To the Honorable Alfred G. Schroeder,
Chief Justice of the Supreme Court,
and to the members of the Judicial Council:

In compliance with the provisions of Rule No. 1.03(c) of the Supreme Court, this annual report on the judicial business of the courts of Kansas for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1978, is respectfully submitted.

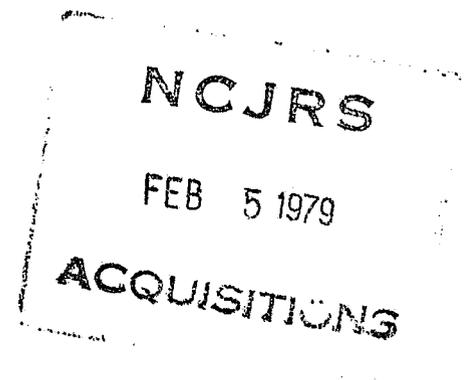

As explained in the preface within, this annual report is of special significance in that it presents data for the first fiscal year of court activity under both the unified trial court structure and the two-tiered appellate court structure. Moreover, for the first time, it includes information on appellate court caseload and on all those cases formerly reported exclusively in the Judicial Council Bulletin.

The changes in the judicial system structure precipitated major revisions to the caseload information system. The impact of these revisions fell most heavily on the district court clerks, who bear the responsibility for reporting all cases. Their response to this burden was gratifying and typical of the dedication they have demonstrated in the past. We are indebted to them for their continued diligence.

Yours very truly,

PREFACE

The publication of this Annual Report on the Courts of Kansas marks the first time that the Office of the Judicial Administrator has produced a report which incorporates statistical information on all types of cases at both the trial and appellate court levels. In years past, the annual report has contained only district court data. Publication of data on the appellate courts and on the limited and special jurisdiction courts then in existence was left to the Judicial Council. The unification of the lesser jurisdiction courts into the district court in January, 1977, meant that all cases formerly brought into those courts were filed in the district court. Hence, the number of district court cases filed in fiscal 1978 was almost ten times the number filed in fiscal 1976. The jurisdictional change also meant that production of the Judicial Council Bulletin in its previous format would have been replicative of the district court publication. Only appellate court information would have remained unique to the Bulletin. Since it had served, however, as the sole source of the total statistical picture of the Kansas courts, it was felt that that integrity of depiction should be maintained by publishing the appellate court data with the district court data in this new annual report.

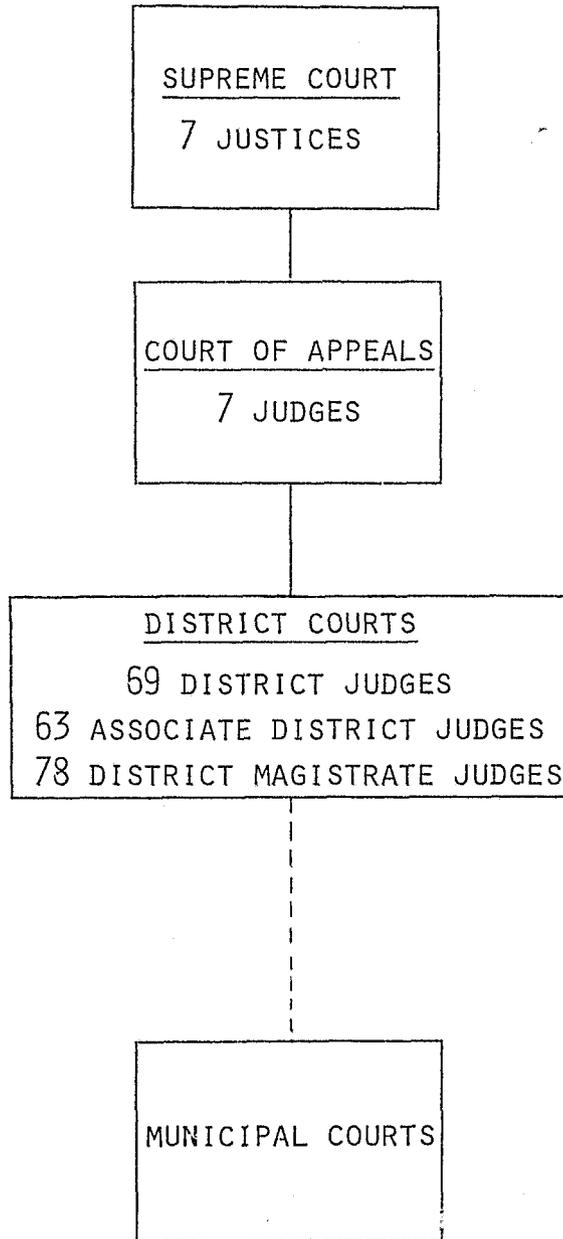

The publication also is distinguished by being the first annual report to include narrative segments on the court system. Descriptions of its structure, history, jurisdictions, and administrative operations are presented. It is hoped that these will enhance the reader's understanding of the Kansas courts and, thereby, serve as an aid in interpreting the statistical data.

