INTRODUCTION

Explanation

This volume lists justice oriented programmes across Canada; federally, provincially and territorially; that are specially designed for or available to Native People.

Those programmes listed as federal are those that have been set up on a national basis by the federal government, and do not indicate the extent of total federal involvement in justice oriented programmes. In fact, many of the programmes listed under the various provinces and territories are partially funded by the federal government, but operate specifically for residents of the province or territory concerned.

In interviewing people concerned to elicit information on the various programmes, the following areas were particularly examined:

Purpose of the programme;

Authorization for the programme;

Administration of the programme;

Population at whom the programme is directed;

Duration of the programme;

Resources of the programme in terms of funds and manpower.

Further information on any of the programmes listed can be obtained by getting in touch with the contact person indicated at the end of the listing.

Justice programming for Native people is in a constant state of flux, as new ones are developed and old ones come to an end. Even now, programmes are coming into being that are not listed here, and some of the ones listed here might not receive funding in the next fiscal year.

This list of programmes is organized in the following manner: federal programmes, territorial programmes, then programmes by province from west to east. Sections and the names of programmes under each section or heading are arranged alphabetically.

Authorization for Programme:

Federal government Department of Justice

Administration of Programme:

- (1) The programme must serve status and non-status Native people;
- (2) The programme must be administered by an independent service organization which has the support of both status and non-status Native people;

FEDERALNATIVE DIVERSIONName of Programme:

National Inventory of Diversion Projects

Purpose of Programme:

To facilitate a transfer of current information on the practice of diversion in Canada by presenting a reference and contact guide to persons working toward the development of community-based alternatives to criminal justice processing

Authorization for Programme:

Federal Ministry of the Solicitor General

Content:

The National Inventory of Diversion Projects is designed to reflect the state of the art in the area of diversion by listing diversion projects in Canada under the following headings:

Existent Diversion Projects in Canada - Juvenile
 Existent Diversion Projects in Canada - Adult
 Diversion Resource Programmes - Direct Service Resources
 Sentencing Option Projects
 Police Screening Models
 Police/Youth Relations Models
 Prevention Models

The Inventory identifies almost fifty diversion projects, some of which are specifically for juveniles or adults and some of which are for both juveniles and adults. The majority of these projects are not specifically designed for Native people, but four are; one in British Columbia, two in Manitoba and one in Ontario. They are:

Cowichan Diversion Programme, in Duncan, British Columbia;
 Roseau River Community Committee, in Dominion City, Manitoba;
 Moose Lake Corrections Committee, in Moose Lake, Manitoba; and Li'L Beavers of Ontario, in Toronto, Ontario.

Further information on each of these projects can be found in the provincial listings under Native Diversion

FEDERALNATIVE LAW STUDENTSName of Programme:

Native Law Student Programme

Purpose of Programme:

To encourage students of Native ancestry to enter the legal profession

Authorization for Programme:

Federal government Department of Justice

Administration of Programme:

Each year the Department of Justice funds up to five Metis and non-status Indian students to attend a 2-month summer law programme given at the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon. If the students are successful in the summer programme and are accepted by a Canadian law school, the Department pays the student's tuition, book costs and a living allowance based on Manpower re-training rates. This funding continues as long as the student successfully remains in an LL.B. programme, but is not paid during articling nor bar admission course

Delivery of Services:

The summer programme is given each June and July at the Faculty of Law of the University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon. Students in the summer programme are evaluated at the end of the programme, based on exam marks, moot court performance, teachers' observations, etc. Based on this evaluation, they are either recommended to attend law school or not, although the final decision in all cases is up to the law school to which the student has applied on whether or not to accept the student for formal legal studies

Target population for Programme:

The programme is expressly designed to provide financial assistance to Metis and non-status Indian students, as the Department of Indian and Northern Affairs provides similar funding for status Indian students under its general education programme

Duration of Programme:

Ongoing, subject to annual review and approval by Treasury Board of funds

FEDERALResources:

