The Dauphin County Courthouse at Front and Market Streets in Harrisburg combines classic proportions with contemporary details. Dedicated in 1943, it contains six floors for courts and offices and a penthouse for mechanical purposes.

At the Front Street entrance is a fountain which sends forth six streams into an elevated basin. Carved in the wall behind the pool is a quotation from Proverbs: "The law of the wise is a fountain of life." Another on the outward edge of the basin reads: "God gave the fountain of justice. Men must preserve its purity."

Surmounting the three doors on the Market Street side are three marble figures representing Wisdom, Justice and Mercy. Illustrations engraved in the 11 windows of the Law Library symbolize Hebrew Law, Maritime Law, Roman Law, Trial by Jury, the Magna Carta, the Bill of Rights, Common Law, Equity, Civil Law, the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.

FOREWORD

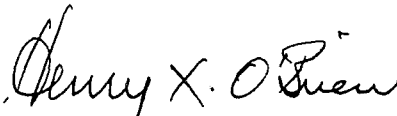

I am pleased to present the report of the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts for the year 1980. Prepared by the Court Administrator of Pennsylvania, the Honorable Alexander F. Barbieri, and his able staff, the following pages provide at once a comprehensive and detailed account of the operations of the Pennsylvania judicial system.

The year 1980 saw the start of many new activities, while others were brought to a successful conclusion. This is particularly evident in the field of appellate court reform.

With the support of the Legislature and the approval of the electorate of Pennsylvania, the Superior Court was increased from seven to 15 judges. A second measure to improve the quality and efficiency of appellate court dispositions was the expansion of the jurisdiction of the Superior Court with a corresponding decrease in the areas of mandated jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. As a result, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court, like the United States Supreme Court, could by its discretion accept or reject appeals in major jurisdictional areas, thereby rendering virtually final the decisions of the two intermediate appellate courts. Though they will take some time to fully implement, these changes are designed to free the Supreme Court to review, as needed, judgments in which there was uncertainty at the intermediate appellate level or a division in the court itself as to what the law in the particular instance should be. These changes will also provide the Court with the much needed time to meet its vast administrative responsibilities as head of the unified judicial system of Pennsylvania.

For these reforms, we owe a considerable debt to former Chief Justice Michael J. Eagen. His foresight and dedication helped to bring about a new era of judicial service in Pennsylvania.

The courts of this Commonwealth are steadfastly committed to advancing the interests of justice. But we must remember, it is only with the continued support of the citizens of Pennsylvania that our courts can bring existence and meaning to this fundamental ideal.

Henry X. O'Brien
Chief Justice of Pennsylvania

REPORT FROM THE ADMINISTRATOR

To: The Chief Justice of Pennsylvania and the Justices of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania
Re: 1980 Annual Report

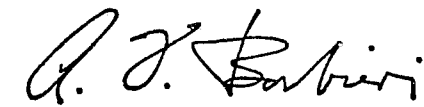

I am pleased to submit herewith, pursuant to R.J.A. 505(14), the Annual Report of the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts for the year 1980.

More than any prior year during my tenure as Court Administrator of Pennsylvania, 1980 was a year of major changes, improvements and reforms at all levels of Pennsylvania's judicial system. In the "Foreword" preceding this statement, the Chief Justice has noted the major reforms achieved with the support of the Legislature in the appellate court system. Other accomplishments in which the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts (AOPC) played a significant role are detailed at length in the report that follows.

