RESOURCES IN JUROR UTILIZATION AND MANAGEMENT

May 1980

1. INTRODUCTION

This document is intended for those courts interested in improving their jury system. It lists the primary resources available throughout the country for a court or state level administration to implement its own jury system improvement program. An ideal jury system management program should include components of funding, technical assistance, evaluation and technical development, resource materials and, most importantly, resource persons. This listing gives the known national resources under each one of these program components.

The Center for Jury Studies has no doubt missed some of the excellent resources in the field of jury system management which now exist. In the months ahead, we will be revising and adding new resources to the listing. Names, articles, sources of funding, etc., which courts feel have been omitted should be brought to the attention of the Center. The Center would like to invite state court administrative offices to contact the Center for Jury Studies about assistance in preparing in-state jury system management resource listings.

2. FUNDING FOR JURY UTILIZATION AND MANAGEMENT PROGRAMS

National - Funding for statewide and major local programs is available through LEAA's National Priority Program in Juror Utilization and Management. Application requirements for these funds are similar to those in the 1979 Incentive Program announcement. National Priority funds are used to match on a 50/50 basis, block grants or other funds allocated to this program. No local match is required for FY 1980. Applicants must demonstrate adequate juror flow and commit themselves to a program of action covering the twelve jury system elements. Additional information may be obtained from the Adjudication Program Management Team, OCJP, LEAA, 633 Indiana Ave., N.W., Washington, D. C. 20531, (202) 724-7681. Funding for small requirements of travel and subsistence in connection with mutual self-help programs may be obtained through technical assistance resources of the Center for Jury Studies or from LEAA.

State - Funding for statewide JUM programs have been established in Alabama, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Maine, Massachusetts and New Jersey, and might be used to cover additional needs in these states. Other states are expected to participate in this program. In some states, LEAA block grant funds may be available through the State Planning Agency (SPA). Generally, telephone answering devices, copying machines and other small jury system requirements can be obtained from these sources. General revenue funds have been made available in some states, e.g., Florida allocated $150,000 of state funds for jury system improvements in 1978 and 1979. State funds used for this purpose have been offset quickly through realized cost savings.

Local - Local funds may be available for jury system improvements, especially if there are offsetting cost savings. Usually only a small part of the large savings that can be achieved in reducing jury system costs are needed for improvement of the system. These costs are often "one time only" costs, such as equipment or software costs rather than recurring annual costs.

3. TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE, EVALUATION AND TECHNICAL DEVELOPMENT, AND RESOURCE INFORMATION IN JURY SYSTEM MANAGEMENT

National - The Center for Jury Studies has been funded by the Department of Justice, Office of Criminal Justice Programs, Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, to provide technical assistance and serve as a resource of information for those courts and states committed to improving their jury systems. The functions of the Center include the following:

A. Technical Assistance

- (1) CJS Technical Assistance - On-site visits and assistance can be provided for relatively major jury system projects to support statewide programs and local jurisdictions funded by the National Priority Programs and for other courts under a priority schedule as indicated in the CJS Newsletter, Issue #2.
- (2) Technical Assistance by Resource Persons - The Center for Jury Studies will often invite resource persons, as given in this document, to assist in rendering technical assistance to a court. Travel and per diem can be provided these resource persons giving such assistance.

B. Evaluation

A methodology for evaluating jury system performance using proven elements and standards has been developed by the Center for Jury Studies for the National Priority Program and is published in the Methodology Manual for Jury Systems. Application of this methodology involves the collection, tabulation, and analysis of data kept in a court for a period of approximately four months.

C. Resource Center

Information "packages" are being developed at the Center for Jury Studies to provide a reference for those wishing further background on any of the jury system elements. These "packages" will be available by late 1980 and will be announced in the Center for Jury Studies Newsletter. Available for loan is a set of juror orientation presentations (slides, film videotapes) copied onto 3/4" videotape. A short write-up describes each presentation. Please write the Center for Jury Studies if you wish to borrow these.

