This Report is a summary of the most recent literature available on the Criminal Justice System in Finland.

We are grateful to Professor Inkeri Antilla, Director, Institute of Criminological Research, Ministry of Justice, Finland, and to Professor Lahti, Professor of Criminal Law and Criminology at the University of Helsinki for their critical comments on this report.
I CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM
A) Philosophy
- neo-classical ideology premise of law in the Scandanavian context (i.e. punishment is to serve as authoritative reproach), emphasis is on the symbolic value, the act of being punished, not necessarily in the enforcement of punishment (i.e. severity of sentences) as such punishment should be used sparingly;
- emphasis on general prevention through criminal law;
- justice must be uniform and predictable;
- punishment expresses public condemnation of anti-social acts;
- recognition that the criminal justice system is a limited instrument of social control;
- pragmatic approach to criminal law operation based on efficient expenditure of penal and social resources;
- recent reform proposals aim at abolition of the special legal status of young offenders.
B) Administration
- Ministry of Justice responsible for courts and correctional operations;
- Ministry of the Interior responsible for policy administration and operations.
C) Operations
- police and prosecution have limited discretionary power; waiving of measures (via police, prosecution or court similar to diversion without intervention);
- court waiving of measures a rare practice; more common at pre-trial stage;
- accused may be brought to court by individual or prosecutor, in most cases it is the prosecutor;
- a person may be detained for 3 days to 2 weeks, arrested offender must be brought before the court within eight days (one month for rural regions);
- no bail system;
- no jury system;
- emphasis on investigatory work done before trial;
- no plea bargaining;
- no pre-trial hearings;
- trial relatively informal; focus on intent and premeditation;
- Scandanavian cooperation in adoption of penal legislation; innovations shared;

Scandinavian agreements regarding enforcement of sentences; proposals for lay judges not enacted, although rural courts utilize a lay board of 5-7 laymen, whose unanimous collective vote may overrule the judge on any matter in the case.

D) Sentencing

- principles of proportionality, equality and uniformity main aims of sentencing (i.e. punishment in proportion of damage done and dangerousness of act);
- judicial discretion regulated; specific criteria for increasing and decreasing normal sentence;
- 2 categories of offences - (1) offences subject to public prosecution (the majority located here), (2) offences initiating with the complainant (i.e. rape, minor assault, libel, etc.);
- 1975 legislation attempts to induce uniformity in sentencing;
- minimum and maximum sentences set out in criminal code; (14 days present minimum; 12 years - maximum), several sentences may be compounded up to fifteen years; except life (usually in the event of murder);
- age of criminal responsibility is fifteen;
- offenders 15 - 20 tried in adult court, (offenders under 18 tried in camera) - prosecutor may dismiss case if maximum sentence under three months imprisonment, usually given to Social Welfare Board;
- Capital Punishment totally abolished in 1972;
- non-prosecution of offences before court can be an exercise of police, prosecution or judicial discretion, where the offence is minimal and does not demand public prosecution.

E) Sanctions

i) fines
- most common sanction (particularly for drunken driving) - 370,000 imposed per year;
- day fine system;
- fines regulated according to gravity of offence and offender's financial situation;
- recent amendments increased amount of fines to serve as an alternative to imprisonment and to provide deterrent effect;
- may be in addition to a conditional imprisonment sentence, used in this instance mainly for drunken driving.

ii) conditional sentence
- used for offence where punishment is a fine or imprisonment is two years or less; prison term set;
- only juveniles (15-20 years old) are subject to supervision order; supervision for 1-3 years;
- wide use for young offenders, not recidivists;
- 15,000/year receive conditional imprisonment - may be combined with a fine (1976 amendment).

iii) absolute discharge
- judicial discretionary alternative;
- no sentences passed, trial seen as adequate punishment.

iv) imprisonment
- open/closed;
- traditional imprisonment (hard labour for long sentences - abolished 1972);
- 15,000/year receive this type of sentence.

v) special sentences
- preventive detention for dangerous recidivists (placed in special security units of a specified prison) - rarely used (10 as of 1979); control;
- juvenile offenders sent to either juvenile or adult institution, adults up to 23 years old are eligible to serve their time in juvenile prisons (Prison Board decision).

