dropped drastically from 141 in 1971 to less than half, or 61, by 1974.

Note: Juvenile transfers into adult institutions were discontinued in March 1971.

A set of 15 supplemental tables follows this discussion to provide detailed information about adults released during calendar year 1975. Tables 1 through 8 contain details about both first and re-released clients from Wisconsin adult correctional institutions. The remaining tables report on first releases only.
