The Honorable Scott M. Matheson
Governor, State of Utah

June 30, 1979

The Honorable J. Allan Crockett
Chief Justice, Supreme Court of Utah

The Honorable Members of the Utah State Legislature

In compliance with the mandate contained in Section 78-3-21 (b), it is a pleasure to submit this Annual Report Utah Courts to you and to the people of Utah. This is the sixth such report providing information reflecting the business transacted by the Judicial Branch of Government of Utah.

Circuit Court implementation was accomplished during the past year with little, if any, significant problems. This was achieved largely because of the extensive preparatory work completed during the eighteen months prior to July, 1978. Extensive training for judges, clerical personnel, and local non judicial officials provided for a relatively smooth transition period. Those of us in the Judiciary, working with the new Circuit Court, recognize that implementation is only the first step toward improving Utah's misdemeanor level courts. Already, over the past year, changes have been made which reflect the desire of our Circuit Court Judges and their administrative staff to make substantial long-term, meaningful improvements. Electronic court recording equipment is now used within each Circuit Court location. Records, forms, and related filing systems, have been changed in order to reduce redundancy and improve clerical cost-effectiveness. Also, a uniform bail bond schedule is now in use in every Circuit and Justice of the Peace Court.

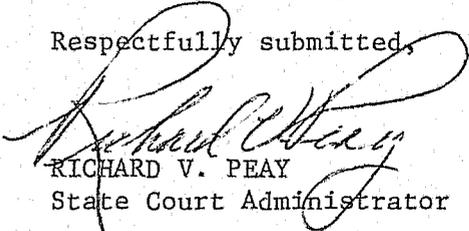

Judicial training programs have been expanded and improved upon with increased participation by judges and administrative support personnel. Out-of-state instruction was provided for in-state training by the American Academy of Judicial Education and by the National Judicial College at Reno, Nevada. All new Circuit Court Judges who had not served as a City Court Judge have now attended the National Judicial College at Reno, Nevada.

Trial Court Executives are now working in three of our multi-judge Circuits. These support personnel will free valuable bench time for the Judges while at the same time bring administrative knowledge and experience to the courts. Each Executive works directly for a Circuit Presiding Judge performing specialized administrative functions as support staff.

The much needed State Judicial Information System is now being developed with funds provided by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration under a National Discretionary Grant. The project, now in the systems design and feasibility stage, will be completed within three years and be a valuable aid to administrative decision making. Also, accurate and timely trial court workloads and performance information will give the legislature a comprehensive information base to aid in legislative decision making. Present plans allow for the information system to utilize computer technology and provide linkage between the trial courts and State Court Administrator's Office.

Each of the above described programs have been undertaken for the purpose of achieving an improved judiciary. We are pleased that Utah's legislature has seen fit to provide funds and authorize new programs. Only through such funding can we in the judiciary, improve our quality of service.

Respectfully submitted,

RICHARD V. PEAY

UTAH JUDICIAL COUNCIL CITIZENS ADVISORY COMMITTEE

Formed in 1975, the Utah Citizens Advisory Committee to the Judicial Council provides citizen input to the Judicial Council on matters of policy import and public concern. The Council, made up of 15 appointed lay citizens representing a geographical cross section of Utah's populous, meets once per month at the State Court Administrator's Office. Over the past several years the committee has undertaken several innovative programs, some of which are briefly listed:

1. Law and You Program: An educational program designed to familiarize the lay citizens with judicial processes.
2. Speakers Bureau: Judges that appear at circuit, school, and other groups speaking on appropriate topics of interest.
3. Proposed Public Information and Program for Meeting Inaccurate or unjust Citizens of Judiciary: A means to further inform public of sensitive matters that touch upon judges activities or the judiciary as a whole.
4. Proposed Public Information Program: A means to further inform the lay public of judicial processes.
5. Legislative Activity: Regarding key Judicial Legislative programs and proposals actively pursued. The Committee supports innovative programs which would improve Utah's judiciary.

Membership of the Committee as of July 1, 1979 are as follows:

STATE OF THE JUDICIARY

On behalf of the Utah Judicial Council, it is my pleasure to report Utah's judicial activities for our past year's general performance, progress made with ongoing projects, and our expectations for the future.

Utah's Judicial Council, although a relative newcomer to the role of state judicial administration, is fast becoming a pivotal point for both judicial policy formulation and execution. Our council, along with that of California's, is regarded by several court administration experts as being at the fore of modern state judicial organization. Fundamentally, the council structure is based upon a contemporary view that meaningful judicial administration policy will be developed where trial court judges at each of our three court jurisdictions can elect representatives to serve as council members. This democratic election process ensures that council activities evolve policy that transcends jurisdictional isolation and local court uniqueness while avoiding concentration of authority and power within a state office. The Office of the State Court Administrator serves as staff to the Council and is responsible for implementing council policy, it has also become the spokesman, or source of information for the judiciary in relation to other branches of government, the news media and the general public.

The success of the council and its administrative arm, the Office of the State Court Administrator, over the past six years can be largely attributed to the initial realistic view taken by the 1973 legislature of what form state court organization should be. The legislative enactment of the Judicial Council and Court Administrator's Office provided a model judicial organization that both strengthened and complimented Article VIII of Utah's Constitution. Based upon subsequent experiences and as illustrated in this report, Utah's Judiciary now has a method to bring about meaningful change, while preserving the basic substance and continuity afforded by our Constitution. Recognizing this history, I am pleased to report the general progress made within our Judiciary for July, 1978 through June, 1979.

The Court Administrator's Office is now engaged in implementing several far-reaching programs that point out the crucial role of Judicial Council involvement in improving our state judicial system. Implementation of the Circuit Court Act is now largely complete, and follow-up activities by the Administrator's Office are taking place that will evaluate the new system. A definitive set of integrated District and Circuit Court rules of practice serve as a uniform procedural guide. A statewide uniform bail schedule for Circuit and Justices of the Peace Courts was developed through the coordinating efforts of the office. This schedule will allow for uniformity in setting bond and fine amounts of all state class B and C misdemeanors ranging from traffic to game and fish violations. In addition, the Court Administrator's role in securing Circuit Court space and facilities has served as an impetus to upgrading courtroom and chamber space formerly provided by city governments.

