Subgrant #76-03-12-8-2898-5 Second Year Refunding Report

Antoinette Brinkman, Charles Susaitch January 1977

Pull reviewed the history, organization, and progress of the telender Participation Advisory Cormittee (OPAC) project. It was found that the various committees at the institutions had generated a number of project ideas but none had yet been operationalized. The committees have not had input into Division of Corrections programming plans, and no procedure has been established to implement this function.

Responses to a participant survey were analyzed. The major findings were that the goals of the project were understood; respondents were generally satisfied with the level of progress towards goal attainment and with project support staff. Access to the inmate constituency appears problematic at WCI. All of the staff respondents but only one-third of the inmate respondents felt that committee meetings were frequent enough.

Major PES recommendations were that a mechanism for facilitating OPAC review of DOC program planning should be developed and utilized and that emphasis should be directed towards the implementation of proposals generated in the first five months of the project. It was also recommended that progress in these areas be accomplished before efforts are made to extend the OPAC concept to juvenile institutions and to the Bureau of Probation and Parole. Several procedural recommendations were also made.

The following comments were made by a DOC official with respect to a draft of the following report. The time span between the issuing of the draft report and the final report did not allow for the incorporation of these comments. Points two and four are particularly useful and would have been incorporated in some form in the final report.

- 1. Whenever you use "inmate," please use "resident." I suggested that in my response to your survey questionnaire.
- 2. In your section on OPAC Progress, you may want to consider mentioning the September 20, 1976 all-OPAC meeting at WSP. That was a historic get-together. Probably, that event could not be equaled anywhere in the United States at any time in its history. On that date, offender representatives from all major Wisconsin state corrections institutions, for males and females, convened with Division of Corrections staff members to engage in joint planning for the conduct of resident-staff institution program planning committees.
- 3. The credit union idea currently being discussed at WCI and KMCI is not quite the same as the one reported in the state of Oregon. In Oregon the CU was organized by ex-offenders (i.e., those no longer under state supervision). CU privileges were apparently extended to institution residents. Thus, legal concerns were minimized.
- 4. You noted that the Division of Corrections Administrator needed to become directly involved in OPAC requests to encourage program development activities. Since no involvement has occurred to date, you noted: "The authors have not been able to establish the reason for this situation." You may have overlooked the following:

Executive Committee Members January 28, 1977 Page 2

- a. As you noted on Page 2, OPAC has been operational for but four to five months. Time is therefore a factor.
- b. The OPAC Supervisor terminated employment in November 1974, as you noted on Page 2. The short tentre, which includes time for orientation and committee the description and committee the description and committee the description and committee the description and committee the description.
- c. Allyn Sich of the common think don Administrator in August 1976. The common his immediate offention of sebject common to be her ministration to heing transaction and the here is a profit of the level to heing transaction and the his sections.
- d. Proposal development, according to 12 understanding is still in formative stages. Time is needed to review ideas, develop full concepts, explore reports of similar undertakings, discuss strategies, etc.
- 5. You headed one section as "Confusion Regarding the Goals of OPAC." When I read your analysis, I thought the word "Confusion" should be replaced with "Understanding." Your analysis showed that 11 out of 11 staff respondents were seen by you to have grasped essentially the basic OPAC goals; 8 out of 11 resident respondents were coded "...as embracing the basic goals of OPAC." Of the three resident respondents whose "...answers were coded as inaccurate..." one was reported to be a new OPAC member. Your analysis certainly did not point toward "confusion."

I. History

The Offender Participation Advisory Committees (OPACs) started

The IPACs were created in each of Wisconsin's medium and maximum security correctional institutions. The initial mission of the IPACs was to provide "consumer input" into funding proposals to the Wisconsin Council on Criminal Justice (WCCJ) by the Wisconsin Division of Corrections (DCC). Subsequent to their formation, the IPACs were utilized to provide input to such WCCJ funded projects at the Inmate Complaint Review bystem (ICRS), the Mutaal Agreement Program (MAD) and the Training and PIAC ment Program (TAPP). Following this initial activity, the IPACS were Lift to develop on their Gwn. In the absence of administrative likection, the five existing IPACs continued with varying spacess.