D. Other Technical Assistance

The Criminal Courts Technical Assistance Project of American University can provide technical assistance in other court-related areas. Contact: The American University
Criminal Courts Technical Assistance Project
4900 Massachusetts Avenue, N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20016
(202) 686-3803

4. TRAINING

National

A. Center for Jury Studies - Residency Program

A one-week residency program for intensive training in jury system technology is provided at the Center for Jury Studies for a limited number of persons.
Contact: Center for Jury Studies
6723 Whittier Avenue
McLean, Virginia 22101
(703) 893-4111

B. Institute for Court Management

The Institute for Court Management provides training support under the National Priority Program in Juror Utilization and Management. The Institute also periodically offers a course in Evaluating Jury Systems and offers several times annually a course in Caseflow Management and Juror Utilization.
Contact: Institute for Court Management
624 Market Street, Suite 210
Denver, Colorado 80202
(303) 534-3063

C. National Judicial College

The National Judicial College includes in many of its courses the judicial perspective of jury management.
Contact: National Judicial College
University of Nevada
Reno, Nevada 89557
(702) 784-6747

State - Many state judicial training programs include workshops on jury system management for judges, clerks, and court administrators. Annual conferences of judges, clerks, and court administrators have special sessions on advances in jury system management.

5. SUPPORT FACILITIES

National - For major support facilities, such as telephone answering devices, photocopying machines and audio-visual equipment, LEAA Incentive and National Priority Program grant support, as previously described, may be available. Purchase or rental of data processing equipment is usually not available from this source.

State - State or county computer facilities are often available for local court support, especially in providing services in connection with juror source lists. Voter lists may be available on a statewide basis and most state driver lists are computerized. State Bar associations may assist in the writing and also defray the costs of juror handbooks, audio-visual and other orientation materials. Some states, (i.e., Maryland) have provided slide equipment and orientation slide shows adapted to local courts. Other states, (i.e., Florida) have provided telephone call-in devices to the local courts.

Local - Some large courts (i.e., Houston) provide computer services for small nearby counties. Bar Associations are very interested in improving the jury system, for the lesser the burden the better the juror. Many organizations will give or sell computer time for court use. Fraternal organizations are often willing to donate equipment to improve conditions for jurors. Local universities can provide expertise in:

- preparation of film/slide/video presentations;
- studies of randomness and demography; and
- data processing assistance and low cost computer time.

Unclaimed magazines are available for jurors at most post offices and county or city librarians can provide books for juror rooms.

6. TECHNICAL LITERATURE

The following list of publications and periodicals name the principle sources of written materials on the subject of jury system management. A bibliography of jury system management articles and studies is given in Appendix B.

A. Publications

National - Methodology Manual for Jury Systems, in draft form available from Center for Jury Studies.

A Guide to Juror Usage, GPO Stock No. 040-000-00328-2.

A Guide to Jury System Management, GPO Stock No.027-000-00389-3.

Management of the Jury System, A Supporting Study for the ABA Standards.

Available from: American Bar Association
1155 East 60th Street
Chicago, Illinois 60637
(312) 947-3911

State - State level studies, manuals and examples of in-state reports may be available from the state court administrator's office.

B. Periodicals

National - The Center for Jury Studies publishes a bi-monthly Newsletter devoted to jury system management. This is distributed without cost to interested parties.

Contact: Center for Jury Studies
6723 Whittier Avenue
McLean, Virginia 22101
(703) 893-4111

Other publications which carry articles of interest:

Justice System Journal - published by the Institute for Court Management.

Judicature - published by American Judicature Society.

State - Newsletters of the state administrative offices often highlight projects of interest.

Local - Bar Association newsletters often mention projects of interest or reprint articles on jury systems.

7. RESOURCE PERSONS IN JUROR UTILIZATION AND MANAGEMENT

The Center for Jury Studies has prepared the following listing of those persons felt to be highly knowledgeable in various aspects of juror utilization and management. The list is organized by element of the Juror Utilization and Management National Priority Program and by other area of specific needs. Appendix A contains an alphabetical and state-by-state index of the Resource Persons. Courts interested in system level studies may wish to discuss these broader needs with the Center for Jury Studies or should consider those persons listed under Element 12.

Some of these people are affiliated with courts, corporations (profit and non-profit) and others are consultants. The specific area of expertise is given for each person as related to that element. Descriptions such as "good system," "high utilization," "efficient," etc., are not used, for notable achievement is given by their presence on this list. These comments are not intended to be complete as to a person's qualifications, but are intended to help those interested in narrowing the selection process. Many persons are listed under several elements and the areas of specific expertise given apply only to that element. The presence of those individuals who represent a manufacturer are included for completeness and does not constitute an endorsement.