The Judicial Council's prior efforts in expanding both in-state and out-of-state continuing education opportunities were, during the past year, aided by increased availability of state funds. A total of five training education programs were held in-state for District and Circuit Judges and Justices of the Peace. In addition, many of our Circuit Court Judges were provided specialized training at the National Judicial College in Reno, Nevada. Judicial education and training keep Utah judges current with statute and decisional changes in Utah and the rest of the nation.

The Court Administrator's Office is now proficient in planning, budgeting, administrative training, and technical services. These functions will be complemented by the development of a State Judicial Information System. This project has received funding from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration and receiving approval from the 1978 legislature. The new system, when operational, will aid in administrative decision making and in assessing trial court work performance.

Looking to the future there is genuine concern among all Utah Judges over the workload of the Utah Supreme Court, and the legislature is encouraged to recognize these problems and seek its solution. The Judicial Council encourages the legislature to formalize, by legislation, an expression of intent by its Interim Judiciary Committee to provide judicial membership on the Judicial Qualifications and Removal Commission. The council will also continue its efforts to have the legislature mandate an annual review of judicial salaries.

In conclusion, I report that the State of Utah's Judiciary, while not free from difficulty, is on a clearly defined upward course with a resolute determination that only quality judicial services will be accorded to Utah's citizens.

Respectfully submitted,

THORNLEY K. SWAN
Chief Judge and
Chairman, Utah Judicial Council

HISTORY OF THE JUDICIAL SYSTEM IN UTAH

A system of equitable justice has always been a concern of the people of Utah. As early as March 1849, less than two years after the "Mormons" entered the Salt Lake Valley, a constitutional convention was called to consider the political needs of the people of the "State of Deseret." The constitution adopted at that convention established three branches of government; legislative, executive, and judicial. The judicial branch consisted of a supreme court and such inferior tribunals as the legislature chose to establish.

The Supreme Court consisted of a Chief Justice and two Associate Justices elected by the voters for a term of four years. On March 12, 1849, Heber C. Kimball was elected Chief Justice with John Taylor and N. K. Whitney as Associate Justices. The bishops in the several Mormon church wards were also elected by the convention to serve as judicial magistrates. Captain Stansbury, an early Utah historian, wrote, "The jurisdiction of the 'State of Deseret' had been extended and was vigorously enforced upon all who came within its borders, and justice was equitably administered alike to 'saint' and 'gentile'."

In 1850 the Territory of Utah was created and admitted to the union. With the new territorial government came some changes in the judicial system. The justices for the Supreme Court were no longer elected by the people, but were appointed by the president to serve at his pleasure. The Territory was divided into three judicial districts with a federal judge being assigned to each district. The First District consisted of Great Salt Lake City and County, Tooele County, and the regions east and west to the limits of the Territory. The Second District consisted of Davis and Weber Counties, and the regions east, west, and north to the limits of the Territory. The Third District consisted of Utah, Sanpete and Iron Counties and all the country east, west and south to the territorial limits.

It was not long after the federal judges arrived in Utah that animosity developed between them and the local population, which was predominately Mormon. In 1852 the Territorial Legislature created, by statute, the County Probate Courts. The judges for these courts were local people elected by the legislature and commissioned by the Governor.

A rather controversial clause in the statute creating the county probate courts granted them "... original jurisdiction both civil and criminal, as well in Chancery as at Common Law, when not prohibited by the Legislative enactment..." Appeals from the probate court were to go to the federal courts.

The controversial clause granted the probate court concurrent jurisdiction with the federal courts in civil and criminal cases. Although elected by the legislature, the probate judges were usually bishops or other high ranking Mormon church officials. The people of Utah used the probate courts almost exclusively rather than the federal courts because of the so called "anti-Mormon" attitude of the federal judges appointed by the President.

Although appeals to the federal courts were not officially denied by the Mormon church, there were few appeals ever made. Chief Justice L. G. Brandeburg, the first Chief Justice appointed by the President, and Associate Justice Brochus finally deserted their posts and returned to Washington complaining that the Mormons refused to use the federal court system, but chose rather to establish and use their own courts.

The people of Utah maintained that the probate courts were needed because the federal courts were frequently not in operation. The First and Second District Courts held terms of court once a year and the Third District Court held only two terms of court a year. Quite often these terms of court lasted only a few days. The Territory's citizens also argued that because of the great distances and the time required to travel to the Federal District Courts, they needed a local court system which had broad enough jurisdiction to handle all their judicial needs. Although Justice of the Peace Courts had been established as early as 1852, the people felt their jurisdiction was too limited to meet their needs.

In June of 1874, the President signed into law a bill passed by Congress which effectively abolished the criminal jurisdiction of the county probate courts. However, the probate courts continued in operation as probate courts only until the Territory achieved statehood in 1896.

On January 4, 1896, Utah was granted full status as a state in the United States of America. Shortly thereafter, a constitution was adopted by the people of Utah. Patterned after the U.S. Constitution, the Utah Constitution established a judicial branch of government composed of a Supreme Court, seven District Courts, and Justice of the Peace Courts in as many counties, cities, and towns as chose to maintain them.

THE SUPREME COURT

Originally the Supreme Court was composed of three Justices with one of them being designated as the Chief Justice. The Justices were each elected to serve for six years after which they could run for re-election. In 1917 the State Legislature approved a bill adding two more Justices to the court making a total of four Associate Justices with one Chief Justice. The 1917 act also lengthened their terms of office to ten years. The Chief Justice was designated as the Justice with the least amount of time on the bench. Elections of Justices were staggered in such a way as to maintain a majority of experienced Justices on the bench. Justices ran for election on a partisan basis. As is still the case, the concurrence of three or more Justices was needed to render a decision for the court.

No other significant changes were made in the court until 1951 when the Legislature created the so-called "headless" or non-partisan ballot. Under this Act, the Justices were no longer to be elected on a partisan basis. In fact, candidates for the position of Supreme Court Justice were no longer to be affiliated with any political party or take an active part in party politics of any kind.

