BACKGROUND AND GENERAL STATEMENT

The Law Enforcement Officers Training Standards Commission was created by the 1968 General Assembly. Funds were appropriated in 1970 and training programs were initiated in 1971. In 1974 the General Assembly changed the name to the Criminal Justice Officers Training and Standards Commission and in 1970 to the present name of Criminal Justice Services Commission. In 1976 the Commission was placed under the newly created Secretary of Public Safety, headed by The Honorable H. Selwyn Smith.

The Commission has the responsibility of establishing compulsory minimum training stendards for all permanent law enforcement officers, officers designated to provide courthouse and courtroom security, jailors or custodial officers of local law enforcement agencies and correctional officers of the Department of Corrections, Division of Adult Services and local fire marshals and their assistants.

In addition, the Commission establishes, approves and coordinates required in-service and advanced training schools within the criminal justice system.

The 1976 General Assembly assigned to the Commission the task of promulgating rules for compulsory minimum training standards for private security services business personnel employed as armored car personnel, couriers, guards, guard dog handlers, and private investigators/private detectives. Also, in 1976 the Commission was given the authority to formulate rules and regulations concerning the collection, storage, dissemination of criminal history record information, as well as the security and privacy of such records.

The Commission's thrust is directed in the main at three major areas: (1) provide rules and regulations to up-grade criminal justice officers through training, research and development; (2) promulgate rules and regulations for the training of private security services business personnel; and (3) issue rules and regulations regarding the collection, storage, dissemination, privacy and security of criminal history record information.

The Commission met seven times during this year and conducted four public hearings on various matters under their purview and in compliance with existing law.

TRAINING - MANDATED

The Commission realized full operation of all six mandated training programs during 1977. All programs remained at the previously approved minimum required hours except the courthouse and courtroom security program. This program was increased from 40 to 60 hours with the additional emphasis being placed on firearms training.

During this period, two working committees were established to thoroughly review the present mendates relating to compulsory minimum training standards for local jailors and custodial officers and corrections officers of the Department of Corrections, Division of Adult Services. It is anticipated that preliminary reports on these revisions will be submitted in the Spring, 1978, with implementation scheduled for the Fall, 1978.

Further, during this year a sub-committee reviewed the in-service firearms course, resulting in a change which will be effective June I, 1978.

Please refer to Appendix 1 for a statistical composite of mandated training for Calendar Year 1977.

TRAINING - PRIVATE SECURITY

Compulsory minimum training standards for private security services business personnel is divided into the following categories: unarmed guard requiring 12 hours of training; armed guard/courier requiring 16 hours of training; armored car personnel requiring 22-1/2 hours of training; guard dog handler requiring 28 hours of training; and private detective/private investigator requiring 48 hours of training.

November 1, 1976, was the effective date of this act and the compulsory minimum training requirements became effective on April 18, 1977.

In essence, the statute requires personnel employed subsequent to November 1, 1976, who were not employed as a guard, courier, armored car personnel, guard dog handler, or private detective/private investigator for the six months immediately preceeding November 1, 1976, to meet the compulsory minimum training.

Please refer to Appendix 2 for a statistical composite of mandated training for Calendar Year 1977.

TRAINING - SPECIALIZED/ADVANCED

During May 10-12, 1977, the Third Annual Training Directors Conference was held at Virginia Polytechnic Institute & State University. Approximately forty-five training directors/administrators and Commission members were in attendance.

The Commission continues to conduct and sponsor schools for firearms instructors and the basic instructors school.

The school for first line supervisors continues to be highly successful and requests for space exceed allocations. This program was initiated in 1976.

A new program for driver training instructors was started in 1977 with two programs conducted in October with twenty-five graduates. Additional schools are being planned for 1978.

The Commission continues to concentrate heavily on the development of local instructors. The majority of the specialized/advanced programs conducted/sponsored are designed to assist local criminal justice agencies to develop in-house expertise. The need for these programs has been necessitated due to the shortage of available, qualified instructors.

Please refer to Appendix 3 for a statistical composite of specialized/advanced training for Calendar Year 1977.