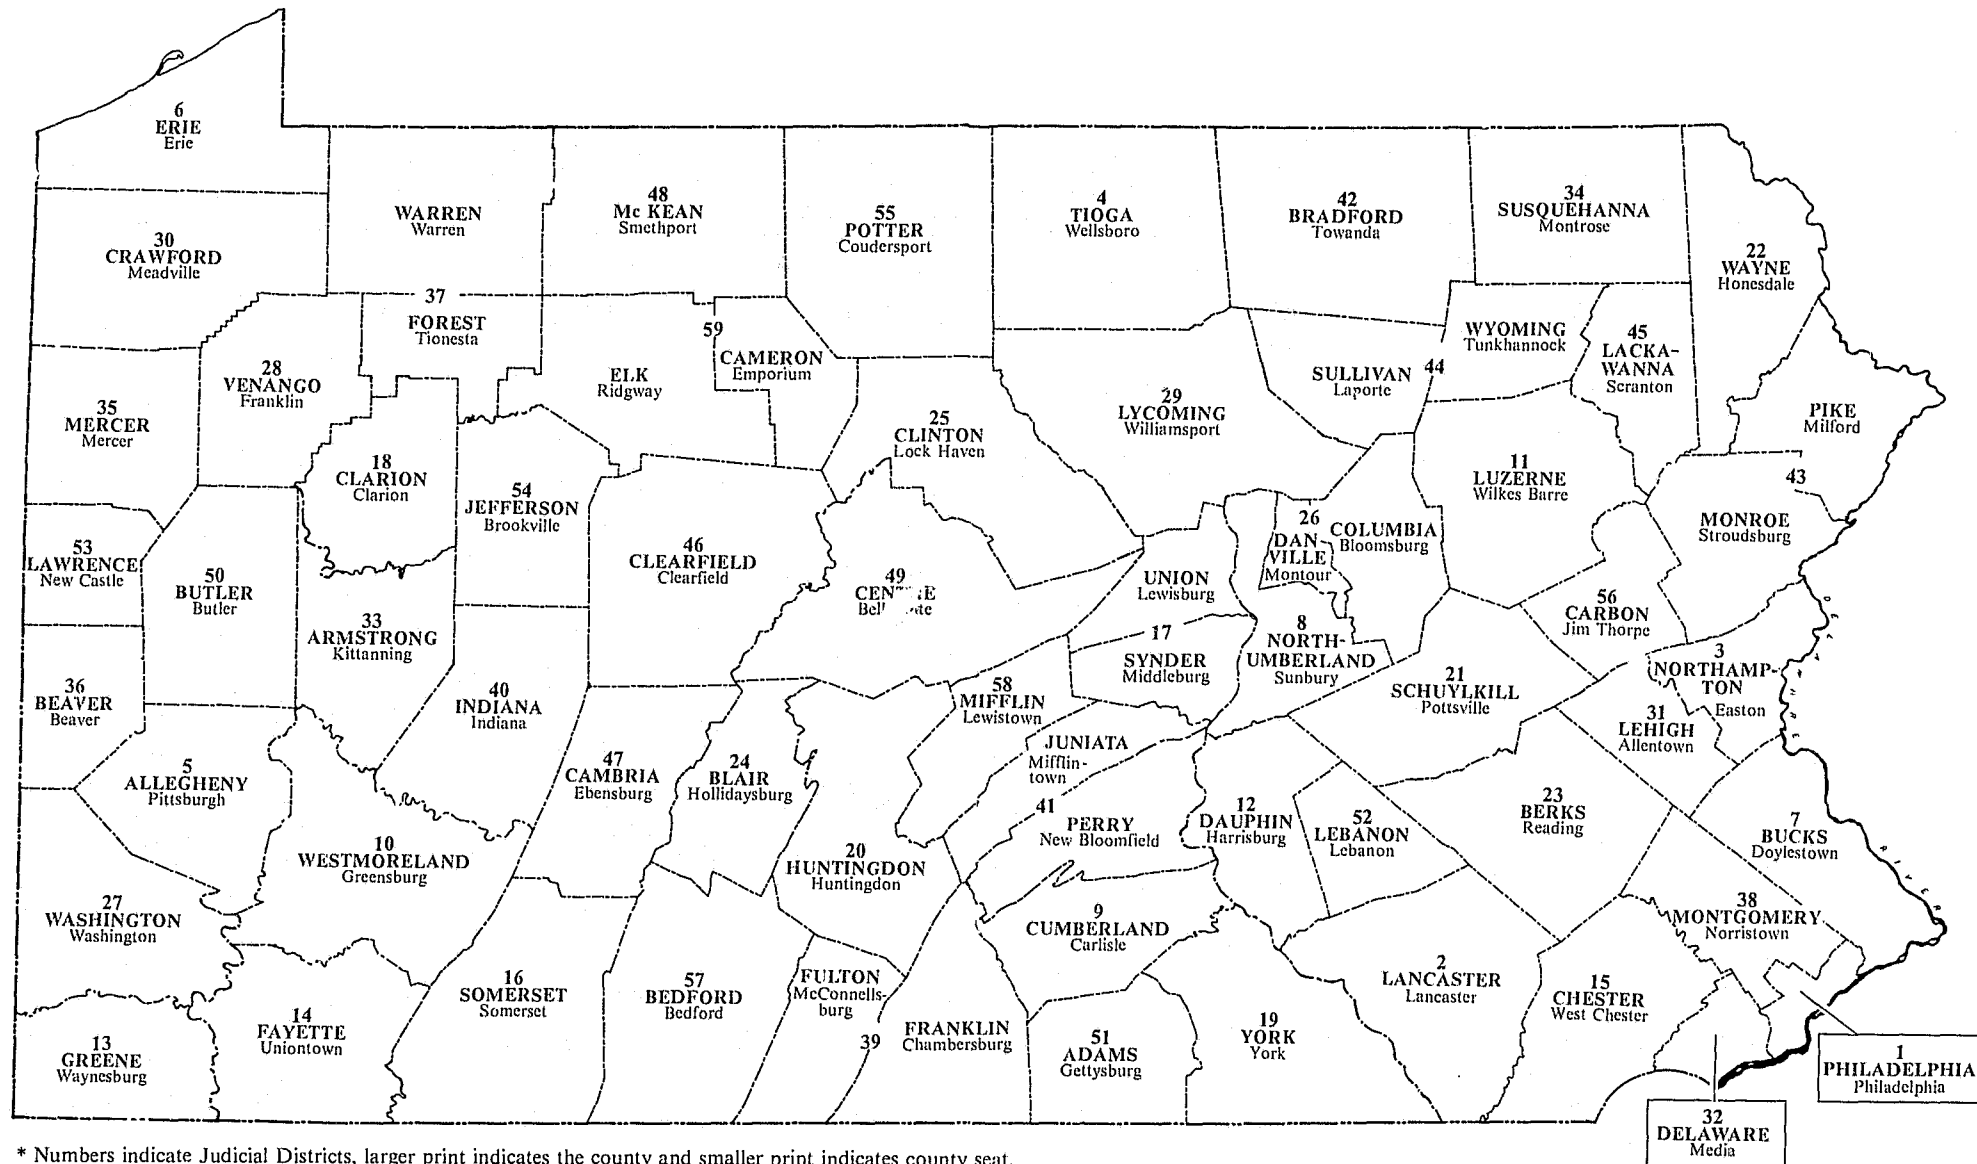

I particularly want to take this opportunity to express to the Justices of the Supreme Court my appreciation for their total support, cooperation and confidence. On my behalf and on behalf of my dedicated staff, I extend to the Judiciary and to the administrative and support personnel of all other courts, including district justice and other "grass roots" courts, our sincere thanks for their vital assistance. Without the unstinting efforts of all personnel in the many systems involved, the responsibilities of this Office could not have been met.

The decade of the 80's will surely be one of further changes and challenges. The litigation explosion shows some signs of abating in terms of the rapid increase in the number of cases filed. At the same time, the cases continuing to pour into the courts are more complex and time consuming than before. It is also clear that the courts will be required to increase their efficiency wherever possible, as they face the twin pressures of more work and existing or reduced financial support.

These challenges can be met, as have those in the past, by the cooperation and ingenuity of the entire judicial branch. I look forward to being part of this rewarding task. Respectfully submitted,

Alexander F. Barbieri
Court Administrator of Pennsylvania

AS APPORTIONED BY ACT OF 1951

BRINGING ORDER TO THE COURTS

The law is with us and about us, from birth certificate to death certificate and in between: driver's license, marriage license, owning property, observing the corner traffic light, settling contractual disputes and righting wrongs.

The Pennsylvania Constitution in 1968 created a unified court system to bring order to the law and ease the workings of justice. To direct this system and serve as a resource for those within it, the Supreme Court established the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts.

Yet, of our government's separate executive, legislative and judicial branches, least is known about the last. This is not because of any conscious attempt to cover up. Rather, it is because of our own perceptions that the law is complex and technical, that the pathways to justice are intricate and obscure, that the language is arcane and opaque. We see the law through a glass darkly.

But the law gives our lives structure. Within this structure, there is freedom; without it, chaos. The law preserves our individual rights and protects our communities and country. The law is dignity and majesty; it is also humanity and decency.

How well does the law work for us? To answer that question, the Pennsylvania Constitution in 1968 created a unified court system to bring order to the law and ease the workings of justice. To direct this system and serve as a resource for those within it, the Supreme Court established the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts, AOPC. The AOPC has wide-ranging responsibility for a unified court system - from the district justices in a small upstate community with one trial judge serving two geographically vast counties, to the 81-judge Court of Common Pleas of Philadelphia, to the state's 28,000 lawyers, to the intermediate appeal courts, Commonwealth and Superior, and to the Supreme Court itself.

This report is an accounting of how that Office has served the citizens of Pennsylvania.

How the Courts Work - From Special Courts to the Courts of Common Pleas, to the Appellate Courts

Special Courts

You've been ticketed for running a red light. You say it isn't so, and you go to court to protest and get out of paying the fine.

This is the introduction most of us have to the court system. At this first level are the special courts, generally known in Pennsylvania as the District Justice Courts. In counties other than Philadelphia, district justices, formerly known as justices of the peace, preside over the special courts in Magisterial Districts. They have jurisdiction over summary criminal cases like traffic offenses, over landlord-tenant matters and other civil actions with claims no higher than $2,000. They can issue warrants as well as hold arraignments and preliminary hearings in all criminal cases.

Although district justices do not have to be lawyers, they must take a course and pass a qualifying examination before taking office. They must also take one week of continuing education each year that they stay in office. This continuing education is one of the services which the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts provides.

Separate Traffic Courts are part of the special courts in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. Pittsburgh has six police magistrates in addition to its district justices. The Philadelphia Municipal Court is a court of record, the third largest court of record in Pennsylvania. Its 22 judges must be lawyers. They have jurisdiction over all criminal offenses punishable by a maximum five-year prison term and over civil actions where the amount claimed is no more than $1,000.

Court of Common Pleas

You feel that you have been wronged. Your neighbor's dog, a large and largely untrained mastiff, has knocked over your trash cans, trampled your vegetable plot, imprinted his paws in your newly poured concrete sidewalk and bitten your child. You sue for damages in the amount of $5,000.

Your case goes to the Common Pleas Court. These are the courts of general trial jurisdiction, with original jurisdiction over all cases not exclusively assigned to another court. Each of Pennsylvania's 59 judicial districts has at least one Common Pleas Court Judge. Philadelphia, the 1st Judicial District has 81 judges. These districts coincide geographically with most of Pennsylvania's 67 counties, except in eight districts made up of two less populated counties each.

Appellate Courts

You've lost your case in Common Pleas and you decide to appeal.

Pennsylvania has two levels of appellate courts. On the first or intermediate appellate level, are Commonwealth Court and the Superior Court. Above these two is the Supreme Court, the court of last resort in this State.