In 1967 the Legislature established a bipartisan nominating commission for the purpose of filling any vacancies that might occur in the Supreme Court. This Act also provided that all Justices running for re-election, even if running unopposed, must receive a majority of the votes cast or the position will become vacant and the nominating commission will have to fill it.

In 1969 a Judicial Qualifications Committee was established to recommend the "removal, suspension, censure, reprimand, or retirement" of any Supreme Court or District Court Judge. Grounds for removal were specified as willful misconduct in office, conviction of a felony, persistent failure to perform duties, and the habitual use of alcohol or drugs to the detriment of judicial obligations. Also in 1969, the Legislature passed a law which made retirement mandatory at the age of 72 for all Supreme Court Justices.

DISTRICT COURTS

From as early as 1850, Utah has been divided into judicial districts in order to provide for the equitable distribution of justice to all the people living in the territory.

From 1850 until statehood in 1896, there were only three districts in the territory. In 1896 the new constitution established seven district courts throughout the state in an effort to place the courts within easy access of all the state's citizens. District Courts were required to hold terms of court in each county seat within the district at least three times a year.

From the time of statehood until the present, there have been very few changes in the District Court. There has been some realigning of judicial districts over the years, but even these changes have been few.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE COURTS

"The duties of the Justices of the Peace in Utah Territory were outlined in an act passed in 1852. In 1874 an act was passed providing the base upon which the Justice of the Peace system in Utah now functions. The Constitution of the State of Utah, when ratified, in 1895, provided for the office of the Justice of the Peace using the same basic statutory concepts found in the 1874 act, and made the Justice's office an integral part of the court judicial system."

From the time of statehood until the present, there have been very few changes in the law relating to the Justice of the Peace. Justice Courts, like the Supreme Court and the District Court, were enumerated in the constitution rather than created by statute.

Traditionally, there have existed two types of justice courts in the state. Municipal justice courts may exist in any city or town that has not created a circuit court. They have exclusive original jurisdiction in all cases involving municipal ordinance violations. County justice courts are found in every county in the state with exception of Weber and Cache Counties. They have exclusive original jurisdiction in all county ordinance violation cases.

Even with their limited jurisdiction, the justice courts have always handled a substantial portion of the judicial business in Utah. There are currently over 183 justice courts in operation throughout the state.

Perhaps the most important change in the Justice of the Peace system since the adoption of the Constitution took effect in January, 1978. A recent bill passed by the Utah Legislature made it mandatory for municipalities and counties desiring to operate justice courts to provide adequate courtroom and auxiliary space for their justices of the peace.

The statute also made it mandatory for every justice of the peace in the state to attend at least one training seminar supervised by the Judicial Council every year. Justices of the peace are the only judges in the state that are not required to be formally trained in the law or be members of the bar.

CIRCUIT COURTS

The Circuit Court is a new statewide court of limited jurisdiction that replaced the former City Court system on July 1, 1978. With increased jurisdiction, the Circuit Court handles cases involving all classes of misdemeanors as well as civil cases where the sum claimed is less than $5,000.00. Historically, the City Courts trace back to 1901 when the legislature passed a law making it possible for the establishment of a City Court in all cities of the 1st class (Salt Lake City was the only city to qualify). The City Court had civil jurisdiction in all cases where the sums being contested were less than $500. Being a misdemeanor court, the City Court had the same criminal jurisdiction as the Justice Courts. The City Court Judge was appointed by a commission of local authorities. The City Court Judge, who had to be law trained, served as ex-officio and successor to the municipal Justice of the Peace.

Also passed in 1901 was a bill which permitted the establishment of "Municipal Courts" in cities having a population of between 15,000 and 40,000 inhabitants. The Municipal Court is almost identical to the City Court except for the population requirements. The judge was to be in good standing with the Supreme Court, be at least 25 years old, and serve as ex-officio and successor to the municipal and precinct Justice of the Peace. The Municipal Court Act specified the exact same civil, criminal, and territorial jurisdiction for the municipal court as for the City Court.

In 1917 the eligibility requirements for a municipal court were broadened to include cities with a population of between 7,500 and 50,000 inhabitants.

The City Court and Municipal Court operated as two separate and distinct entities under the law until 1919 when the City Court, Municipal Courts and the Justice Court in all cities of 7,500 inhabitants or more were consolidated into one court system known as the City Court.

Under the 1919 Act, the City Court has given the County wide territorial jurisdiction with original and exclusive jurisdiction in cases involving the violation of municipal ordinances. Civil jurisdiction remained at less than $500 and criminal jurisdiction remained the same as specified for the Justice Courts. No new or additional Justices of the Peace were to be appointed in those cities electing to create a City Court. Cities with a population of 7,500 to 50,000 inhabitants were permitted to have as many as four judges.

Over the years the Legislature has constantly revised the 1919 Act to meet changing conditions. In 1975 an amendment specified that cities having a population of 65,000 to 150,000 inhabitants may have four or more city judges, and cities with a population larger than 150,000 may have any more than four judges as determined by the governing body of the city. City Judges were elected to serve six year terms with a mandatory retirement at the age of 70.

Civil jurisdiction of the City Court has increased from the original $500 to any case where the sum claimed is less than $2,500. Criminal jurisdiction has always remained exclusive and original for all cases involving municipal ordinance violations and other criminal actions as prescribed for Justice of the Peace.

The City Court System and all acts pertaining to it were repealed in 1977. On July 1, 1978, the City Court System was completely replaced by a statewide misdemeanor court known as the "Circuit Court."

There are 33 Circuit Court Judges throughout the State. Each judge must be at least 25 years old and a member of the Bar in good standing. The State is divided into 12 circuits serving every county in the State as well as all municipalities that have previously had a City Court.

The Circuit Court is a court of record and as such, decisions are appealable to the District Court on the record of proceedings only.

The Circuit Court makes the services of law trained judges easily accessible to all the citizens of Utah. This does not mean that the Circuit Court has been designed to in any way limit or usurp the power and authority of the Justice Courts throughout the State.