Any document which represents such a significant departure from past practice must be accompanied by words of caution. The changes brought about by unification necessitated major changes to the caseload reporting systems used previously in the district and limited and special jurisdiction courts. Procedures, forms, and, in some cases, definitions were altered in effectuating a more detailed and useful depiction of district court caseload data. Only a few categories of cases were left unscathed by changes either in jurisdiction or in reporting procedures. The statistical information on district courts is, therefore, very difficult to compare with data from past years. Consequently, the comparative data and annual trends assessments presented are few and limited in scope.

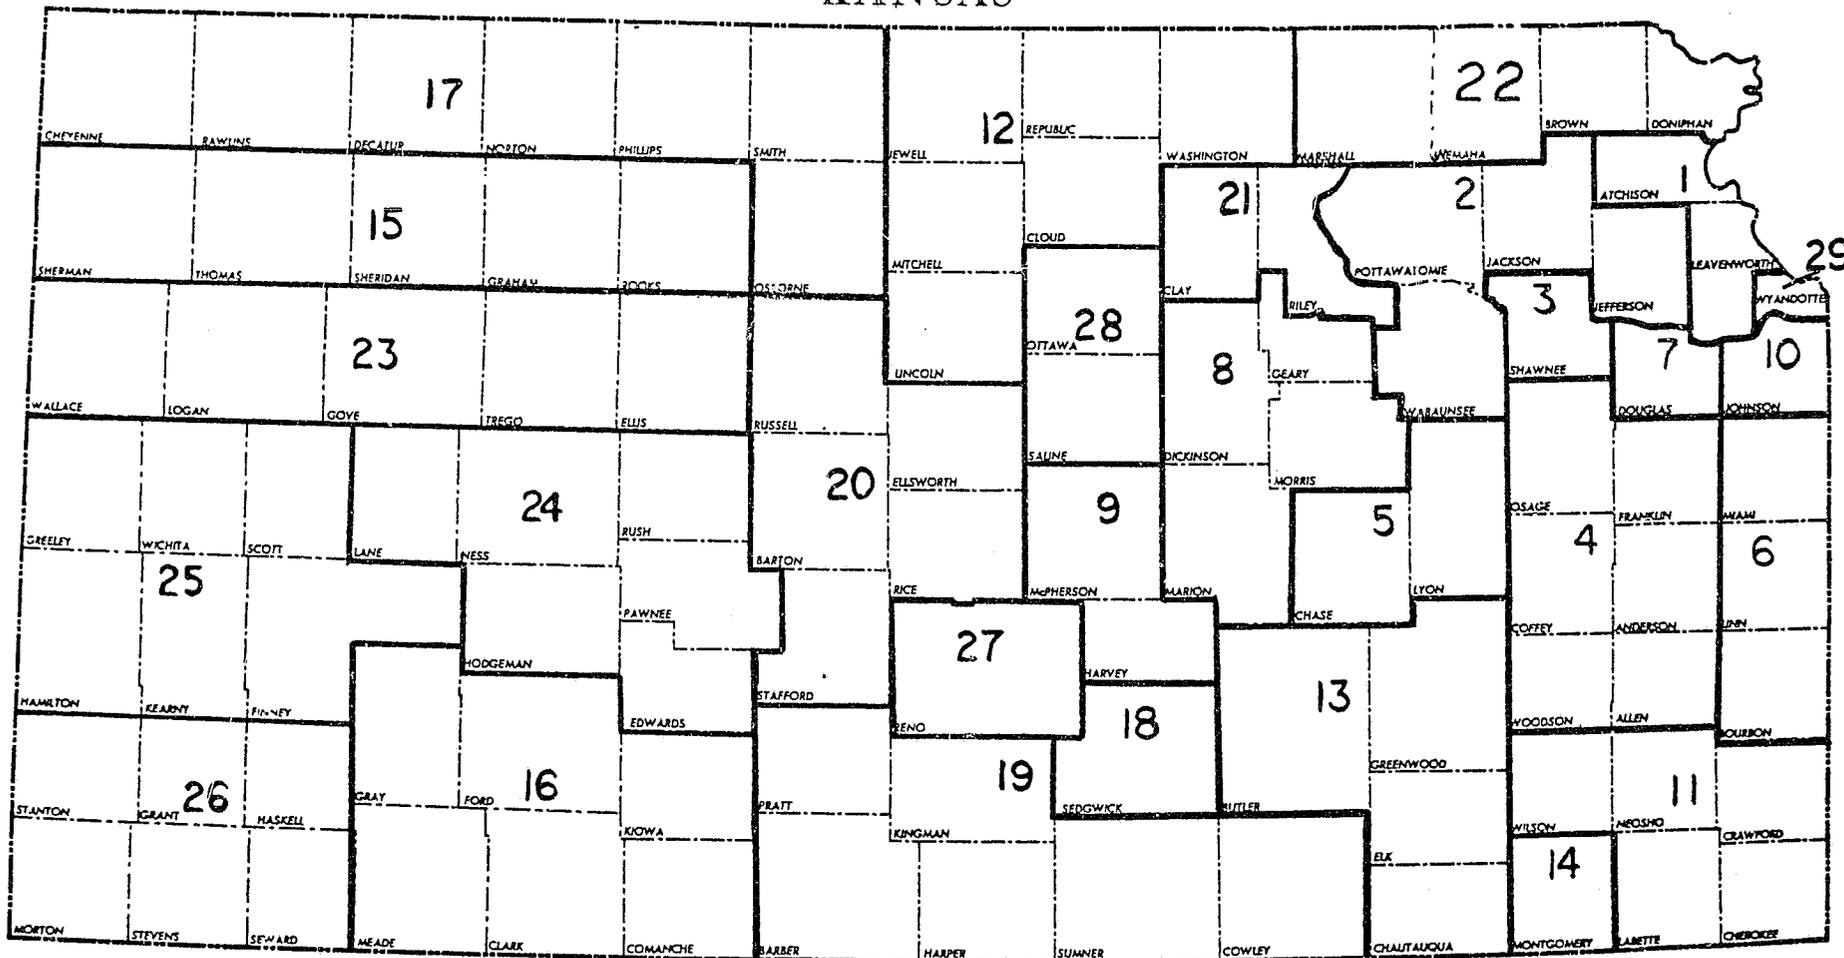

This document replaces an annual report which had remained in essentially the same format for approximately ten years. The caseload information system which provides the data for this new report replaced a system that had experienced only minor changes in the ten years of its existence. Alteration had become a necessity in order to serve a forward-looking judiciary and to provide a better tool for its improvement. The new caseload information system and the newly formatted Annual Report on the Courts of Kansas will meet these needs and provide a comparative base for the future.

THE KANSAS JUDICIAL SYSTEM

KANSAS

KANSAS JUDICIAL DISTRICTS

(as of January 13, 1975)

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE KANSAS JUDICIAL SYSTEM

The Kansas judicial system, consisting of district courts and the Supreme Court, was instituted with the advent of statehood in 1861. The next hundred years brought little structural change. Separate county courts of limited jurisdiction heard probate, juvenile, minor civil, and traffic cases. Justices of the peace administered the law throughout much of the state.