The metasorphosis of IFACs into CPACs stated in the spring/ summer of 1975 and culminated in the granting of LEAA funds ($45,847) in the late fall of 1975. The purpose of the grant was to establish a full-time professional staff capable of coordinating the activities of and providing technical assistance to the individual IPACs (now OPACs). In addition to the increase in capability, the OPAC grant provided for an expanded charge. Whereas IPACs responded to WCCJ funding proposals, OPACs were to respond to more general DOC programming plans as well. In addition, although IPACs were exclusively reactive, OPACs were to be active, i.e., they were to be responsible for the initiation, planning, and implementation of innovative programming that would facilitate the reintegration of the inmate into the larger community.

II. OPAC Organization

An OPAC committee is in operation at each of Wisconsin's medium and maximum security facilities. The individual committees are chaired by a non-voting Bureau of Clinical Services staff member from the particular institution. The committees are made up of four inmate representatives and four institutional staff members. The inmate representatives are elected for terms of twelve months. During an election, panels of inmate representatives are selected; hence, when a vacancy occurs, it is filled by a panel member. Staff members are appointed to the OPAC committees by the superintendent of the institution (i.e., the warden) for a twelve-month term. Certain committee members are paid for their participation in OPAC meetings. Security staff members receive five dollars per hour, inmate members receive fifty-five cents per meeting.1

An OPAC support unit is housed in Madison in the Bureau of Clinical Services. The support unit consists of a Supervisor who has a Ph.D. in Social Psychology, two Psychological Services Associates who have bachelor's degrees in Behavioral Sciences and a secretary. The WCCJ grant provides the resources for this support unit. An OPAC Advisory Committee provides at first intrative and policy direction to the project. The Advisory Committee is node up of nine DCC staff region. 1976. The immate representative elections were noted in July, 1976, and initial meetings of the OPACs took place during August, 1976. Hence, the OPAC committees have been operational for four to five months. Three of the five committees have conducted and analyzed institution-wide surveys of the inmate bodies.

The OPAC support unit has undergone a change in the supervisor position. The individual initially hired for the job resigned in November, 1976. Since this time the two Psychological Services Associates have performed the support function under the general supervision of the Director and Assistant Director of the Bureau of Clinical Services. The supervisor position is presently open and the Division of Corrections is involved in the recruitment process.

A. OPACs Productive Function

As mentioned carlier, one aspect of the OPACs was to develop innovative programs that would facilitate the reintegration of the incarcerated individual into the larger society. Review of materials provided to the Program Evaluation Section (PES) staff, interviews with key OPAC actors and questionnaires received from OPAC participants indicate that this has been the principle and perhaps exclusive focus of the OPACs. Exhibit I (pages 3 and 4) contains short descriptions of the projects or ideas entertained and pursued by the various OPAC groups. To date, none of the projects have been implemented.

¹Compensation for inmates is limited by state statute. Security staff members must be paid for any overtime work; if they participate during regular duty hours, they must be replaced by another security officer.

Communication Skills for Officers - Committee members at WCT are preparing a preliminary proposal describing a communication skills course for officers. This project would require a grant to provide officers with training in the areas of communication skills, cultural awareness, sensitivity and personality. Input for such a curriculum would be provided by the security staff, residents, and the education and social services departments.

Project Aware - A proposal for Project Aware was submitted by a resident to the WSP OPAC committee. The project would involve "rap" sessions" between residents at WSP and "problem youngsters" from various communities. The committee has voted to accept this project with certain modifications. The project will soon be sent to central office for a feasibility study.

Forensics Proposal - The OPAC committee at TCI spent several meetings discussing a proposal for a debate team or forensics group, which would serve as a means of developing speaking ability, leadership and self-discipline. Based on the limited number of residents who would be affected by such a project, the committee referred the proposal to the education department for their consideration.

Photography Course - The possibility of a photography course, taught by a resident volunteer, was discussed by OPAC members at TCI. The proposal was later deemed unfeasible by the committee.