JUVENILE COURTS

From as early as 1852, Utah has shown a concern for juvenile justice, however, it was not until 1905 that an official juvenile court was created, and not until 1965 that the juvenile court became a part of the judicial branch of state government. Prior to 1965, the juvenile court had been functioning as a part of the executive branch of government.

In 1852 the territorial legislature enacted a law enunciating the concept of parens patriae. The statute outlined certain conditions upon which the probate court was required to indenture and bind out a child without either the parent's or the child's consent. This set forth the legal responsibilities of the master (parent) and the minor (child).

In 1888 the legislature enacted a law establishing the "Territorial Reform School in Weber County," now known as the State Industrial School. This law gave the district court the authority to commit any minor, under the age of 18, to the reform school if the child was found guilty of any crime other than murder.

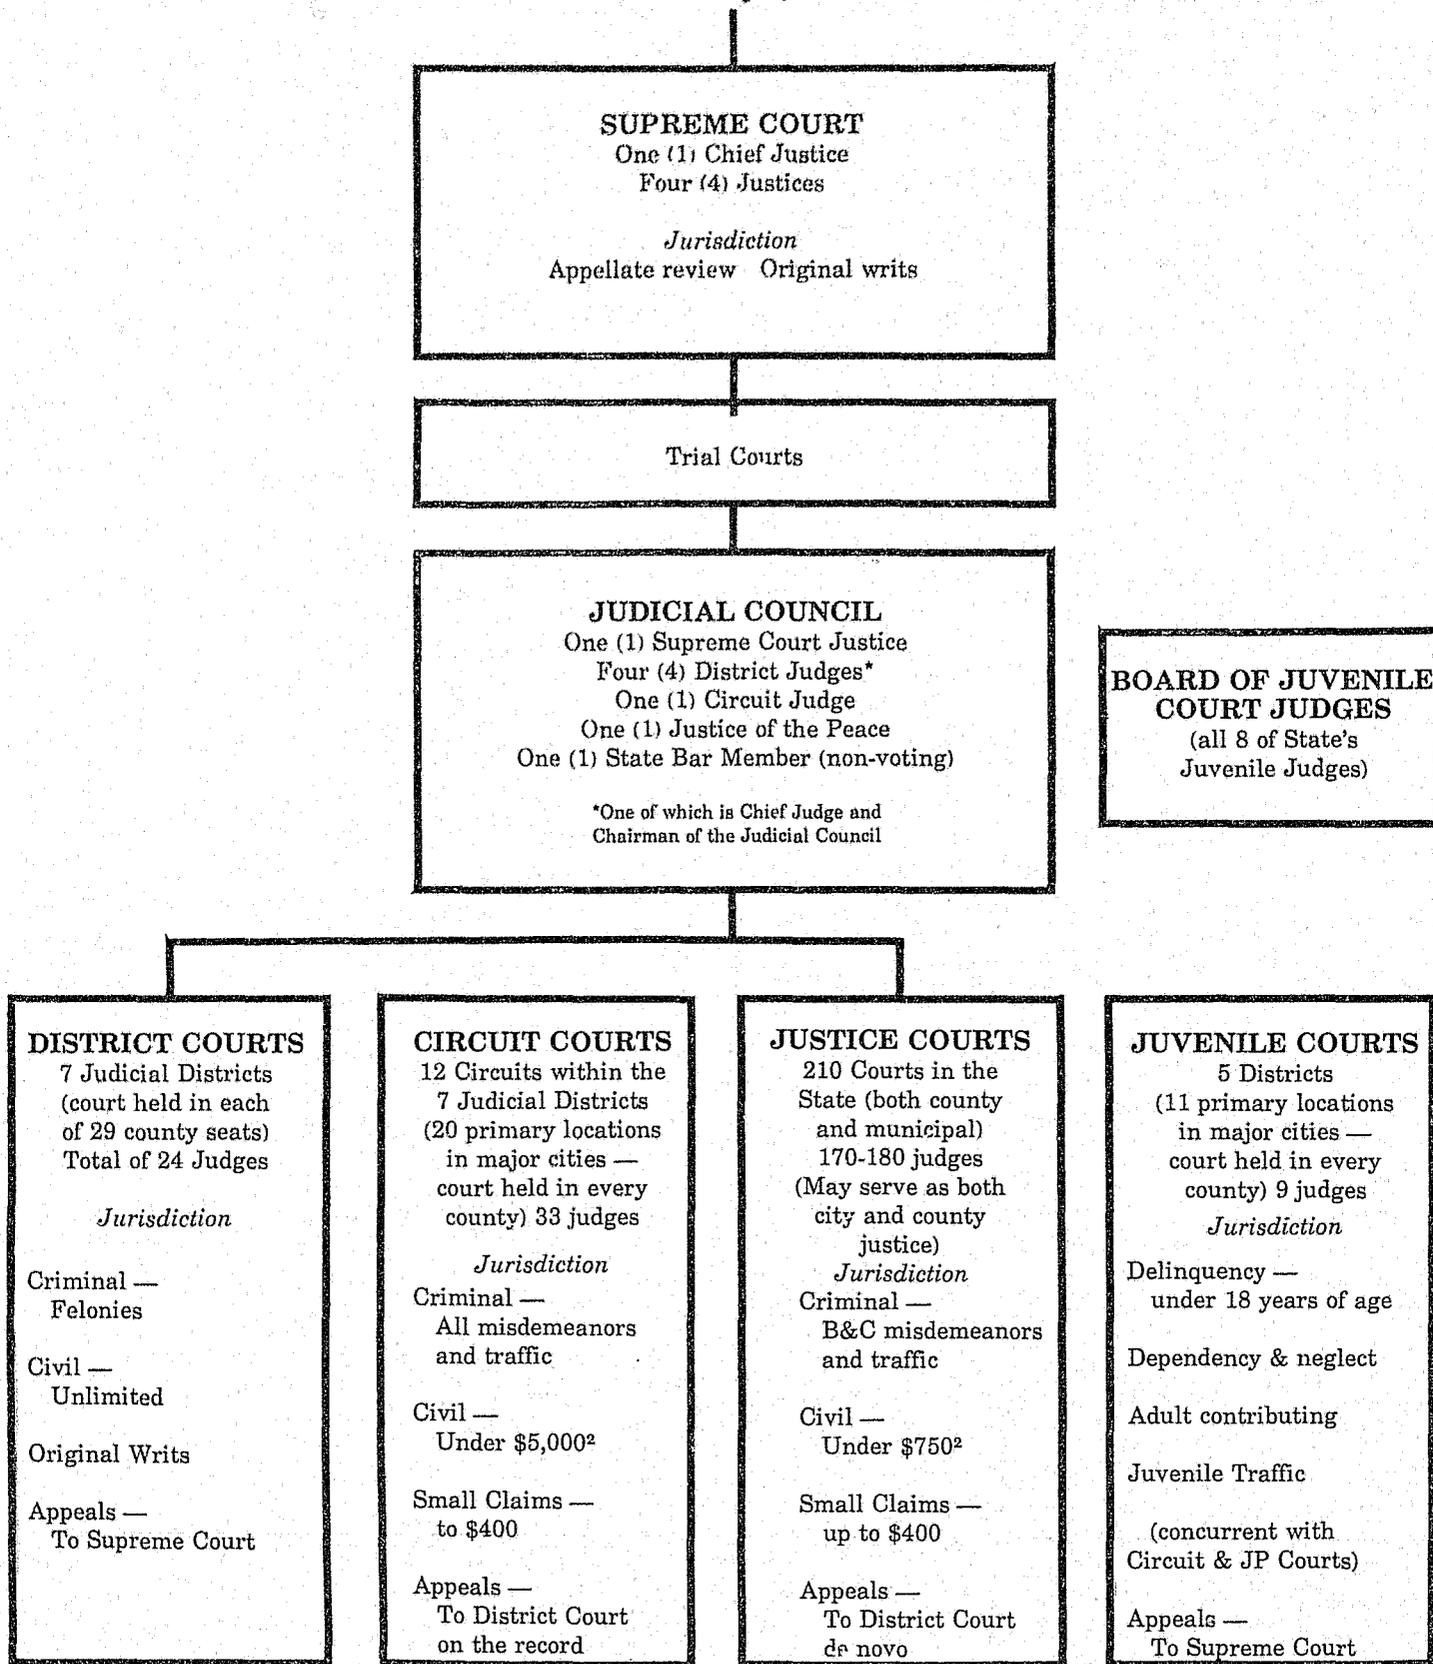

In 1907, a commission was established consisting of the Governor, the Attorney General, and the State Superintendent of Public Instruction. This commission was vested with the "general control and supervision over juvenile courts and probation offices." The Executive Department thus controlled the juvenile court until 1963 when the commission was declared unconstitutional because it violated the separation of powers provision of the Utah Constitution.

In 1932, the office of "referee" was created to assist the juvenile court judges. Referees were appointed by the judges to hear cases and pass judgments for and in behalf of the judge. All decisions made by the referees were and still are reviewed by the judge before they become the official decision of the court. If the parties in a hearing before a referee so request, the matter may be reheard before a judge.

In 1965, the "Juvenile Court Act" created an independent juvenile court within the judicial branch of government and under the supervision of the Supreme court. An administrative board of juvenile judges was created. The board elects a presiding judge who in turn appoints a court administrator who assists the board in the administration of the Juvenile Court System for the state.

The 1965 Act also gave the judges the authority to appoint more than one referee for each court; however, each referee now has to be a graduate of an accredited law school.

COURT STRUCTURE FOR THE STATE OF UTAH
(as of July 1, 1978)

¹Also acts as the Judicial Planning Committee under Pub. L. 94-503 for the State of Utah. One Juvenile Court Judge sits with the Council when it acts in this capacity.

²Not exclusive. Concurrent with District Courts.