Change began in the mid-1960's. The Office of Judicial Administrator was established in 1965 to assist the Supreme Court in exercising its administrative and supervisory responsibilities over the judicial system. In 1968, justices of the peace were abolished, in effect, by severely limiting their jurisdiction. Their former jurisdiction was transferred to county courts; and in most counties the functions of the probate, juvenile, and county courts were consolidated under one judge. In 1972, a new judicial article of the Kansas constitution was adopted. It brought many improvements, paving the way for unification of the trial courts and permitting the establishment of a court of appeals. A citizens' study committee was appointed in 1973 for the purpose of examining the judicial system and recommending changes to implement fully the judicial article.

The work of this committee ultimately resulted in the unification of the state's trial courts in January, 1977. Probate, juvenile, and county courts were abolished, as were magistrate-level courts of countywide jurisdiction. The jurisdictions of these courts were consolidated into the district court. At the same time, a court of appeals was established to improve the judicial system's handling of its appellate caseload.

Change has not stopped with the functional unification of the trial court. In 1978, the legislature authorized the initiation of state funding of the personnel costs of the nonjudicial employees of the district courts. The program of gradually phasing in full funding of salaries by the state will begin in January 1979.

THE COURTS OF KANSAS

The Kansas Constitution provides that there shall be one court of justice divided into a supreme court, district courts and other courts as provided by law. Statutory provisions which took effect in January, 1977, established a court of appeals as an intermediate appellate court. These three courts constitute the unified state judicial system. Municipal courts exist as entities of the cities which establish them, but they have jurisdiction over ordinance violations only and, therefore, are not state courts. The constitution provides the supreme court with administrative authority over all courts in the state.