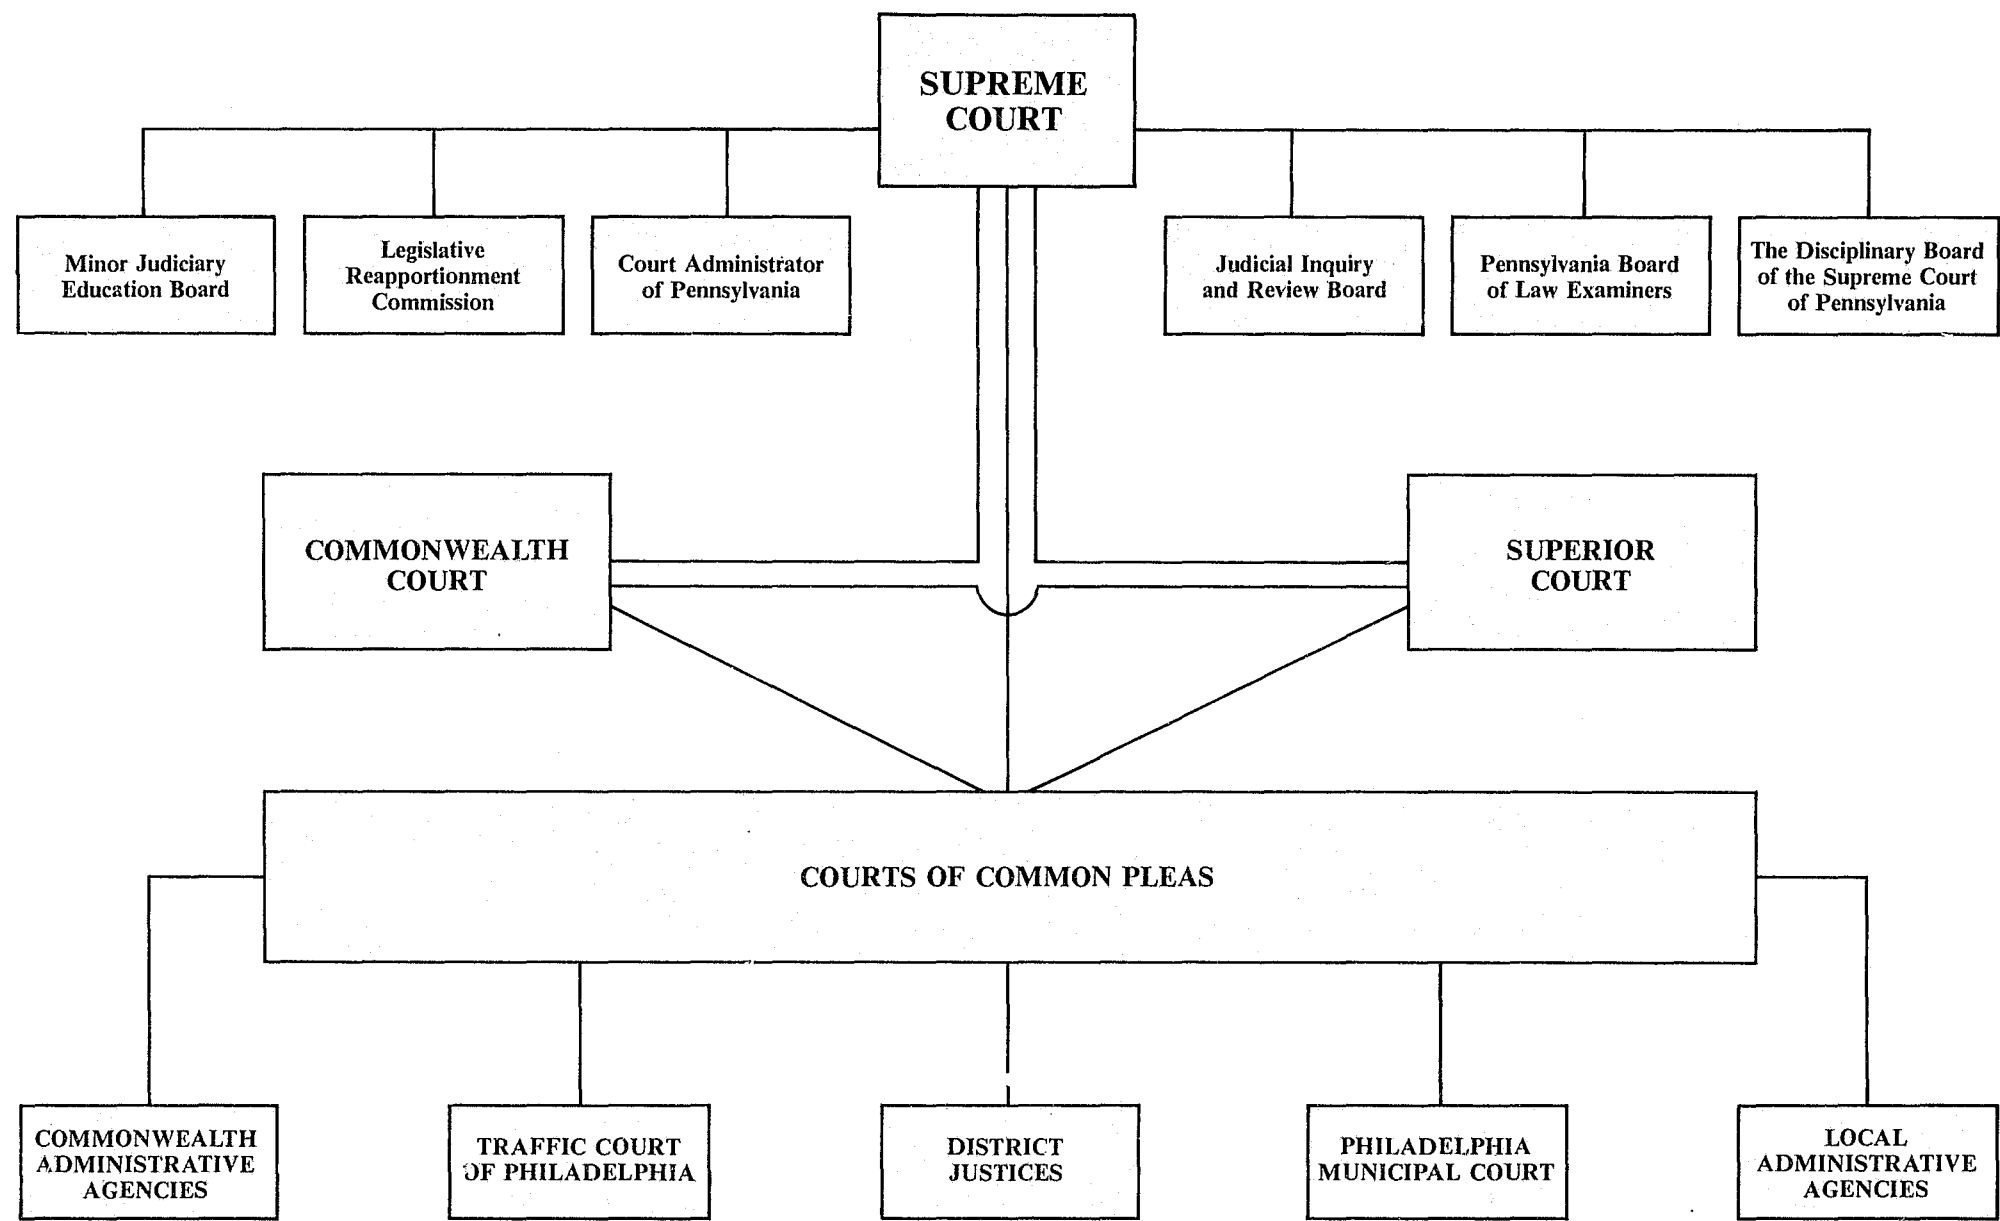

Commonwealth Court basically has jurisdiction over appeals involving government agencies and officials, as well as many matters involving not-for-profit corporations. It also has jurisdiction over many cases in which state officials are parties.

The Superior Court has jurisdiction over all appeals not specifically entrusted by law to another appellate court.

The Supreme Court has exclusive jurisdiction of appeals from Common Pleas courts in certain types of cases and may, in its discretion, hear any appeal from a decision of one of the intermediate appellate courts. It also may take jurisdiction over any case pending in state courts when the case is precedent-setting or involves an issue of immediate public importance. The Supreme Court decides on almost every issue of consequence to Pennsylvania's voters, aside from contests between parties, be it taxation, political apportionment, administration of public business and maintenance of ethical standards.

Let's say you lose in Commonwealth Court. You're angry enough and have money and patience enough to appeal to the Supreme Court. The Court denies cert or certiorari, its willingness to hear a case. In effect, then, the decision of the lower court stands.

Helping this system run smoothly is the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts. It recommends improvements, compiles financial and statistical data on the business of the courts, prepares educational and training materials, receives comments and complaints from the public about the system and advocates a judicial system that is just and fair and furthers the dynamics of democracy.