In Utah the Supreme Court, District Court, and Justice Courts are created by the Utah Constitution; the Circuit and Juvenile Courts are created by statute pursuant to Article VIII, Section 1 of the Utah Constitution. The State finances all the expenses of the Supreme Court and the Juvenile Court; the State and the counties share in financing the cost of the District Courts; the State, counties, and cities share in financing the cost of the Circuit Courts; the counties and cities finance all the expenses of Justice Courts.

NOTE: Administrative staff structure, social service personnel, advisory committees and special commission, special court division, annual judicial conference organization, and judicial nominating commissions, are not shown.

DISTRICT COURT ASSISTANCE

In accordance with 78-3-24(j) of the Utah Code Annotated 1953, the State Court Administrator's Office, with the consent of the Chief Judge, has been actively engaged in providing and coordinating judicial assistance to various districts when a need for such service has arisen. Every request for assistance has been graciously accepted by all judges concerned.

In 1974 the Judicial Council adopted a policy and plan for the integration and utilization of Senior Judges and Substitute Judges. The policy calls for the cooperative exchanges of service between active District Judges prior to requesting assistance through the Chief Judge or the Court Administrator, however, upon receipt of such a request, the Chief Judge and Court Administrator were authorized to provide help under the following guidelines:

1. The Chief Judge may only authorize the calling of a Senior or Substitute Judge upon a showing that either:
 - (a) to maintain a calendar in a reasonably current condition where a backlog is likely to occur due to circumstances over which the responsible Judge has no control;
 - (b) reduce critical accumulated backlog;
 - (c) specific case involving complex issues and extensive time.
2. The Court Administrator may only authorize the calling of a Senior or Substitute Judge upon a showing that either:
 - (a) illness of the sitting judge or the disqualification of all judges within the District on a particular case; and,
 - (b) to handle high priority cases only during vacation periods or during attendance at a judicial school by the sitting Judge following every effort by that judge to adjust his calendar to minimize the need for assistance.

On many occasions throughout the year, active District Judges have arranged to exchange services and visit each other's courts in order to resolve disqualification situations. In addition, several active District Judges have served in Districts other than their primary location in order to substitute for an absent Judge for reason of his illness or other justified absence. In each instance when an active District Judge has consented to serve in another District, the court reporters have shown equal cooperation in accepting the same assignment. All such cooperative exchanges of benches are not included in this report.