The Supreme Court

The Supreme Court is Kansas' highest court. It consists of seven justices, each of whom is selected by the governor. He appoints from a list of three qualified individuals submitted to him by the supreme court nominating commission. After the first year in office, a justice is subject to a retention vote in the next general election. If a majority of electors votes to retain the justice, he or she remains in office for a term of six years. Justices are subject to a similar retention vote at the conclusion of each term.

The justice who is senior in terms of continuous service is designated by the constitution as the chief justice, unless he declines or resigns the position. The chief justice exercises the administrative authority of the Supreme Court. It is his responsibility to implement and carry out the administrative rules and policies established by the court.

The Supreme Court is provided by the constitution with original jurisdiction in proceedings in quo warranto, mandamus, and habeas corpus. Its jurisdiction over direct appeals in criminal cases is limited to those involving the two most serious classes of felony or life imprisonment. Its appellate jurisdiction also extends to any case in which a Kansas or United States statute has been declared unconstitutional. The Court has discretionary power of review over decisions of the Court of Appeals, and may transfer cases from one court to the other. The Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction over the admission and discipline of attorneys. It also may retire, discipline, suspend, or remove for cause judges who fail to observe the Code of Judicial Conduct.

The Court of Appeals

The Court of Appeals is an intermediate appellate court. It consists of seven judges, each appointed in the same manner as Supreme Court justices. The same nominating commission serves for both courts. Court of Appeals judges must stand for retention election after the first year in office and, thereafter, at the conclusion of each four-year term. The chief judge of the Court is appointed by the Supreme Court.

The Court of Appeals sits in panels of three judges as well as en banc. Although Topeka is designated as the site of the Courts' principal offices, it is authorized by statute to hear oral arguments in any county courthouse in the state. In the interest of expediting the disposition of its caseload and in consideration of the sources of cases and other factors, the court travels extensively. Therefore, the three-judge panel is used frequently.

The Court of Appeals has jurisdiction over all appeals from the district court except those reviewable in the district court and those in which direct appeal to the Supreme Court is required. Writs of habeas corpus also may be prosecuted in the Court of Appeals. The Court may request the transfer to the Supreme Court of any case before it. (Effective July 1, 1978, the court was provided exclusive jurisdiction over the review of orders or decisions of the state corporation commission in public utility rate cases.)

The District Court

Since the unification of the courts in January, 1977, there are no state courts of limited or special jurisdiction. The state has a single trial court of general jurisdiction, the District Court. It is a court of record exercising both original jurisdiction over civil and criminal matters and limited appellate jurisdiction.

There are three types of judges of the District Court. District judges exercise the full power and authority of the Court. Associate district judges have jurisdiction similar to that of district judges, except that they lack jurisdiction over class actions and actions in quo warranto or mandamus. District magistrate judges have jurisdiction over probate and juvenile matters, misdemeanors, felony preliminary examinations and certain civil actions involving amounts of $3000 or less. The decisions of a district magistrate judge are appealable within the district court. Appeals from decisions of district or associate district judges go to the appellate courts.

The state is divided into twenty-nine judicial districts, comprising from one to seven counties. There are seven single-county districts and twelve districts of five or more counties. There is at least one district judge in each district but not all districts have associate district and district magistrate judges. As of June 30, 1978, there were 69 district judges, 63 associate district judges, and 78 district magistrate judges in the state.

Judges of the district court are selected in one of two ways. In twenty-three districts, the voters have approved nonpartisan selection of judges by a district nominating commission with appointment by the governor. A judge thus appointed must stand for retention election after one year in office. If a majority of votes cast favors his or her retention, the judge then serves a full four-year term. Thereafter, he or she is subject to a retention vote at the conclusion of each four-year term.

In the remaining six districts, judges run for office on a partisan ballot. Judges so elected serve terms of four years.

THE COST OF THE SYSTEM

The state funds the operations of the appellate courts. In addition to the salaries and operating expenses of the appellate judges and their office staffs, this funding includes the judicial administrator's office, the appellate clerk's office, the law library, the Judicial Council, and the disciplinary administrator's office. Base salaries and travel expenses of district and associate district judges and court reporters also are borne by the state.

For the district courts, county governments furnish physical facilities, utilities, magistrate judge and nonjudicial personnel costs, salary supplements (in some counties) for district and associate district judges, and all other operating expenses. A state grant to counties of $1,725,000 in Federal Revenue Sharing funds was used in fiscal 1978 to defray partially court-related salary expense at the local level.

As reported by the state budget director, the total estimated fiscal 1978 state budget, less capital improvements, was $1,612,899,244. Of this amount, $12,569,414, or less than one percent, was identified as court-related expense. Since the only fiscal data available for counties are appropriations totals and then only for the calendar year, no reliable estimate of total county or county district court-related expenditures is available.