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA
UNIFIED JUDICIAL SYSTEM As of December 4, 1980

THE YEAR IN REVIEW

"The law must be stable, but it must not stand still."
Roscoe Pound, Introduction to the Philosophy of Law, 1922

Two signal events in 1980 will have far-reaching effects on the administration of justice in Pennsylvania for years to come.

The first was legislation expanding the Superior Court from seven to 15 judges.

The second was the decision by the State Legislature to convert the jurisdiction of the Supreme Court to certiorari.* The Court can now decide, for the most part, which cases it hears.

These management reforms should redistribute the load of the appellate courts and ease the workings of justice. Expansion of Superior Court by eight judges, from seven to 15, was preceded by a decision to allow the Court to sit in panels of three, in routine cases, rather than en banc, or all together. The results of these two measures are an almost five-fold increase in the capacity of the Superior Court to hear cases.

The "cert" decision allows Pennsylvania's highest court of appeals, like the United States Supreme Court, to focus its efforts on important cases that break new legal or constitutional ground.

Both changes directly affect the key question of the speed of disposition. Reduced to basics, disposition is brought about by court action or by the prospect of imminent and certain court action. It is the antithesis of "justice delayed is justice denied."

Another influence on disposition was the 240 day rule requiring that civil cases be certified as ready for trial within that period. This rule, which was actually a temporary order of the Court, was rescinded in 1981. It served an important purpose: to expedite the movement of cases.

Expansion of Superior Court by eight judges... was preceded by a decision to allow the Court to sit in panels of three... rather than en banc... The results of these two measures are an almost five-fold increase in the capacity of the Superior Court to hear cases.

Also affecting disposition was a decision declaring a portion of the Medical Malpractice Law unconstitutional. Accordingly, malpractice cases, which formerly were sent to arbitration panels, may now go to the Court of Common Pleas, unless the parties choose to use the Malpractice Act panels.

Legislation Affecting "The Law"

Acts by the Pennsylvania Legislature similarly influence the way the law affects each of us. In that respect, 1980 was a significant year for legislation, not the least of which were the aforementioned Superior Court expansion and Supreme Court "cert" ruling.

The "no-fault" Divorce Law went into effect last July. It should remove the prior perception of collusion and over-emphasis on family conflicts. Mutual assent divorce is permitted after 90 days of separation and determination that the marriage is irretrievably broken.

Counseling is mandatory in mutual assent divorces as well as those where indignities are charged. The courts may also require counseling when the couple involved has at least one child under 16.

The Law provides for alimony, child support and equitable distribution of property. Alimony is limited to that time until the recipient becomes self-sufficient.

For the first time in Pennsylvania, the Legislature established court proceedings for the involuntary termination of parental rights and mandated that a child up to age 18 must have legal counsel. By making the child a legal party to the adoption proceedings, the Law pays attention to his or her needs and welfare. At the same time, any parent wishing to relinquish rights to their child must appear in court to establish the voluntary nature of this action.

Parental rights are legally terminated if the child has been abandoned for three months, or if he or she has been in a foster home for six months with no sign that the natural parent can provide adequate care in the future. The Law's intention is to end the limbo of lengthy foster care which causes uncertainty and anxiety to the child and to his natural, foster or adoptive parents.

Improving Jury Management

Another statute passed in 1980 governs jury selection, service and compensation. It aims to reduce the aimless idling affecting many jurors and disaffecting their enthusiasm for the jury system while they wait to be called to hear a case. The act applies to all counties except Philadelphia and home rule counties, which have already adopted or adapted it.

Under the statute, a master list of prospective jurors must be compiled at least annually from the voter registration lists. Disqualified persons are those illiterate in English and those with a mental or physical infirmity or a criminal conviction. Qualified persons are exempt if they are serving in the military or have served on a jury within the last year.

Jury fees are nine dollars a day for the first three days and $25 a day thereafter, with mileage reimbursement at 17 cents a mile. By providing reimbursement at 80% after the third day if the juror is participating in a trial, the Law offers monetary incentive to put the juror's time to use immediately.

To save money and cut juror inconvenience, many counties began on their own a one-day, one-trial system. Under it, a juror not called to a panel the first day is dismissed instead of sitting around the courthouse for up to two weeks. To cite just two examples in 1980, Montgomery County saved $64,140 and Allegheny county saved $252,195 in juror fees and mileage.

The "Foreign Juries" Law, also known as the "Change of Venue" Law, allows juries in criminal cases to be selected in a "foreign county" to hear the case in the county in which the offense charged took place. The costs involved are less than those with "change of venue" when a new location for a trial had to be found; not only juries, but witnesses, counsel and judges had to move also.

Act 1980-106 created a total of 14 additional judgeships for the Courts of Common Pleas in Bucks, Butler, Chester, Erie, Lebanon, Lehigh, Lycoming, Mercer, Monroe-Pike, Montgomery, Westmoreland, York and two for Delaware County. Like the expansion in Superior Court, expansion in the trial courts is based on the expectation that more judges can hear more cases; and thus cases will move more quickly to disposition.

More Hearings, Fewer Trials

As Administrator for the Pennsylvania Courts, Judge Alexander F. Barbieri invited District Court Administrators to let him know what they thought were significant improvements in their trial court administration during 1980. Here is some of what they reported:

Cambria County has found that 90% of custody complaints are settled by the officer at a hearing set by the local court administrator. These settlements are approved by a judge. Adams County has similar preliminary custody conferences and Clinton County has tightened its pretrial conference procedures. In addition to settling many cases outside the courtroom, this extra step enables the court to schedule custody hearings more quickly and economically.

The sharing of ideas means counties learn from each other. Bedford County has adopted a central magistrate's court plan similar to one in Centre County. Preliminary hearings are held at a central location one day a week, and a different district justice presides each week. The hearings are scheduled routinely at the time of preliminary arraignment. As a result, many cases are disposed of at the magisterial level and do not have to go to the Common Pleas Court. The new system also keeps minor complaints out of the county court and allows more time for serious cases.

Tioga County requires all criminal defendants to appear for court arraignment. The benefits have been a shorter time lapse from the filing of complaint to arraignment, increased control of cases, fewer bench warrants for failure to appear, and more cases achieving early adjudication.

Lackawanna County started scheduling one week a month for arbitration in 1980. Two panels of arbitrators hear about six cases each and receive $150 daily. The results have been a 73% disposition rate and a savings of about $20 on each case, despite the increase of $100 a day for the arbitrators.

Allegheny County has created a new Children's Room where mothers awaiting disposition of their support, custody or divorce cases can get trained supervision for their children. The service costs nothing to either the parents or taxpayers and is staffed by adult volunteers.

A number of counties reported a variety of improved jury management systems. Clarion, for example, abolished its Grand Jury and now calls one panel of jurors every other month for both criminal and civil juries. It often starts court at 7:30 A.M. when doing so can try a case in one day.

Delaware County implemented an Individual Calendaring system which immediately assigns a case to a judge; the case remains with that judge until trial or settlement. The system involves mandatory pre-trial conferences, close judicial supervision and accurate, timely and continuous monitoring. Philadelphia increased the judges assigned to its Individual Calendaring program from six to 10 and the cases heard from 60 to 100.

Other instances of improved jury management like automated questionnaires and summons forms, jury orientation and jurors' evaluation of one day-one trial jury service were reported by Bucks, Indiana, Lebanon, Mercer, Monroe, Schuylkill and Washington Counties.

Word processing equipment has made a significant impact on court operations. Through it, the Harrisburg and Philadelphia offices of Commonwealth Court can achieve instant communication and transmission of documents; decisions can be filed more quickly as typing time is reduced. This equipment, selected for all the appellate courts, has quickened the preparation and circulation of opinions.

Allegheny County established a computerized Collecting and Disbursing Office in the Family Division to handle more than $25 million a year in support checks. One of the County's more creative programs was a new Children's Room where mothers awaiting disposition of their support, custody or divorce cases can get trained supervision for their children. The service costs nothing to either the parents or the taxpayers and is staffed by adult volunteers weekdays from 9 A.M. to noon. The objective is to extend the hours to meet the full schedule of the court.

Year in Review (cont'd)

Additional space has increased the courtrooms available for trials from six to nine in Westmoreland County. More space has made possible better access to records in Snyder and Fayette counties.