In several districts, use of Circuit Judges as substitute District Judges have significantly aided pressing District Court needs. This was particularly true in the First, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, and Seventh Districts where Circuit Judges sat as substitute District Judges on a regular basis. Use of local Circuit Judges in a District Court capacity is convenient and, perhaps most significantly, falls within Circuit Court legislative intent.

In future reports, a specific recap of special and substitute judge usage will be stated.

1978 UTAH JUDICIAL CONFERENCE

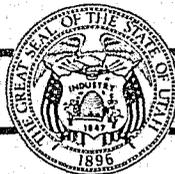

Recognizing the benefits to be gained from the assembly of Judges from all levels of the Utah Judiciary to discuss matters of mutual concern, Justice J. Allan Crockett of the Utah Supreme Court initiated such a conference in January of 1963 at the Utah State Capitol. This initial effort was so well received by the Judiciary that an ad hoc organization was formed to formally perpetuate the meetings. In connection with this organization, articles of organization were drawn. The objective of the meetings was identified as providing a forum for the discussion and study of subjects of common interest in the line of judicial duties.

Following this first meeting, conferences were held periodically and their success and acceptance by the Judges contributed to the adoption by the 1973 Legislature of a statutory conference on an annual basis. Within the 1973 Court Administrator's Act, is a provision for the annual Judicial Conference for all courts of this state, the purpose of which is to study and improve the administration of the courts. The State Court Administrator and the Administrator of the Juvenile Courts are responsible for the planning and supervision of the Conference under the supervision and direction of their council and board.

In keeping with the above statutory responsibilities the State Court Administrator in cooperation with the Juvenile Court Administrator conducted the Sixth Annual Judicial Conference on October 12, 13, and 14, 1978 at Snowbird, Alta, Utah. The featured speaker was Ernest Friensen, Dean of Whittier College School of Law, Los Angeles, California. Dean Friensen spoke on "Where the Courts are and Where they are Going." Following this talk, the Honorable Scott M. Matheson offered his annual "Governor's Luncheon" message to the assembled Utah Judiciary.

Mr. "Bud" Stark, an Ogden practicing attorney was presented the "Amicus Curiae" award (friend of the court) by the conference in recognition of his many years of service and outstanding contributions to the Judiciary in various capacities.

COURT STATISTICS

"We cannot use even the best and most scientifically compiled statistics to solve the fundamental problems of jurisprudence. They cannot give us a measure of value to competing claims, or a criterion of justice, or a theory of what we are seeking to bring about by means of law. But it does not follow that we have no use for statistics. On the contrary, the stress which we now put upon the legal order as a process and upon the judicial process as a significant meaning of the term law; and along with the administrative process entitled to a place in the front rank in the science of law, . . . indicates where statistical method is to be made use of. We must learn how to use statistics to control the quality of the output of the operation by which the legal order is maintained and carried on."

THE COURT INFORMATION SYSTEM

The first statistical gathering program for the District Courts of the state was established in January of 1969, by Justice A. H. Ellett in his capacity at that time of Assignment Justice. This effort was continued in its original form under the direction of District Judge D. Frank Wilkins, upon his assuming the duties of Assignment Justice in 1971 until the creation of the Office of the State Court Administrator in August, 1973.

Although the data gathered during the 1969 to 1973 period was never published, it was considered of sufficient significance and accuracy to be included in prior reports. It was submitted, however, with the following qualification. The original number of cases was a general estimate and not an accurate count. This was due to the physical impossibility of counting pending cases and determining the exact status of each at that time. Owing to the difficulty of establishing a figure by county and district for pending cases on January 1969, a zero figure was used in the tables in prior reports. While this tended in some counties to understate the number of pending cases during the first period, and create some negative balances, this does not significantly affect the import of the caseload data figures. Further, this difficulty has been minimized substantially, if not totally eliminated, as the new statistical program mentioned below has become firmly established.

Following the creation of the Office of the Court Administrator in August, 1973, a new program was instituted to gather more complete information on the work of the District Courts. Also, for the first time, the City Courts were included in October, 1973. The program was further extended to include the Justice of the Peace Courts in January of 1977.

The present system does not report all of the judicial work performed. It is important to emphasize that the many hours which a Judge devotes to pre-judgment and post-judgment matters, such as orders to show cause, petitions to modify judgments, discovery motions, arraignments, sentencing and research in chambers are not presented. The reports used to gather the data are designed to reflect only the number of cases filed, their manner of disposition and the time necessary for those cases which were disposed of by means of jury trial, non-jury trial and pleas of guilty to be processed through the system.

Furthermore, no attempt has been made to compare the work performed by individual judges. This has been avoided because of the many variables involved such as those mentioned above plus the time which is necessary for some judges to travel from one county to another. Every case varies from others in its complexity and the amount of time and judicial work necessary to conclude it and, therefore, the number of cases disposed of by one judge should never be compared directly with that of another.

All categories of litigation, and in particular complex civil cases, often require long and varied periods of time to be prepared for trial, this preparation of "discovery" time explains some of the discrepancy between the number of cases filed, and the number of cases disposed of, in a particular category. The dispositions often exceed the filings. This situation does not necessarily reflect an error in reporting but is explained by the fact that the court is trying cases which may have been filed over a year previously.

In defining the term "backlog" it is important to remember that there will always be a certain number of open cases which are not yet ready for trial. The term "inventory" may be preferable to the term "backlog" in discussing undisposed of cases. A good yardstick by which to measure the capacity of the courts to handle their respective caseloads is the number and ages of cases which are disposed of as well as the rate of growth or decline of pending cases. The true measurement of the time necessary for a case to be processed through the judicial system is reflected in the larger multiple judge courts by the "request to trial" figures. This time interval indicates the number of months between the time when counsel has completed the discovery process and filed the request for trial and the actual trial date. At the time of filing the request for trial, the court assumes the responsibility for getting the case to trial and gives each case the earliest possible trial date after receiving the pleading entitled "request for trial" or "demand for trial." Requests by counsel to continue the trial date are included in these figures.