ADMINISTRATION OF THE COURTS

The Kansas constitution provides the Supreme Court with "general administrative authority over all courts in this state." In exercising this authority, the court establishes the rules and policies governing the administration of the judicial system.

The chief justice serves as the administrative head of the system. As such, his supervisory responsibilities extend to all aspects of system management. He is empowered by statute to delegate his responsibility and authority as necessary to insure the smooth and efficient operation of the system.

The statutes further provide that the court and each justice may have additional powers and duties prescribed by law. The Judicial Department Reform Act of 1965 divided the judicial districts into departments. Currently, there are six, each of which is assigned to a justice who is responsible for the supervision of all administrative activities within his or her department. Each is given the power to assign judges from one district to another and to require such reports as necessary to keep abreast of the business of the courts.

A district judge is appointed by the Supreme Court as administrative judge for each district. He is responsible for the clerical and administrative functions of the court or courts in his district and directs the assignment of cases within the district.

The administrative structure of the court system places the responsibility for management at each level with judges. As a consequence, judges who fulfill these administrative roles have less time available to perform their adjudicative functions. Kansas has recognized the need for professional administrative staffs to aid judges in managing the system at both state and district levels.

Office of the Judicial Administrator

The Judicial Department Reform Act of 1965 created the position of Judicial Administrator as an appointee of the Supreme Court. The administrator is responsible for the implementation of the rules and policies of the Court as they apply to the operation and administration of the courts. Other duties may be prescribed by law or specified by the Court. The statutes provide that all state expenditures for district court operations be approved by the judicial administrator and, further, that all district court wage and salary claims to be paid by the state be certified by him.

The duties delegated to the Judicial Administrator by the Supreme Court have expanded his role beyond the relatively narrow statutory delineation. They include:

- examination of district court dockets and determination of need for judicial assistance;
- compilation of statistics on activities of all state courts and preparation of annual report;

assessment of periodic need for interdistrict assignment of judges with appropriate recommendation to departmental justices; supervision and examination of administrative practices in district courts; administrative guidance to the district courts; preparation and administration of the budget under the direction of the supreme court; training of judicial and nonjudicial personnel; representation of the court to the legislative and executive branches and to the public.

The scope of these duties is such that the court has appointed a staff to assist the Judicial Administrator. The professional staff members have specific areas of responsibility in aid of the administrator. A brief description of these responsibilities by general function follows.

Fiscal Operations

The Office of the Judicial Administrator is responsible for the administration of budgeting, payroll, and general accounting activities for the judicial system. These tasks are accomplished by an accounting staff under the direction of a controller, who also maintains liaison with executive agencies in related fields. During the past year the functions of personnel and inventory record-keeping were handled by the accounting staff. It also keeps financial records for and provides reports to the appellate courts and other state-level administrative departments.

The state funds a program to provide court-appointed counsel and other necessary legal assistance to poor persons who are charged with felonies. The Judicial Administrator is responsible for the administration of the expenditures for the program under the guidance of the Board of Supervisors of Panels to Aid Indigent Defendants. He certifies attorneys' claims for payment and authorizes payments as appropriate. Included in the program are public defender offices in three districts; and funds also are provided to a nonprofit corporation which provides legal assistance to indigent inmates of correctional facilities. Total expenditures from the fund to Aid Indigent Defendants were $2,452,877 in FY 1978.

Education and Training

The Office of the Judicial Administrator takes a major role in the development and coordination of training programs for court personnel. The focus of the training effort is on: improving judicial and administrative functions and procedures; interpreting statutory responsibilities and requirements; and improving individual skills and job performance. Many educational programs are initiated by the staff, but it also works closely with committees representing various judicial and nonjudicial personnel groups.

The office aids in the development of major statewide conferences each year for judicial and nonjudicial personnel. In addition, seminars on special topics are conducted throughout the year for juvenile probation staff, court transcriptionists, court reporters, clerks, chief clerks and court administrators, municipal judges, administrative judges and other judges of the district court. An orientation program is presented for new judges. The staff also coordinates the out of state training activities of both judicial and other staff personnel.

The assimilation of courts of limited jurisdiction into the district court under unification brought with it a requirement for certification of nonlawyer judges by the Supreme Court. The Office of the Judicial Administrator provides the staff function for the committee of judges which has developed, and now maintains, a reference manual and the certification examination as required by the Court. Moreover, the administrator's staff coordinates specialized instruction for these judges and the administration of the examination.

Assistance to the Trial Courts

The Judicial Administrator has the responsibility for improving the management of the district courts in aid of the administrative judges of each district. The administrative assistance provided to the courts includes: analysis and development of improved managerial procedures and practices; maintenance of reference manuals; provision and analysis of information affecting court operations; revision of district court budget forms; and staff support in development of the court personnel rules. The recommendations for improvements in these areas take many forms, from memoranda to individual clerks to policy suggestions for administrative judges to proposed administrative orders of state-wide application.