In Philadelphia a new Housing Court gave residents a better forum for handling housing problems, and a new Tax Court collected more than $5 million in delinquent taxes. The County's Common Pleas Court established a dismissal program that cleared several hundred inactive cases from its docket. This program will remove one thousand cases a week until the docket is completely cleared. This, combined with automation, should end manual docketing within the next 18 months.

In Lycoming County, a weekend retreat involved the court, county commissioners, other elected officials, and key appointed officials. Its purpose: to broaden the understanding each has of the others' responsibilities and problems.

Luzerne County scheduled regular meetings between county judges and lawyers to exchange views and ideas and to improve the trial system.

Throughout the Commonwealth, efforts continued - some new, some modified, all intensified - to improve the administration of justice.

Technological Advances

No account of management improvements can fail to include advances in technology - word processing, data processing, automation - which facilitate the flow of work. Courts are finding increasing use and applicability of space-age systems, now considered essential in court management rather than mysterious and esoteric.

The AOPC gathers and disseminates much of the systematic and comprehensive centralized information basic to an efficient trial court system.

For instance, the Offender Based Tracking System, OBTS, will, when fully operational, identify and follow a defendant through the judicial system from first entry to final disposition.

The Docket Transcript Unit of Planning and Development provides timely information necessary for making informed decisions. Some examples: it can submit figures to the Statistical Analysis Center in Harrisburg, let the Pennsylvania State Police know the outcome of criminal cases or analyze computer data for court management, case flow and budget purposes.

A Law Enforcement Assistance Act (LEAA) grant from the Pennsylvania Commission on Crime and Delinquency afforded an increase in the coding and processing staff. For the first time, the AOPC was able to keep current with the inflow of forms.

The docket transcript form itself was redesigned and reduced in size. Other changes incorporated suggestions from various agencies. This Office offered an extensive series of training programs on use of the new technology to district justices, staffs and clerks of court.

Developing Cooperation, Programs, Procedures

To improve the quality and timeliness of docket transcript data, AOPC established a close working relationship with representatives of other statewide criminal justice agencies. Liaison is maintained to a number of court or justice-related groups, such as the Committee to Study Pennsylvania's Unified Court System known as the "Pomeroy Task Force," the Joint Family Law Council, the Governor's Council on Drug and Alcohol Abuse, and the National Center for State Courts' Metropolitan Court Delay Study.

Local courts were supplied with specifications for placing data on computer tape. The Planning and Development Department also proposed changes in court rules and procedures to speed completion of the reports or to improve the criminal justice information system throughout the Commonwealth.

In addition to processing statistics for various reports, the Planning and Development Department prepared a number of special studies during 1980.

These included:

Analysis of judges' responses to the March 20, 1980 Order of the Supreme Court requiring a report of pending cases;
Study of local court filing fee revenues;
Estimate of time-to trial in various counties based on reported intake and disposition.

Outside funding helps planning efforts which are directed toward program innovation and experimentation. During 1980, several major LEAA grants were developed, along with comprehensive rules for court reporters and new procedures for the statewide civil case tracking system.

This Department also reviewed more than a dozen local court programs and helped them find solutions to the persistent problems of case flow, records management, follow-up of records on appeal and destruction of old records to create new space.

Suits Against Judges

The "litigation explosion" all around us includes suits for monetary damages and prospective relief against judges as a result of actions they took in the performance of their official duties. In such situations, the Administrative Office provides them with legal counsel.

In 1980, the AOPC's Legal Department represented judges and other employees of the judicial system in 154 legal proceedings. This was an increase of 34% over 1979. There was a slight drop in the number of pro se filings by plaintiffs without benefit of counsel. These were primarily civil rights actions seeking various forms of relief. Pro se lawsuits were generally directed against judges challenging alleged errors occurring during legal proceedings or due to dissatisfaction with the result of the proceedings.

The complaints by counsel typically involved complex constitutional issues and sought some form of equitable remedy such as injunctive or declaratory relief. The majority of trial litigation was in the federal system.

On the appellate court level, fully half of the activity involved actions for mandamus and prohibition. The remaining portion of cases involved appeals from the trial level and they were split evenly between the State Appellate Courts and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, with some litigation in the U.S. Supreme Court.

Judicial Education

The high priority this Office places on judicial educational services results from our recognition that continuing education improves both the quality and efficiency of justice. Funding for these programs came, in part, from a grant by the Pennsylvania Commission on Crime and Delinquency.

AOPC conducted 11 educational programs in 1980, including:
Orientation Seminar for freshmen judges;
Semi-Annual and Annual Meeting of the Pennsylvania Conference of State Trials Judges;
Domestic Relations Training Program;
Superior Court Seminar;
Two seminars on court administration;
Juvenile Court Training Program;
President Judges/District Court Administrators Conference;
Superior Court Orientation for the new judges of that recently enlarged court.

AOPC's monthly newsletter, the Pennsylvania Judiciary News, also provides pertinent information about case law, rules changes, administrative directives, legislation and other new relevant to the judicial system. About 1,850 people and agencies receive each issue.

Internal Management: Saving Time and Money

Money spent in 1980 for data processing is an investment in more efficient management of trial cases and hearings with improved accountability and accuracy.

Automation of the Superior Court docket system was a major breakthrough. It will reduce the heavy case backlog of this appellate court. With computerization of the Docket Transcript Program, more than 200,000 district justice records will be available in a compact, quickly retrievable form.

Internal Management is also concerned with providing an environment in which people can work more effectively. The five-year lease of 51,307 square feet in the old U.S. Courthouse in Philadelphia relieves the overcrowding and uncertainty of location for the many panel hearings before judges of the Superior and Commonwealth Courts. Philadelphia has thus provided these courts, for the first time in history, with their own space, judicial chambers and a law library equipped with computer terminals for nationwide legal research.

Such practical improvements as renovations and refurbishings have meant tremendous differences in how people work, where records are stored and what information is easily available. The bricks and mortar of the judicial system cannot be separated from the people who run it.

Other 1980 achievements of this Department:

Supervision of a federally funded contract with Pennsylvania State University to survey each county courthouse in the State, develop guidelines and criteria for court facilities and establish blueprints for each.

Newly developed guidelines for appellate court judges for space, furniture, equipment and staff.

An inventory of statewide judicial property out of which new judges can be supplied with furniture and equipment whenever a vacancy on the courts occurs.

Reimbursement totaling $24 million to the 67 counties for their county court costs and for some of their appellate court expenditures. This program, begun in 1971, has been funded by the State.

Such practical improvements as renovations and refurbishings have meant tremendous differences in how people work, where records are stored and what information is easily available. The bricks and mortar of the judicial system cannot be separated from the people who run it.

Department of Administrative Services: Improving Fiscal Management

Improved fiscal management to save taxpayers' money is one of the primary missions of the Department of Administrative Services.

Modern word processing equipment was selected for the appellate courts to facilitate the preparation and circulation of opinions.

In 1980, this Department of the AOPC developed uniform procedures to implement the Jury Reform Act. It also gave administrative support to the newly expanded Superior Court in its use of three-judge panels to equalize the workload and give each judge an opportunity to work with every other judge on the Superior Court.

A judiciary personnel classification and compensation system set up job classifications and pay grades, including documented salary increments for all appellate court and AOPC employees to insure equitable and adequate compensation for performance. In addition, the Supreme Court approved the Judiciary Personnel Policies for appellate court employees in regard to appointments, classification, salary administration, leave administration, conduct and performance evaluations. A Judiciary Travel Policy was approved and implemented for all employees other than judges.

Major progress came in setting up computerized, uniform accounting standards in accordance with general accounting principles to document all expenditures made by state-paid personnel. A comprehensive review of accounting practices was begun to improve the purchasing, payment and accounting process.

These accounting standards were also extended to the management of grants so that a clearly defined audit trail could be marked for all federal monies received from LEAA.

ADVISORY COMMITTEES AND BOARDS

The expertise of judges and practicing lawyers is brought to the Court each year through various advisory committees. They bring recommendations from sources in the bench and bar that suggest improvements in procedures. Thus, they are a major assistance to the Supreme Court in meeting its constitutional responsibilities in the procedural areas of Pennsylvania's judiciary system.