B. OPACs Reactive Function

Perhaps the best way to describe progress in this area is to state that "nobody has asked." The mechanics of just how a program proposal would be directed to the OPAC committees for review and now under recaback would become incorporated into program development are unclear. General consensus from DOC officials is that such questions would have to be initiated by the Administrator of the Division of Corrections. To date such represents have not been used. The authors have not been able to datablish the reason for this situation. Monethalous, a presequicite for the fulfillment and ranking account for the fulfillment and ranking account for the structure is established.

AV., Perticipant Suppler

A servey instrument was distributed so all past and present OFAC committee participants. The instrument covered issues that had arisen from PES observations of OPAC and from discussions with OPAC participants, DOC officials, OPAC support staff and WCCJ program staff. The instrument is presented in Appendix I of this paper.

All responses received by January 25, 1977, were included in this report. PES received responses from 13 of 23 eligible staff participants (57%), 4 of 5 OPAC chairpersons (80%), and 15 of 32 inmate representatives (47%). The low inmate return is explained largely by our inability to contact inmate representatives who are no longer institutionalized. From the 20 active inmate representatives, PES received responses from 13 or 65%. We received responses from only 2 of 12 non-active inmate representatives (16%).

A. Membership Changes

The total number of voting OPAC participants at any one time is 40 persons (20 inmates and 20 staff members). From August 18, 1976 until January 6, 1977, three staff members and twelve inmates have resigned their OPAC memberships. Eight of the resignations came from the male medium security facilities at Kettle Moraine and Fox Lake. Resignations would appear to be due to competing demands for time or geographical changes within the correctional system for both staff and inmate represen-The survey respondents included one staff member tatives. and two inmates who were former OPAC participants. These individuals indicated that the reason for their resignations involved schedule changes or conflicting time demands, none indicated negative reactions to OPAC. Most of the former participants (particularly inmates) could not be located for one reason or another (usually because they had transferred institutions or had left the institutional system altogether). In summary, although the inmate representation at medium security institutions is rather unstable, the condition would arrear chronic and not amenable to modification due to the rather short stays of persons in medium security facilities. Perhaps the most reasonable approach would be to arrange for informal participation (non-voting status) for the inmate representatives next in line for active status. Such an arrangement rold hopefully application the disruptive nature of the manufacture and representative of the manufacture and representative of the manufacture and representative turners and re completely to the entry of the form of the

was to initiate the structure for inmate self-government. This additional goal is not stated in the OPAC grant and is one that is generally not embraced by the DOC. Of 15 inmate respondents, PES coded the responses of 12 as embracing the basic goals of OPAC. One respondent (a new committee member) was not cognizant of OPAC's goals, two respondents' answers were coded as inaccurate. One respondent felt that the purpose of OPAC was to provide a mechanism for policy and rules review. This inaccuracy is problematic because such a misconception can lead to unfulfilled expectations and resultant disillusionment. In general, there is remarkable unanimity and clarity among OPAC participants regarding the goals of the project.

C. Frequency and Duration of OPAC Meetings

Individual OPAC committees meet twice a month or every other week; meetings last approximately two hours. PES initially felt that this was not frequent enought to engage in the complex activities the OPACs were being asked to undertake. Of eleven staff representatives responding to the survey questionnaire, all eleven felt that the present frequency of meetings was adequate. One individual felt the meetings were too long, the remainder felt the meetings were of appropriate length. Of 15 inmates responding to the questionnaire, ten desired to meet more frequently and five felt that the frequency of meetings was appropriate. Eight of the inmate respondents wanted to meet once a week; two respondents wanted to meet twice a week. Two inmate representatives felt the meetings should be longer; the remainder felt the length of meetings were adequate. A staff/inmate difference regarding frequency of meetings is apparent.