Compilation and Assessment of Court Caseload Information

The Judicial Administrator is charged with the responsibility for compiling statistical information and producing the annual report on court activity. In fulfillment of this obligation, his staff compiles annualized data for the appellate courts and administers an extensive system for the reporting of all cases filed in the district court. This caseload reporting system constitutes a management information system, the primary uses of which are to:

- determine composition of caseload, as to type;
- determine whether caseload backlog exists and, if so, its composition;
- pinpoint and examine trends in filings and terminations;
- monitor age of pending cases;
- assess causes of delay in case disposition;
- forecast caseload;
- provide data on court workload;
- determine need for additional or fewer permanent personnel;
- determine need for temporary assignment of personnel from one court to another.

The clerk of the district court in each county is responsible for the accurate and timely reporting of all cases. The Office of the Judicial Administrator provides detailed instructions and conducts training sessions periodically to explain reporting procedures, answer questions, and solve problems. It also is responsible for the development, production, and distribution of various monthly and quarterly reports which provide management information for the administrative staff, district administrators, clerks, judges, and justices.

STATISTICAL INFORMATION
COURTS OF KANSAS

We cannot use even the best and most scientifically compiled statistics to solve the fundamental problems of jurisprudence. They cannot give us a measure of values of competing claims, or a criterion of justice, or a theory of what we are seeking to bring about by means of law. But it does not follow that we have no use for statistics. On the contrary, ... we must learn how to use statistics to control the quality of the output of the operations by which the legal order is maintained and carried on.

THE APPELLATE COURTS

The changes in the appellate rules which accompanied the establishment of the Court of Appeals in January, 1977, have made year-to-year comparisons of appellate caseload data difficult. Modifications to the procedures have meant that cases are docketed at the appellate level at an earlier stage than under the prior rules. Because some of these cases would have been terminated prior to docketing under the old rules, real growth in the total number of cases docketed (commencements) is somewhat obscured by the adjustment to the rules. For example, since fiscal 1976, the last full year under the old structure, cases docketed at the appellate level have increased 116%, from 438 to 944. Over the same period, cases terminated have increased 127%, from 340 to 772. As illustrated in these figures, the actual growth in cases docketed is masked by the "statistical" growth due to the change in appellate rules.

Comparison of the number of cases terminated by opinion would provide a more accurate measure of real growth. In fiscal 1976, 276 opinions were rendered; in fiscal 1978 this number was 571, an increase of 107%. In 1976, the Supreme Court had seven justices and two commissioners. In 1978, there were seven justices and seven Court of Appeals judges. Although the increased number of appellate judges would be expected to produce more opinions, the number of judges increased by only 56%. It is apparent, then, that there has been significant growth in appellate court filings and terminations since fiscal 1976.

Following is a single table which presents total caseload data for both appellate courts. Following that are separate sets of tables for each court.

There were 2,157 motions filed with the clerk of the appellate courts in fiscal 1978 relating to Court of Appeals cases. Of these, 1,207 were disposed of by the clerk and 950 were disposed of by the court. There were 35 motions for rehearing; all were denied.

THE DISTRICT COURT

THE CASELOAD INFORMATION SYSTEM

The unification of the state trial courts in January, 1977, necessitated major revisions to the caseload reporting mechanisms in use at that time. There had been separate systems for the district courts and for the limited and special jurisdiction courts. The former system, which used electronic data processing, was administered by the Office of the Judicial Administrator; the latter, which involved only manual processing, was administered by the Judicial Council. For the period from January through the end of fiscal year 1977 in June, only minor changes were made to each system. Ultimate responsibility for compilation of statistical data remained divided between the judicial administrator's office and the Judicial Council.

Effective with fiscal year 1978, the Judicial Council through its chairman, the Chief Justice, turned over its responsibility for caseload data collection to the Judicial Administrator. On July 1, 1977, a new set of forms was implemented for the reporting of all cases filed in the district court. The diverse reporting procedures based on case type were retained: general jurisdiction cases are reported under a process which uses a computer to store and summarize data; special jurisdiction cases are reported and summarized manually. The segment of the system which uses electronic data processing can be described as transaction-based. In other words, the reporting of certain information on an individual case is triggered by a specific event in the life of that case. The segment involving only manual processes is a summary system in that cases are reported quarterly on forms which allow for logging procedures. Cases reported under the transaction-based segment are: all nontraffic criminal cases, all regular civil cases, including domestic relations actions, and all limited civil actions (involving amounts of $3,000 or less and using the special limited actions procedures), excluding small claims. All remaining cases are reported in summary fashion and data is compiled manually. These cases include: formal juvenile cases, probate cases of all types, small claims, traffic cases, and other miscellaneous cases.