F) Trends

- depenalization of offences (i.e. direct fees for certain violations) as well as decriminalization;
- increased use of alternative sanctions to imprisonment;
- increased use in shorter prison sentences;
- rapid increase in crime rate in 1960's; 1970's experienced increase in property offences, trend levelled off in mid 70's;
- crimes of violence related to alcohol use;
- increase in "professional" crime;
- incorporation of young offender (15 and over) into the adult criminal justice system.
II CORRECTIONAL SYSTEM

A) Philosophy
- general deterrence seen as aim of imprisonment, imprisonment seen as having a symbolic value, thus short prison sentences can be substituted for long ones with no detrimental effect to general preventive philosophy;
- prison is viewed as a coercive control measure more detrimental than beneficial; treatment and social service function is left to community agencies;
- execution of sentence should facilitate re-integration;
- normal living conditions should be emphasized, individual self-esteem should be retained;
- imprisonment uniform punishment; to remove dangerous offender from society, not for rehabilitation;
- detrimental effects of imprisonments should be kept to a minimum (seen in use of open labour colonies).

B) Policy
- normalization of prison conditions;
- work is essential to prison regime;
- outside contacts maintained; seen as important for re-integration function.

C) Administration
- Prison Administration Service - responsible for prisons and aftercare, (aftercare responsibility of Criminal Welfare Association - independent unit in Prison Administration organization of volunteer agencies, subsidized by national assistance);
- PAS - responsible for juvenile and adult systems (central, provincial, reserve, youth and psychiatric prisons/labour camps);
- centralized bureaucracy;
- General Directorate - governing board of each institution, function to resolve internal problems, discipline hearings and make parole decisions. Composition - administrative institutional personnel, 1 lay member.

D) Conditions
- open and closed facilities;
- low emphasis on security;
- closed prisons generally overcrowded;
- liberal regimes, especially in open prisons;
- limited number of spaces in open prisons; two-thirds of prison population serve sentence in closed institutions; archaic buildings; cellular construction in closed facilities;
- 4,600 total bed capacity.

E) Operations
1) open prisons
- 800 bed capacity (goal 2,300);
- liberal regime;
- paid physical security;
- reserve prisons and penal colonies classified as closed;
- higher wages paid for inmate employment than closed institutions;
- usually reserved for offenders with families;
- offenders must have sentence of 2 years or less.

2) prison colonies
- open regime for long-term offenders;
- seen as conditional release, last 6 months of sentence transferred from closed prison;
- similar to labour colony except lower wages.

3) labour colonies
- liberal regime, for short-term offenders/first time offenders (sentences less than 2 years);
- few custodial staff;
- paid market based wages; contractual labour;
- barack houses;
- no external (static) security;
- good order and discipline only rules enforced.

4) work camps (temporarily not in use)
- reserved for maximum security releases, principally jobless/homeless offender;
- paid civil wages;
- liberal regime;
- maximum stay usually 3 months.

5) classification
- based on age, length of sentence;
- escape record/risk; work ability;
- sentences of less than 2 years eligible for open prisons;
- offenders under 20 sent to juvenile institutions (95% of youthful offenders serve sentence in closed facilities), usually only a minority of youthful offenders sent to prison, most are fined;
- recent legislation to restrict classification of recidivists - must have previous violent history; special security units for dangerous offenders declining in use with new restrictions (1979 - 10 classified as dangerous offenders);
- frequent visits - no set limits;
- conjugal visits if possible;
- little censorship;
- access to telephone;
- personal property retained.

vi) Institutional Programs
- industrial basis in open and closed institutions (metal works; pre-fab homes);
- market wages paid in open prisons;
- educational programs available - especially in the youth prison;
- pay used as motivation/incentive device (for both work/study);
- labour regulations in effect - 40 hr. work week, overtime pay; one month vacation 1 year.

vii) Grievance Procedure
- legal framework;
- appeals to Prison Administration; Ombudsman; civil law suit against employee - procedures rarely used.