Changes originating in the Supreme Court are, for the most part, passed through appropriate committees before promulgation by the Court. Proposals for new rules and changes in existing rules are generally published in preliminary form to afford the widest opportunities for comment and criticism.

Among the advisory entities is the Judicial Council whose members look at the judicial system as a whole. The Council can act on matters referred to it by the Supreme Court, or it can originate recommendations to the Court.

In 1980, its 22 members were Chief Justice Henry X. O'Brien, Chairman, who succeeded former Chief Justice Michael J. Eagen; Justices Samuel J. Roberts and Robert N. C. Nix, Jr., of the Supreme Court, and the Honorable Alexander F. Barbieri, Court Administrator.

Other members were President Judges: William F. Cercone, Superior Court; James C. Crumlish, Commonwealth Court; Edward J. Bradley, Philadelphia Court of Common Pleas; Michael J. O'Malley, Allegheny County Court of Common Pleas; Charles P. Mirarchi, President, Pennsylvania Conference of State Trial Judges; State Senator Edward P. Zemprelli; State Representative William D. Hutchinson; Common Pleas Judges Joseph F. O'Kicki, Edwin M. Kosik and Edwin L. Snyder; District Justice Richard Reeser, Practicing Attorneys James A. Strazzella, Philip W. Amram, Frederica Massiah-Jackson, Lewis H.

Van Dusen; non-lawyer electors: Glen Y. Forney, President Security Bank and Trust Co., Stroudsburg; Arthur W. Thomas, President, Philadelphia Board of Education; Sister M. Lawreace Antoun, S.S.J., President, Villa Maria College, Erie.

The Lawyers' Disciplinary Board

For the first time since its creation in 1972, two non-lawyers were appointed to the Disciplinary Board, which hears complaints against lawyers. Expanding the Board from 11 to 13 members are Nancy Neuman, former president, Pennsylvania League of Women Voters and chairman of the Federal Judiciary Nominations Committee, and Dr. Winfield Keck, chairman of the Physics Department, Lafayette College. Both were appointed by former Chief Justice Michael J. Eagen.

Other members, all lawyers, are Charles V. Henry, III, Chairman; John C. Anderson, Vice Chairman; Robert C. Daniels, John M. Elliott, May Bell Hammerman, Dennis C. Harrington, Herbert J. Johnson, Jr., Sidney L. Krawitz, Frank J. McDonnell, Raymond Pearlstine, Pasco L. Shiavo.

The number of complaints received during 1980 increased over the previous year, to continue a trend during the past decade. The 2,079 resolved complaints were 72 more than the previous year. An average of 173 complaints is filed monthly. The increasing activity is in part because of the larger number of attorneys now registered to practice — 28,816 on December 31, 1980, compared to 27,910 the previous year — and to increasing public awareness of the Disciplinary Board.

During the past year 2,021 complaints, 52 more than the previous year, were disposed of; however, there was a net increase of 58 complaints received over matters terminated. This left 802 active complaints at the start of 1981.

The increasing activity is in part because of the larger number of attorneys now registered to practice - 28,816 on December 31, 1980 - and to increasing public awareness of the Disciplinary Board.

In 1980, discipline was imposed in 124 cases. This figure does not include 10 interim suspensions of various types. In addition, 11 petitions for reinstatement were acted upon. Three matters were dismissed after hearing and review by the Board.

Since 1973, the workload has increased because of the number of attorneys who have applied for reinstatement after being inactive more than three years (the application of this rule had been waived by the Supreme Court until November 1, 1979), and because periods of suspension for attorneys disciplined in previous years have run their course.

Judicial Inquiry and Review Board

Hon. William F. Cercone, Chairman; Hon. Robert Van der Voort, Vice Chairman; Lois W. Barnum, Hon. William E. Breene, Hon. James R. Cavanaugh, Hon. Henry R. Smith, Jr.; and these attorneys: G. Thomas Miller, Robert B. Surrick; Richard E. McDevitt, Executive Director.

The Judicial Inquiry and Review Board, which was created in 1968, hears complaints against judges. During its initial years, the volume of complaints increased steadily to a total of 379 received in 1979. That volume has leveled off. In 1980, 328 complaints were received.

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania has a total of 969 judges and justices. Since 1969 the overall dispositions are as follows:

Juvenile Court Judges' Commission

Hon. Fred P. Anthony, Chairman; Hon. Isaac S. Garb, Vice Chairman; Hon. Albert E. Acker, Hon. Maxwell E. Davison, Hon. W. Richard Eshelman, Hon. Doris M. Harris, Hon. Edmund V. Ludwig, Hon. Stanton Wettick, Jr., Hon. Robert L. Wolfe; Dr. Ronald Sharp, Executive Director.

This agency operates independently of the Unified Judicial System; its members are nominated by the Chief Justice and appointed by the Governor. The Commission's interests are in juvenile affairs. It seeks to provide training for juvenile probation officers and consultation with juvenile court judges. In 1980, it published a handbook, a directory of juvenile agencies and a newsletter.

Civil Procedural Rules Committee

Philip W. Amram, Esq., Chairman; John A. Metz, Jr., Vice Chairman; Hon. Albert E. Acker, Hon. Ruggero J. Aldisert, Consultant to the Committee; Hon. Madaline Palladino, Hon. Dale F. Shugart, and these attorneys: Edward J. Balzarini, William H. Eckert, John G. Gent, Richard L. Grossman, Richard Henry Klein, Morton Myers, Rod J. Pera, David S. Shrager, C. H. Welles, and Sidney Schulman, Executive Director; Harold K. Don, Jr., Staff Attorney.

The Committee held 10 two-day meetings during 1980, three in Pittsburgh and all others in Philadelphia. In addition, there were numerous subcommittee meetings on divorce, support, custody and partition of personal property.

Two new attorneys were added to the Committee for three-year terms beginning July 1, 1980: James J. Flaherty, of Pittsburgh, and David Pittinsky, of Philadelphia. Their appointments increased Committee membership to 21.

Several significant amendments to the Rules of Civil Procedure were promulgated or became effective during 1980.

Rule 2180, governing service upon corporations and similar entities, was amended by the addition of new subdivision (d), effective January 5, 1980. The amendment added a catch-all provision where service cannot be made under the other provisions of the rule.

Rule 4003.4 was amended to clarify the right of discovery of a statement of another party. Rule 4024 was promulgated to make the 1978 amendments to the discovery rules applicable to pending actions.

New rule 237.1 became effective February 1, 1980, providing for notification of intention to enter a default judgment. This rule was suggested by the Superior Court to stem the tide of appeals on judgment.

New Rules 1601 to 1604, governing declaratory judgments, became effective February 1, 1980. These rules filled the void created by the repeal of the Judiciary Act Repealer Act, JARA.

Criminal Procedural Rules Committee

Professor James Strazzella, Chairman; Hon. Robert I. Shadle, Vice Chairman, Hon. G. Thomas Gates, Hon. Thomas D. Gladden, and these attorneys: Robert L. Eberhardt, A. Richard Gerber, Benjamin Lerner, Edward G. Rendell, Nicholas Sellers.

The Criminal Procedural Rules Committee continued in 1980 to advise the Supreme Court on its mandate to prescribe rules governing criminal practice and procedure throughout the Commonwealth. The Committee made a variety of recommendations to the Court about criminal procedural rule revisions and undertook general studies of areas of criminal procedure that may need future revision. It also communicated with individuals and groups connected with the criminal justice system.

As is typical each year, the Committee considered and rejected, as unnecessary, impractical or unwise, a large array of suggested rule changes.

The Committee met approximately every six weeks in 1980 for two to three days. At each meeting, its members considered a detailed agenda, extensively researched by staff and circulated in advance. Many of the 1980 agenda matters were necessitated by JARA, which became effective in 1978 to further unification and repeal unnecessary or contradictory statutes. Several agenda matters came to the Committee's attention through insights of members, referrals by other Court agencies, and communications from members of the bench and bar. As always, the Committee invited and received a steady flow of communication articulating difficulties with the rules and suggesting revisions.

New Rules of Criminal Procedure and Amendments to Existing Rules

Upon the Committee's recommendations, the Supreme Court in 1980 adopted several new Rules of Criminal Procedure and amended numerous others. The new rules and rule amendments were published in the Pennsylvania Bulletin before final recommendation to the Court.