Resolution of these differences will be difficult. Security staff members frequently attend OPAC meetings during their "off work" hours. This means that they must leave home, attend a two-hour meeting and then return home. Attendance at OPAC meetings by treatment and educational staff members must come at the expense of their other responsibilities. From an institution staff perspective, the costs of increasing the frequency of meetings may be prohibitive. On the other hand, as the OPACs contains to develop, there will be a growing stable bound increased time demands. A stabley that might be unificated in for the OPAC committees to determine that might be unificated to subconditions. Person with facts any least layered to subcondition, person with facts any least layered to subconditions, the entire of requirements and concentrate the sale attained.

in initial concern of the OPAC committees was that he who representatives have sufficient mobility/opportunity to contact the individuals who elected them. It was thought that special problems would be encountered at the two maximum security facilities, where inmate mobility is constrained. Of the 13 active inmate representatives responding, four maintained that they had insufficient access to other inmates. One inmate from the maximum security facility at Waupun felt that an "office space/ scheduled hours" arrangement would be desireable, another Waupun inmate felt that a bulletin board system would be useful. Arrangements to provide inmates additional access to their representatives at Waupun are being made along the "office hours" model. In addition, OPAC suggestion boxes have been placed throughout the institution. Two inmates at Fox Lake, a medium security facility, felt that there was insufficient opportunity to talk to members of the inmate body. This was also a problem identified by the OPAC chairperson from Fox Lake. It is imperative that this lack of inmate mobility be rectified at Fox Lake. Steps should be taken at the institution level to eliminate this problem. DOC central office members should intercede if local efforts are unsuccessful.

Two additional respondents stated that they did not have sufficient access although from the responses provided, it was apparent that these respondents wanted to speak to groups such as the Legislature.

E. Satisfaction with the Support Unit

on iku ingalikin kin

Although the respondents were not directly asked to express satisfaction with the performance of the OPAC support unit, most respondents to the survey addressed this issue. As indicated in the grant proposal, the OPAC support staff are serving coordination and technical assistance functions and according to the OPAC participants, they serve these functions in an admirable fashion. One inmate felt the support unit staff person took the side of the staff too often. One staff participant thought the support unit was a waste of money (this individual also felt that OPAC in general was a waste of money). Three individuals expressed a desire to have support unit staff spend more time that the institutions in getting products implemented.

F. Participant Estimation of Progress from a Coal Attainment,

It is a state of the control of the

G. The Authors Go Beyond the Data

In going through the questionnaires, the authors came to notice a trend that coincides with some anecdotal information the authors have received. It would appear that OPAC is more popular with inmate participants than with staff participants and that at some institutions a staff/inmate schism may be developing. It is not possible for us to point to direct evidence of such a trend; it was a number of little things that led to this conclusion, e.g. comments explaining answers to this survey questions were more negative by the staff respondents. Perhaps staff resentment is developing in reaction to an early emphasis on inmate, e.g. the inmate bodies have been surveyed for ideas but the institution staffs have not; inmates elected representatives but staff representatives were appointed; the name of the project is the Offender Participation Advisory Committee, a misnomer since one-half of each committee is comprised of institution staff. The authors are cognizant of the "fragility" of this "finding" and it is an "intuitive finding", but the feelings are strong enough that we felt obligated to present them.

V. Recommendations³

Although OPAC is still in its infancy, it is gaining credibility a viable means of receiving "consumer" input in correctional planning.

The authors believe that in the second year of funding, attention should be directed to the following:

- A. The development and utilization of a machanism by which correctional programming being pleased by EOC can be reviewed by the OF/C committees. The intent of this rectachdation is to place the Of/C. in an edvisory role not only with respect to UCC Amagni projects, but also with respect to sever expect to the order of the plane of the intent of the recent of selection to make it is related for requirement of the latest of planning.
- projects that have been initiated in the first five months of the project. The reinforcement effect of having an idea implemented would be extremely beneficial to the morale of of the OPAC project.
- C. Substantial progress in the above areas should be accomplished prior to any effort to expand the OPAC concept to juvenile institutions and the Bureau of Probation and Parole.

³Specific recommendations regarding issues identified in the participant survey are embodied in that discussion. The three recommendations that follow are more general in scope.