Although the procedural distinction based on case type was retained, extensive modifications were made to the forms used in the reporting system. In the computerized segment, in order to collect more detailed and useful information, three forms were instituted to replace the previous single form. Computer output was modified as well. A series of monthly caseload activity reports was added for the first time and the quarterly reports were redesigned completely. The manual segment also incurred extensive revisions. The number of forms was reduced to four from the eight that had been used under the previous structure. All the remaining forms were new and represented major changes in the information gathered. Moreover, the reporting requirements were switched from an annual basis to a quarterly one.

The statistical tables which follow comprise information from both segments of the reporting system. They present a general overview which incorporates information on all types of cases. The full detail available is portrayed in only a few tables depicting statewide caseload activity.

As was indicated in the earlier sections of this document, the annual report has undergone extensive revisions in both format and content. Much information, previously not provided in the district court report, is depicted for the first time. These modifications, coupled with the changes which have occurred in the judicial branch and in its caseload reporting systems in the past eighteen months, severely limit the comparability of this report's data with that from previous years. Any attempts at such comparisons should be made with extreme caution; the variables affecting such analyses are both numerous and complex.

* Due to the changes in the reporting system, this civil total is the most comparable to the civil caseload totals in the annual district court reports of the past.

 This subtotal provides the most comparability with total caseload figures published in past annual reports.