HOW THE NUMBERS ADD UP

Statistics are a fundamental and necessary part of our everyday lives. We just call them by more familiar names like temperature, grocery bills, salary or baseball scores.

In fact, anything that can be measured or counted is a statistic. Viewed in these terms, statistics are not as confusing or awe-inspiring as some people might have you imagine. Used wisely, they improve administration, cut costs, increase profits, compare past performances and identify trouble areas.

Such is the case with this Annual Report. Its purpose is to organize, tabulate, analyze, and present statistics in a meaningful fashion. This is no mean feat considering that the data collected by the AOPC are of a general nature.

Here is information received from the counties in aggregate form; yet, with the proper analytical or "massaging" technique, it is returned to them as descriptive, essential and accurate. The figures viewed as a whole provide a comprehensive picture of the judicial district's workload. The picture is not exhaustive, but comparisons between county lines and within county limits are made possible.

COURTS OF COMMON PLEAS

If it is true that art imitates life, Common Pleas Court has to be a rich vein for source material. Here is where the difficult decisions are made: how an inheritance will be divided, who gets custody of the child, and will the 12-year-old accused of arson be reprimanded, referred to a child welfare agency or detained in a maximum security facility. Here such human emotions as rage, frustration and vindictiveness vie with such human frailties as vanity, greed and covetousness. It would sound melodramatic if it were not real life. One necessary purpose of the judiciary is that cooler heads and calmer hearts will prevail, that an uninvolved third party can create some semblance of fairness and justice.

To go from feelings to facts requires a shifting of mental gears, but the facts allow for the dispassionate decisions essential to justice. The facts outlined in the next several pages show how each county has handled the large volume of criminal and civil cases through its Common Pleas Court. For example, Table 10, Figures 1 and 2 show us that in the five years from 1976 through 1980, civil cases increased by 18,000; arbitration by 9,000; juvenile by 6,000, and domestic relations by 31,000. Custody cases were up by 4,000, mental health hearings up 3,000, and miscellaneous up 8,000. All other case volumes were down or steady. (Table 10, Figures 1 and 2)

Judicial Case Volume, 1976 - 1980

For the first time in the five years shown in Table 10, criminal case dispositions increased by about 1,200 cases from 1979 to 1980. This was not enough, however, to offset the 5,400 case increase in filings. As a result, inventory rose.

Dispositions Reach Record High

This was the year that saw the largest volume of new cases filed in the Courts of Common Pleas: approximately 364,000, or a 17% increase over 1979. The reasons were a 75% jump in civil cases - 17,000 more than last year - and a 30% rise in domestic relations cases. Only divorce filings decreased to any significant degree. (Table 10)

Dispositions also reached their highest level: nearly 321,000. Here domestic relations cases showed a 30% growth, but divorce dispositions were down to their lowest levels in six years. (Table 11)

Inventory is what remains after dispositions have reduced the total of both pending and newly filed cases:

Pendings beginning '80 + Filings - Dispositions = Pendings End '80

Inventory grew 40% by 155,000 cases, mainly because of an 85% spurt in civil caseload inventory over 1979. Other notable inventory increases were: domestic relations, 54%; arbitration 40%, and criminal, 19%. Inventory also reached an all-time high in 10 of the 12 Common Pleas categories. (Table 12)

Significant increases in about half of the State's 59 judicial districts in 1980 caused the highest recorded criminal inventory since reporting began, with 31,953 criminal cases pending throughout the state. This is a 14.5% increase (4,068 cases) over 1979, and the fourth consecutive year that inventory has risen.

Criminal Dispositions by Type 1976 - 1980

Table 13 shows a significant rise in guilty pleas. Cases dismissed through the 180-day rule dropped to .4% of total dispositions, the first significant reduction in three years.

Inventory is what remains after dispositions have reduced the total of both pending and newly filed cases: Pendings Beginning '80 + Filings - Dispositions = Pendings End '80

Rule 1100, or the 180-day Rule, states that from filing of complaint to start of criminal trial, no more than 180 days shall elapse. It flows from the 5th Amendment of the U.S. Constitution, which guarantees a defendant in criminal proceedings the right to a speedy trial.

Civil Dispositions by Type 1976 - 1980

Although this was the second straight year of an increase in civil dispositions, it could not offset the rise in filings, a probable result of the 240-day rule requiring all civil cases to be certified for trial within that time. The result was an 85% rise in inventory. The only major change in types of civil dispositions was a 39% increase in settlements after hearings over 1979. They continue to account for the largest portion of civil dispositions, 43%. (Table 14)

Inventory of Criminal Defendant Records by County

Pennsylvania had 31,953 undisposed criminal cases at the end of 1980. Twenty percent, about 6,390 cases, awaited indictment or information; 62%, about 19,810 cases, awaited trial, and 18%, about 5,750 cases, awaited final sentencing.

Table 15 shows how individual county inventories compared with the statewide average. For example, 62% of the criminal cases are awaiting trial. If the majority of pending criminal cases in one county still awaits information to be filed, that indicates the need to move cases from this area into the trial stream.

240-Day Rule Reveals Dormant Civil Case

The 240-day rule mandating that civil cases be certified ready for trial no more than 240 days after filing significantly affected caseload during the last four months of 1980. Large numbers of cases which had lain dormant were added to the court calendar as a result of the rule.

There were 54,000 more Common Pleas Court cases than in 1979, 31% of which were civil cases (Table 10). Civil dispositions increased by only 3,000 cases. This smaller number of dispositions plus new filings increased civil inventory by almost 18,000 cases, an increase of about 85% over 1979.

The 240-day rule meant the transfer of many cases to arbitration. Since dispositions did not keep pace, arbitration inventory rose 67%.

Major increases in civil and/or arbitration cases were reported in many districts, including Allegheny, Bedford, Blair, Clearfield, Delaware, Lawrence, Luzerne, Philadelphia, Schuylkill and Washington. Other counties such as Lackawanna, Lancaster and Westmoreland reported significant drops in civil cases with little or no increase in arbitration.

There were few major changes in disposition patterns in the judicial districts. The Accelerated Rehabilitative Disposition, A.R.D., program has had about the same number of defendants for the past five years. Nol pros have been steadily declining along with Grand Jury dismissals and Rule 1100 dismissals.

Dispositions Per Judge Increasing

As visiting judge days increased, so did dispositions (Table 16). Total increase in dispositions was more than 26,000 cases; total judge days increased by about 2,700.

These figures are only approximations because the total dispositions include dispositions by masters, hearing officers and boards of arbitration. If divorce and arbitration dispositions are excluded, the ratios of total dispositions per judge day are, as seen above, increasing.

These ratios imply that output is increasing on a more than one-to-one basis. In other words, each additional judge day in 1980 resulted in more than 4.45 dispositions. To be specific, there were 2,713 more judge days in 1980 than in 1979, and 30,657 more dispositions than in 1979. This is an average of 11.3 additional dispositions for each additional judge day.

The ratios become more meaningful when criminal and civil activity are examined separately. The following table shows the three-year pattern of criminal activity.

In 1980 there was a significant drop of 451 days in the use of visiting judges, most of whom were senior judges (Table 17). At the same time, regular judge days increased by 647, resulting in an overall increase of almost 200 days. This increase effected a 1,200 case growth in disposition mentioned earlier.

Total increase in dispositions from 1978 through 1980 was more than 26,000 cases; total judge days increased by about 2,700.

Although the 2.79 dispositions per day ratio might seem low, it must be remembered that criminal dispositions comprise 17% of the total Common Pleas dispositions. Even more important, the judge days are just for time spent on the bench. The figures do not show pre-trial activity, a time-consuming process. Also, the increase in criminal dispositions should be considered in light of the general increase of other forms of dispositions which reached their highest levels in 1980.

Civil activity parallels criminal activity (Table 18).

In general, reported activity has been expanding. These figures suggest that unreported activity is also increasing and will continue to do so in response to the growing number of filings.

Disposition Time: Median is 120 Days

Added to this report is a useful, if somewhat crude equation, developed by two attorney/researchers* measures the disposition time of pending cases. The equation relates filings with beginning and ending inventories to determine how long it will take to dispose of a newly filed case.