Those courts which handle a smaller volume of cases by a single Judge can operate under a system which automatically brings cases on to the court calendar without waiting for counsel to file a "request for trial." This system allows the court to exercise control of the case at a much earlier date in the sequence of events and thus dispose of the case on a more current basis. This procedure also explains the lack of reporting the "request to trial" time in the monthly reports in some courts.

Some courts accumulate a high number of civil cases which must be classed as "deadwood." This class of cases consists of litigation which is informally settled between the parties without coming before the court. These cases are settled without the filing of a formal order of dismissal and, therefore, remain "alive" as far as these statistics are concerned, even though they will likely never require judicial action. The number of these cases and their rate of accumulation is undetermined. This situation does not exist in criminal cases, but does occur in many Circuit Courts in their traffic division. Some courts have begun a program to conduct a regularly scheduled order to show cause calendar designed to dispose of those "deadwood" cases unless good cause is shown for keeping the case active. This program has already resulted in a high increase of cases disposed of in all categories.

The clerks of the District Courts, Circuit Courts, and Justice Courts, whose responsibility it is to complete the monthly reports, are the key to the system. A debt of gratitude is owed to each clerk who takes the time from his busy schedule to fill out the forms. The Trial Court Executive in each of the Judicial Districts and Circuits are responsible for collecting the monthly reports from the courts within their respective areas, reviewing them for accuracy, and then forwarding them to the State Court Administrator. This is a vital role in the system and essential to the success of it.

There is some error rate in the system. This is not unexpected in light of human element involved, however, a continuing effort is being made to insure that the monthly reports are completed in a uniform and accurate manner. The reports are becoming more accurate as time passes, which is evidenced by a comparison between the first and fifth report figures.

It is normal for a reader of this report to directly compare the workload of one court with another or one judge with another. Caution should be applied in doing so. No one standard of performance can be fairly applied in such a comparison. Judges are highly trained in the law. Few of them come to the bench with any experience or training in the field of administration. It is a tribute to the judges that they are able to manage their courts and dispense justice simultaneously. The fruit of the judicial process is a high quality of justice. That degree of justice cannot be measured but must be maintained. In some particular situations, the following statistics will show a high volume of cases and a relatively long period of time until trial. This is not to criticize judicial ability, but merely presented to highlight those courts in need of assistance or attention in order to maintain a high quality of justice.

Although it is true that "justice delayed is justice denied," it is equally true that the courts cannot sacrifice the quality of justice for mere quantity of cases processed. Any method developed to speed up the judicial process must be done in a manner to insure that justice is not denied for the sake of expediency and efficiency in handling an ever increasing volume of cases.

Since January, 1979, a statewide project has been undertaken that will eventually build upon and replace the above described manual reporting of court statistics. The new project has been called the SJIS for State Judicial Information System. The need for the new system stems from a growing awareness of the amount of state volume being transacted and compiled manually. Such volume is cumbersome and further, because of manual calculation, allows for a higher rate of potential error.

The SJIS will not alter the basic involvement of local court personnel, specifically deputy court clerks, or significantly reduce the amount of clerical time involved in statistical reporting. What will occur is that case processing of information will be available on a more timely basis. Also, information will be fed back to the trial courts for local use on at least a monthly basis. Eventually, computer terminal will allow instantaneous use of information files. Expected completion date will be sometime during 1981. Funds for a system design and implementation have been provided by the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration.

SUPREME COURT

A. Organization

The Supreme Court consists of five Justices, which number may be increased or decreased by the Legislature. A majority of the Judges are necessary to form a quorum or render a decision. Upon the disqualification of a Justice from hearing a particular case before the Court, the remaining Justices may call a District Judge to sit on the Supreme Court for the hearing of that case. A Chief Justice presides over the Court and is the Justice who has the shortest remaining term on the Bench. The term of office of a Justice of the Supreme Court is ten (10) years and until his successor is elected or appointed and qualified.

B. Jurisdiction

Jurisdiction means the power of the Court to hear and determine the matter in controversy. This includes limits of both the subject matter and the territory within which the authority of the particular court may be exercised.

The Supreme Court has original jurisdiction to issue writs of mandamus, certiorari, prohibition, quo warranto and habeas corpus. Each of the Justices has the power to issue writs of habeas corpus to any part of the state. In other cases, the Supreme Court has appellate jurisdiction only, and may review all final judgments of the District Court. In equity cases the appeal may be on questions of both law and fact, in cases at law the appeal must be on questions of law only.

Any final judgment from the District Court may be appealed to the Supreme Court subject to the appeal being perfected according to the statute and rules of the Court.

Generally, appeals from the Circuit Court and Justice of the Peace Courts are restricted to constitutional issues only. However, the Supreme Court may, by certiorari, review decisions or judgments of the District Court which are the result of cases appealed to that Court from lower courts on questions of jurisdiction of the District Court. While the general jurisdictional limit of civil cases which may be filed in the Circuit Court is $2,500, the limit on cases appealed to the Supreme Courts, subsequent to trial de novo, is only those cases in which the amount in controversy exceeds $100.00.

C. Administration

The Supreme Court is supported by the Clerk of the Court and his staff. The Court appoints the Clerk who serves at the pleasure of the Court. The Court also may appoint, remove at pleasure, and fix the compensation for such deputy clerks and other assistants as may be necessary for the transaction of its business.

Pursuant to the above mentioned authority, the staff of the Clerk consists of 1 Chief Deputy Clerk, 2 Deputy Clerks, 3 Secretaries, 2 Assistant Librarians, and 9 Research Attorneys.

On July 1, 1978 the Supreme Court appointed a Predisposition Staff, composed of three persons each with substantial legal backgrounds. These staff members read briefs and motions which are submitted to the Court, and assist the members of the Court by making abstracts and digests of the documents submitted.

THE DISTRICT COURTS

DISTRICT COURTS

A. Organization

The District Courts are divided into seven Judicial Districts, each of which consists of several counties. The Legislature may change the territorial boundaries of any Judicial District, or increase or decrease the number of districts, or the judges thereof.