viii) Discipline Measures
- warning;
- loss of privileges;
- solitary confinement up to 20 days;
- loss of served time;
- mandatory written procedure for disciplinary action.

ix) Furloughs
- based on length of sentence; sentences greater than 2 months eligible, less than 2 months furloughs granted only in exceptional circumstances;
- liberal use;
- 9,985 granted in 1978 of which 95% successfully completed.

x) Parole
- sentences longer than 3 months always entail conditional release under supervision;
- eligible for release at two-thirds of sentence, must serve at least 3 months;
- if offender is a first incarcerate, parole is usually granted after one-half of sentence;
- parole is usually automatic;
- parole with/out supervision;
- supervision usually by police;
- control-oriented operation;
- supervision until remainder of sentence or up to 3 years.

xi) Inmate Profile/Rights*
- no information
III CONCLUSION ON SYSTEM'S OPERATION

A return to the neo-classical scheme of general prevention through criminal law can be seen in the development and current state of the Finnish criminal justice system. The focus of punishment is on the offense, away from the offender. However, the emphasis is on the symbolic value of punishment and certainty in sanctions, not in the severity of punishments meted out.

Finland has the highest rate of imprisonment (103/100,000) and a more violent society in the sense of high homicide rate than evidenced in other Nordic countries. In light of this state, Finnish Penal reform focuses on the development of less restrictive prison regimes, principally open prisons, and normalization of institutions. Further there are attempts to minimize the number of prisoners via traditional and novel non-institutional sentences.

With the demise of the rehabilitation philosophy emphasis has been placed on deterrence and uniformity of sentencing.

Resource limitations plague the Finnish correctional system, and overcrowding is estimated at 50% in closed institutions, due to slow construction or conversion of open institutions.

KRIM, Finland's penal reform group, is not a significant force in Finnish Reform movement.

In essence the Finnish criminal justice system, with resource restrictions, was forced to adopt a pragmatic approach, principally reflected in a cost/benefit analysis of efficient expenditure of penal and social resources. The logical approach has humanitarian concerns built in, apparently seen in the normalization concept, with the status of inmate rights placed on a high level. Finland, perhaps more than other Scandinavian countries, attempts uniformity and equality under the law with their emphasis on consistency in sentencing policy, considering the gravity of offence and premeditation as essential elements in sentencing. Under this scheme of offenders, at least in theory, receive similar consideration for similar offences, aligning aims and philosophies of criminal law to punishment of the offender.

General Statistics
Population: 4.7 million

Sanctions
- Fine dispositions average about 270,000/year, this comprises 90% of criminal sanctions.
- Rate of imprisonment is 102/100,000.
- Average sentence length - 5.1 months.

Recidivism
- Follow-up over a ten year time period indicates a low recidivism rate of 30%.

Political
- constitutional republic;
- 59% of population - urban; high population mobility
  into urban centers;
- geographically isolated country.

Economic
- industrial based economy;
- welfare state, with a good standard of living;
- currently suffering a recession (1979);
- unemployment - 8%;
- three-quarters of industry privately owned.

Social
- expensive and extensive social welfare system;
- high rate of alcoholism, violent crime and suicide;
- limited social reform movements.

Cultural/Historical
- religiously and ethnically homogeneous people;
- heavy influence from Sweden;
- relatively violent society in comparison to other
  Nordic countries.

Reform Proposals

Ministry of Justice Proposals
1. Reduction of minimum imprisonment sentence from 14 days to 6 days.
2. Reduction of the statutory maximum from 12 years to 10 years.
3. Increase release on parole.
4. All prisoners be mandatorily released at one-half of their sentence.
5. Only return offenders to prison for new offences (i.e. not for technical violations).
6. Introduce stiffer sentences for professional crime.
7. All offenders over 15 years old be treated as adults, that is, receive applicable punitive sanctions.
8. Increase use of conditional sentences.
9. All indeterminate sanctions (principally, preventive detention) be abolished.
New system of sanctions proposed by the Penal Law Committee (1977) calls for a simple and clear system of sanctions. New alternatives to imprisonment are emphasized, such as mandatory reporting and punitive warnings (as a replacement for absolute discharge).