CRIMINAL HISTORY RECORD INFORMATION

During the 1976 General Assembly legislation was adopted empowering the Commission. to establish and issue rules and regulations for the collection, storage, and dissemination of criminal history record information and correctional status information. Further, review state and federal statutes, federal regulations and court orders and thereby issue rules to insure mandates of these bodies are being complied with, in regard to privacy, confidentiality and security of criminal history records and systems.

To achieve these ends the Commission established an advisory committee on crim. al history record information which committee formulated rules and regulations concerning the handling, collection, storage, and dissemination of criminal history record information. These rules and regulations were adopted by the Commission on September 15, 1977. Included in these rules and regulations were procedures to be followed concerning access, review and challenge by an individual of his criminal history record. Also established were the procedures for the purging and expunging of a criminal history record in accordance with the Code of Virginia (1950), as amended.

In Calendar Year 1977 thirty-six court orders were received to expunge criminal history records and the Commission received seven petitions to purge criminal history records on the authority of § 9-111.9, Code of Virginia (1950), as amended.

The advisory committee on criminal history record information during the final quarter of 1977 reviewed and studied the provision of the privacy and security aspect of criminal history records and presented to the Commission appropriate amended rules and regulations for final adoption and to take effect June 1, 1978.

RESOURCES

The Commission currently maintains a film library for use by all criminal justice agencies and approved training schools throughout the state. These films are used as audic visual aids in bosic, in-service and specialized training. They are housed and coordinated by the Virginia State Police Training School, Richmond, Virginia. This library has over 250 films in approximately 25 subject matter categories and are circulated free of charge to criminal justice schools.

In addition, a library is maintained by the Virginia State Police of some 50 copies on various aspects of criminal justice. Through the assistance of the Attorney General's Office, copies of the "Legal Handbook for Criminal Justice Officers" were distributed to officers attending the basic course. This handbook which was prepared by the Attorney General's Office has five sections: Laws of Arrest; Search and Seizure; Rules of Evidence; Juvenile Procedures; and Riot Law. Handouts for basic, jailors and corrections schools in the form of pamphlets entitled "Law and the Courts" and "Recognizing and Handling Abnormal Persons" were distributed. Information regarding the use of eye and ear protectors in firearms training was sent to the training officers of local and regional academies.

Funds for these resources were provided through the Virginia Council on Criminal Justice.

FUNDING

Funding for the Criminal Justice Services Commission came from the General Fund, the Council on Criminal Justice, Highway Safety Division and the Department of Professional and Occupational Regulation.

Grants obtained from the Council on Criminal Justice enabled the Commission to provide services to the law enforcement community that it could not have provided otherwise. These funds were used during 1977 to sponsor courses for first line supervisors, firearms instructors, and to update the Commission's film library. In addition, the Commission was able to provide books, legal handouts and reference materials to officers attending Commission approved schools.

The Commission conducted two defensive driving instructor schools during 1977 in an effort to prepare officers as defensive driving instructors. Upon completion of the 40 hour course, the officers are qualified to instruct defensive driving at their departments and regional training academies. Funds to conduct these schools were made available from the Highway Safety Division.

In 1977, rules relating to compulsory minimum training standards for private security services business personnel were adopted. Schools approved to conduct the minimum training are evaluated and reviewed by the Commission staff in an effort to insure that minimum training standards are being met. Special funds to meet the Commission's responsibilities as they relate to private security are provided by the Department of Professional and Occupational Regulation.

SUMMATION

The Commission has continued to carry out its mandates and overall work responsibilities through the use of advisory committees and work groups of practitioners or Commission and staff members who are guided and responsible to a Commission subcommittee who in turn is responsible to the entire Commission. The use of this method to achieve effective and organized results, at the same time affords individual segments of the criminal justice community and other interested groups to freely participate.

The sincere appreciation is extended to all the Commission members who gave freely of their time, effort and talent to accomplish the tasks and goals. Concurrently much impetus was needed to overcome the obstacles and difficulties inherent in any operation and these were fulfilled. The Commission also wishes to commend the General Assembly, Secretary of Public Safety, Attorney General's Office, Virginia State Police, Department of Corrections, Division of Justice and Crime Prevention, State Crime Commission, chiefs of police, sheriff's departments, school directors of regional and departmental academies and staff who worked with dedication for a most noble cause. The final product during this year was a better trained and more capable officer. The Commission is proud to have served and attained the accomplishments during 1977.