As of June 30, 1977, there were 24 District Judges, each of whom is assigned to sit in a particular district. The number of judges holding office in each district is as follows:

1st District	1 Judge
2nd District	5 Judges
3rd District	11 Judges
4th District	4 Judges
5th District	1 Judge
6th District	1 Judge
7th District	1 Judge

The judges of each Judicial District are responsible for holding terms of court at each county seat at least three times a year. The dates of court are set by the Uniform Rules of Practice.

B. Jurisdiction

The District Court has original jurisdiction in all civil and criminal matters not excepted by the Constitution and not prohibited by law. The District Court, or any judge thereof, also has the power to issue writs of habeas corpus, mandamus, injunction, quo warranto, certiorari, prohibition, and other writs necessary to carry into effect their orders, judgements, and decrees, and to give them general control over inferior courts and tribunals within their respective jurisdictions.

The types of cases and legal matters over which the District Court has jurisdiction are not limited by the Constitution or by statute except that all jurisdiction and power exercised by the District Court must be original (except for appeals from inferior courts and administrative tribunals). All cases arising from a violation of city or town ordinances where a Circuit Court or Justice of the Peace Court is established are subject to the exclusive jurisdiction of such an inferior court.

All felony cases are prosecuted in the District Court subsequent to a preliminary hearing being conducted in the lower court and the accused being bound over to the District Court.

A procedural limitation of venue is imposed upon the District Court by statute, which has the effect of empowering only certain District Courts to entertain a specific matter. This means that a District Court is recognized in every county of the state with the power to adjudicate cases only within the county in which the court is sitting. Their territorial limitations, which are set by the statute governing venue, require that civil cases affecting real property be tried in the county in which the defendant resides or the county in which the incident occurred.

The District Court sits as an appellate court for the Circuit Courts and Justice of the Peace Courts and has supervisory control of the same. Upon receipt of an appeal from the lower courts, the District Court conducts a trial de novo which consists of a complete retrial of the case and makes entirely new decisions as to fact and law as though the case has been filed originally in the District Court.

C. Administration

Each of the District Judges is supported by a staff consisting of a Certified Shorthand Reporter and a Court Clerk in each county. The County Clerk is charged by statute with the responsibility of acting as Clerk of the Court. The responsibility entails such duties as preparation of court calendars, filing and maintaining court files and records, and such other matters as the court may direct. The clerk and reporter are usually heavily relied upon by the Judge to perform the many functions of the court which are required daily to keep the court business running smoothly and thus allowing the Judge to use more of his time to perform his judicial duties.

The Third Judicial District also has the services of two secretaries available, one of which serves as a Mental Health Commissioner, thus relieving the Judges of these hearings.

The multi-Judge Districts elect a Presiding Judge from among their peers who serves for a term which is set by local rule. The Presiding Judge acts as the spokesman or chief officer of the Judicial District.

The position of Trial Court Executive has now been established in each of the seven Judicial Districts. The individuals selected for these positions are professional level administrators who assist in managing the various administrative functions and activities of the courts within the District under the direct supervision of the Presiding Judge. This program provides each Judicial District with administrative support on the local level whose duties and responsibilities vary and are tailored to the unique needs of the individual Districts, thus allowing the Presiding Judge to devote more of his time to his judicial duties and less time to administration of the courts. The system has proven to be most successful and worthwhile in providing "on the scene" administrative support for the courts which compliment the State Court Administrator's efforts to provide that service on a broader statewide basis.

JUSTICE OF THE PEACE COURTS

A. Organization

The Legislature possesses the power to determine the number of Justices of the Peace to be elected and fix by law their powers, duties and compensation.

The Justices of the Peace are elected or appointed within precincts established by County Commissions or within a city or town. There are 183 Justices of the Peace throughout the state as of the publication of this report, serving 203 Justice Courts.

There is no requirement that the Justice of the Peace be a member of the Bar. Any qualified elector may run for and hold the office with the only restriction being that he must reside in and hold court in the precinct, city or town in which he is elected or appointed.

Most Justices of the Peace serve on a part time basis, having other full or part time employment. In many cases, one person serves as Justice of the Peace in a city or town and in a county precinct simultaneously.

B. Jurisdiction

The territorial jurisdiction of the Justice of the Peace Courts is restricted to the precinct or city limits in civil cases and to the county boundaries in criminal cases.

The statutes set forth in detail those types of civil cases which may be heard, but in general, the claim must not exceed $750.00 and must not involve subject matter relating to title or possession of real property or the legality of tax.

The statutes also set forth in specificity those types of criminal cases which may be prosecuted in the Justice of the Peace Court which include misdemeanors punishable by a fine less than $300.00, or imprisonment not to exceed six months or both.

Enforcement of judgments from the Justice of the Peace Courts are accomplished by attachment and garnishment and in the case of real estate by docketing the abstract of judgment with the appropriate County Clerk. Failure to docket the judgment renders it ineffective as a lien on real property of the debtor.

C. Administration

In the past, the Justice of the Peace has had little support or guidance in the administration of his court. The state does not provide for clerical or secretarial services. The Justices of the Peace have created an organization among themselves known as the Utah Association of Justices of the Peace. This organization has provided substantial leadership. Policies or guidelines which have been developed have been accepted on a voluntary basis and significant progress has been made in the internal administration of Justice of the Peace affairs.

Salt Lake County has established the position of Justice of the Peace Administrator. This individual serves in much the same manner as the Trial Court Executives on the District level and provides the Justices with many of the same administrative services. The Office of the State Court Administrator has the obligation of administration for the trial courts of which the Justices of the Peace are an integral part. In fulfilling this responsibility, the Court Administrator has developed a program to provide continuing education seminars on both a basic and advanced plan.

The 1977 legislation requires mandatory attendance by all Justices of the Peace to at least one qualifying seminar supervised by the Judicial Council each calendar year commencing with 1978. Any Justice not attending for two consecutive years may be removed from office. The Judicial Council is required to include in the Annual Report the Justices who are so certified. On the following pages, the Justices who attended the 1979 education program are shown as certified.