Funds: A weekly allowance is provided to the student, over and above the cost of tuition and books, at the rate of $79 for a single student, $90 for a student with one dependent, $97 with two dependents, $103 with three dependents, and $109 with four or more

The Department of Indian and Northern Affairs pays at the same rate for status Indian students, but also provides a rent subsidy where the student must pay more than 25% of his or her monthly allowance for accommodations

Target population for Programme:

East Manitoba Probation Office

Delivery of Services:

Police refer possible candidates for diversion to the probation office, which checks the appropriate files and passes the case on to the Committee. The Probation Office presents an offence report which the offender is asked to verify, and reports also come from police, school and band council. The Committee then develops a diversion plan which might include apology, restitution to the victim, community service tasks and/or referral to an appropriate social service agency. A Committee member is assigned to supervise the execution of the plan, and if the offender fails to meet the terms and conditions of the plan, the case is returned to the Probation Office for further action

Target population for Programme:

The programme is designed to serve juveniles, and occasionally adults, who are members of the Roseau River Band, have committed an offence, accept responsibility for that offence and agree to participate in a diversion plan

Ongoing

Target population for Programme:

The programme complements the Allied Indian & Metis Society (Ontario) by serving the Native inmates and ex-inmates of the provincial correctional institutions

Duration of Programme:

Ongoing

Resources:

Funds: Budget for fiscal 1978-79 is $72,000, all of which comes from the Indian Community Secretariat of the provincial Ministry of Culture and Recreation

ONTARIONATIVE JUDICIARYName of Programme:

Native Justice of the Peace Programme

Purpose of Programme:

Ostensibly to place more Native people in the position of Justice of the Peace, although the Ontario Native Council on Justice has indicated that those presently serving constitute a mere token presence in that their authority is severely limited, they receive essentially no training and the remuneration for the position is negligible

Authorization for Programme:

Provincial legislation and section 107 of the federal Indian Act

Administration of Programme:

Provincial Ministry of the Attorney General

Delivery of Services:

Native persons considered eligible for appointment are contacted and asked if they would accept and, if so, are appointed by either the Lieutenant-Governor under provincial legislation or the Governor-in-Council under the Indian Act

Target population for Programme:

Those Native people in communities where it is difficult to have the constant presence of a court to hold bail hearings, issue summonses and warrants, etc.

Duration of Programme:

The programme is designed to be ongoing, but the Ontario Native Council on Justice points out that the difficulties outlined above are making Native people reticent about accepting such a position

Resources:

Funds: The amount of funds available to pay necessary expenses incurred in this programme seem to be dependent on the number of Native J.P.'s recruited, as there doesn't seem to be any maximum number

ONTARIO

Manpower: At present there are only 8 Native J.P.'s in Ontario, only one of which has been appointed under the authority of the Indian Act

ONTARIONATIVE LIAISONName of Programme:

Allied Indian & Metis Society (Ontario)

Purpose of Programme:

A.I.M.S. (Ontario) was set up by the inmates of the ten Ontario federal penitentiaries and the outside volunteers in 1974 to develop programmes for the inmates and work toward obtaining a half-way house for Native parolees and those out on temporary absences

Authorization for Programme:

The Society is registered in Ontario as a non-profit organization and receives its funds from a variety of government and non-governmental sources, such as the National Native Alcohol Abuse Programme

Administration of Programme:

The Society is administered by a Board of Directors comprised of inmate representatives from each of the penitentiaries and outside representatives from the community

Delivery of Services:

Programmes are developed by the Board, in consultation with the members of the Society, and when funds are obtained, staff to operate the programmes are hired

Target population for Programme:

The programme serves approximately 5% of the static population of about 2,500 inmates in Ontario's federal penitentiaries

Duration of Programme:

The Society itself is ongoing as a corporation, but the duration of each programme developed by the Society is dependent on the funds available at the time

Resources:

Funds: Funding depends on contributions and grants from time to time by various government departments and private agencies

ONTARIO

Manpower: The number of staff depends on programmes in progress from time to time, as determined by the Board of Directors