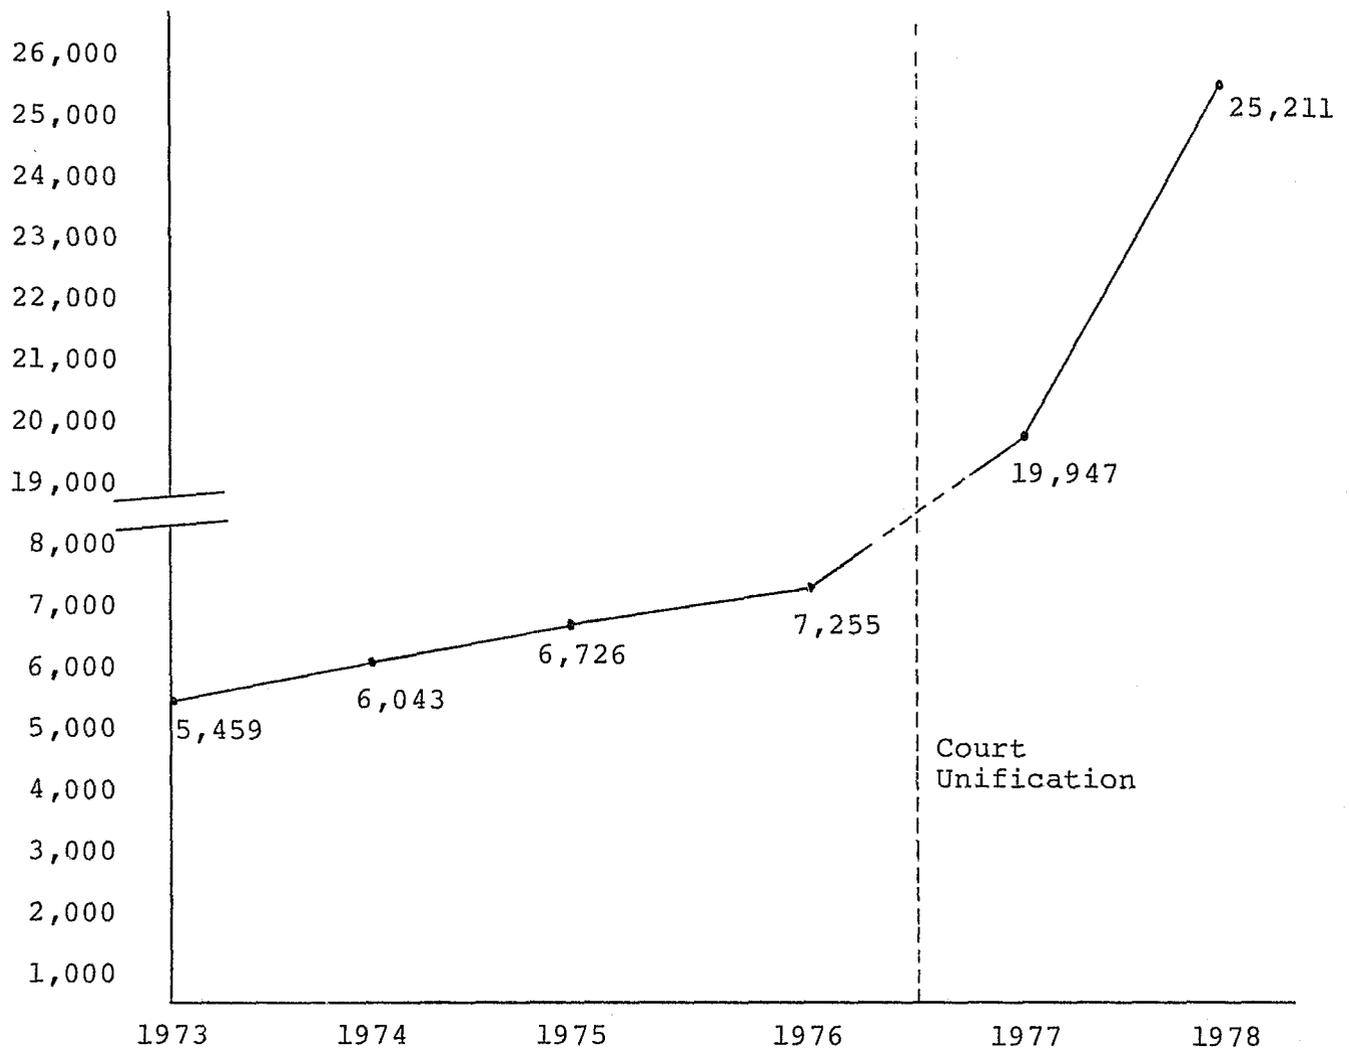

⁺ This figure includes an adjustment for the termination of pending cases not previously reported under this system.

DOMESTIC RELATIONS AND OTHER REGULAR CIVIL CASES FILED, STATEWIDE, FY 73-78

The graph above depicts total annual domestic relations and other regular civil cases filed in the district court for fiscal 1978 and the preceding five fiscal years. Only these civil cases are shown because the method of reporting them has not been changed and, therefore, comparability is relatively unaffected by external change. The trend in filings of these cases has moved steadily upward, at an average annual growth rate of 4.7% since fiscal 1973.

CRIMINAL CASES FILED STATEWIDE FY 73-78

This graph depicts total criminal cases filed in the district court for fiscal years 1973 through 1978. It is presented to demonstrate the dramatic effect of court unification in January, 1977, on the number of criminal cases filed in the district court. Prior to unification most misdemeanor cases were filed in special jurisdiction courts; also, most felony cases were taken through the preliminary hearing phase at that lower level. Consequently, many criminal cases did not rise to the district court level and, thus, were not counted as district court filings. Since January, 1977, all criminal cases are filed originally in the district court. This structural change makes it difficult to assess trends since unification. It does seem certain, based on other available data, that the steady growth rate experienced prior to unification has continued, but it is impossible to say whether that rate has accelerated.

* The definition of this dispositional category was changed effective with cases filed on or after 7/1/77. Cases filed prior to that date which terminated during the year were to be considered "contested" if an answer was filed. The new definition restricted the term to mean actual trials. Therefore, this total contains contested cases under both definitions and is not comparable to past data.

FOOTNOTES TO CIVIL AND CRIMINAL CASE SUMMARY TABLES

1. Included in this category are: product liability cases; personal injury cases arising from auto accidents; medical malpractice actions; property damage suits, and all other torts.
2. Included in this category are: personal property suits, small claims and tax appeals; actions under KSA 60-1507; habeas corpus actions; workmen's compensation cases; and all other regular civil actions excluding domestic matters.
3. This category includes divorce, annulment, and separate maintenance cases.
4. "Limited Actions" are those involving claims of $3,000 or less, filed under the Kansas Code of Civil Procedure for Limited Actions.
5. Included in this category are: personal property suits; appropriate small claim case appeals; and all other limited actions.
6. The definition of cases to be terminated with this type of disposition was changed July 1, 1977. Any case filed on or after that date was to be reported with a "contested court" disposition only if the case went to trial (both sides appearing to present testimony or evidence with the intent that the judge, or jury, will render a verdict). Prior to that date a case was considered "contested" if an answer was filed. Any case filed prior to July 1, 1977 was terminated under the previous system with its definitions. Therefore, this figure includes "contested" cases of both kinds and the "formal trial" count is somewhat less. The value of comparing this figure with previous years' is limited due to this definitional change.
7. Limited actions cases were reported under this system for the first time in FY 78. Cases pending on July 1, 1977 were not transferred due to the volume of work such a requirement would have generated. Consequently, the dispositions shown here have been adjusted to include those cases. Experience has indicated that the vast majority would have terminated within a year of their filing dates. Therefore, we have postulated that all those pending were terminated during the year.
8. This includes appeals both from municipal courts and from decisions of district magistrate judges.
9. This category includes any appeals dismissed.