To make this estimate, we divide the number of available cases for disposition by the actual dispositions: for example, if a court has 800 cases to dispose and disposes 400 during a given year, $800 \div 400$, the disposition time for pending cases is two years. The method uses only one year of past data to project the next year. Because of this, severe fluctuations in the statistic are likely. It does not take into account the many factors that influence the processing of cases such as number of judges, number of attorneys, rule changes or support personnel.

It would require about 200 days to dispose of a newly filed criminal case in 1981. The trend is an increasing time estimate for the total caseload as well as for most of the individual cases.

Nevertheless, the equation can indicate where problems exist when there is a significant rise in inventory. A four-year comparison of how the processing times have changed is listed in Table 19.

For example, with the beginning inventory and filing combination of criminal cases in 1980, it would require about 200 days to dispose of a newly filed criminal case in 1981. The obvious trend is more time for total caseload disposition as well as for most of the individual cases.

Civil processing time remains the slowest of common pleas activities, followed closely by Post Conviction Act matters. Ironically, the 240-day rule, designed to move civil cases, caused the projected processing time to more than double in 1980. A civil litigant who files a case in 1981 could expect to wait a year and nine months for final adjudication.

*Michigan Law Review, November 1976, Vol. 75, No. 1, Clark & Merryman, "Measuring the Duration of Judicial and Administrative Proceedings"

This result is not a true measure of the rule's effect: the 240-day order caused a relatively large influx of cases in the last calendar quarter of 1980, which in turn produced unusually high year-end inventories. Dispositions of these cases could not be achieved until early 1981.

Seven of the common pleas categories of cases have processing times of less than six months. The overall caseload indicates that the average case filed in 1981 would have required 177 days for adjudication.

Estimated times for each of the categories of cases are, for the most part, consistent from year to year. Only civil and post conviction cases show a wide range of processing time over the four-year period. The median time in 1980 is 128 days, with 49 of 67 counties having total processing time of less than six months. Three counties had total processing times of over one year, with a maximum 544 days.

Figure 3 pictures the changing disposition figures and changing patterns of both regular and visiting judge days. Note the decrease in 1977 dispositions despite the sharp increase in judge days.

Figure 4
Filings, Disposition and Inventory

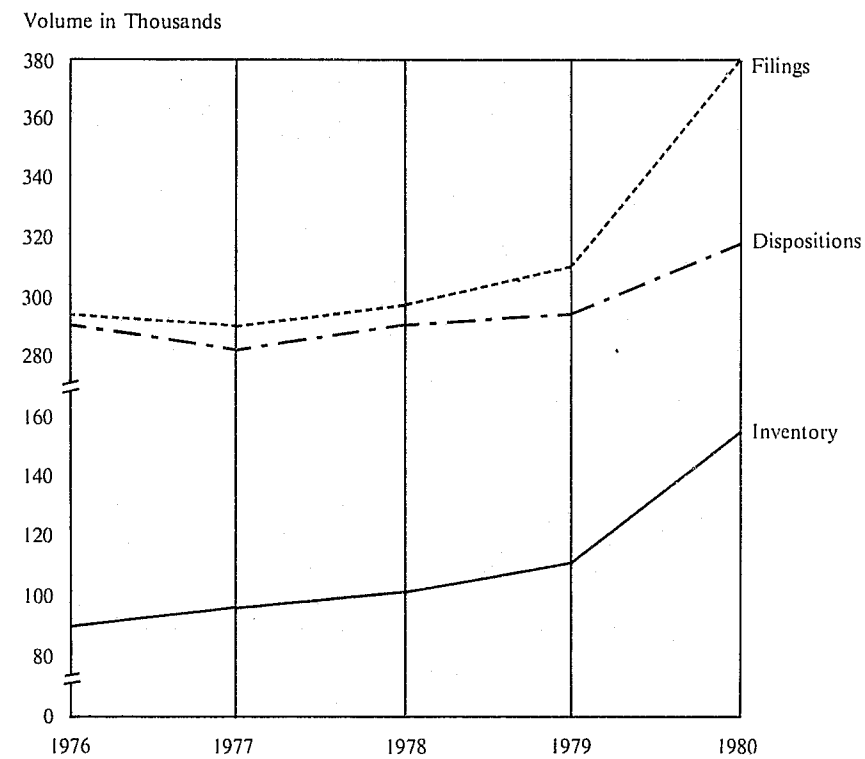

Figure 5
Disposition Ratios

In Figure 4, the disposition line is below the filing line throughout the six years, and the gap between the two lines consistently grows. As a result, the inventory line also keeps ascending; and the ratio line showing judge days to dispositions keeps falling.

Disposition Time Charts

Two separate charts are presented, one comparing criminal vs. civil dispositions and one showing several miscellaneous types of cases in the total common pleas caseload. Figure 6 shows a trend in criminal processing times from an average of 136 days in 1977 to 200 days in 1980.

The civil line reacted sharply to the 240-day rule, rising from an average of 357 days to adjudication to 676 days. However, before the sudden jump in 1980, civil cases still required the longest for disposition with the exception of Post Conviction Hearing Act cases in 1978 and 1979. But these are few in number.

The line charting processing times for total Common Pleas cases is fairly level through 1979 and increases suddenly in 1980, most likely due to the civil case processing time. The final figure indicates that it will require about 177 days to dispose of a single Common Pleas case, based on filings and inventory figures.

Most Cases Settled Out of Court

Television and Perry Mason notwithstanding, only a small percentage of cases go to trial, as this chart graphically illustrates. Time, expense and other alternatives are the reasons. Altogether, jury trials accounted for only 5.7% of criminal and civil dispositions, non-jury trials for 11.4%.

Trial settlements are a quarter, 25%, of all civil dispositions and 14% of criminal dispositions. Of these, the ratio of civil non-jury to jury trials is more than 10 to 1. In criminal cases, the ratio is almost 2 to 1 in favor of non-jury trials. (Figure 8)

Common Pleas Caseload Comparison for Pennsylvania's 59 Judicial Districts

Table 20 presents a comparison of district caseloads showing per judge filings for common pleas filings, dispositions and inventory:

Row 1: Number of judges in each district; e.g.: 1,2,3.

Row 2: Number of districts by number of judges; e.g.: 24 districts have 1 judge, 13 districts have 2 judges.

Row 3: Population by category of district; e.g.: all one-judge districts totalled 1,182,800 people.

Row 4: Average population by district size; e.g.: the one-judge districts averaged 49,283 people.

Rows 5-9: Filings per judge in 1980 for criminal, civil, Family Court, Orphans' Court and miscellaneous cases. For example, in the 13 districts with two judges, each judge averaged 291 criminal filings and 134 civil filings.

Rows 10-14: Dispositions per judge.

Rows 15-19: Pending caseload per judge.

Row 20: Total filings per judge. For example, judges in the six-judge districts averaged 843 total common pleas filings in 1980; Philadelphia judges averaged 1030 filings.

Row 21: Total dispositions per judge.

Row 22: Total pending caseload per judge.

On the following pages, Table 21 shows the number of criminal and major civil cases filed and disposed in each county Court of Common Pleas during 1980. The method of disposition and the increase or decrease in pending cases are also shown. A breakdown of "other dispositions," where one or more types account for a significant percentage, appears at the end of the table.

DISTRICT JUSTICES: WHERE MOST COURT ACTION STARTS

District Judges must take and pass a four-week, 120-hour qualifying course given by the Minor Judiciary Education Board and administered by the AOPC... They must complete a minimum of 32 hours of continuing education each year.

Most people come into contact with the judiciary through District Justices. Their contact can be as simple as exceeding the speed limit or as serious as rape or murder. Activity abounds at the magistrate court level: nearly two million cases were filed in 1980.

Pennsylvania's 550 District Justices are elected for terms of six years. The Supreme Court establishes the number of statewide magisterial districts every ten years after reviewing recommendations of the counties, the census population, the area served and the number of cases filed.

District Justices who are not lawyers must take and pass a four-week, 120-hour qualifying course given by the Minor Judiciary Education Board and administered by the Administrative Office of the Pennsylvania Courts. Civil law and procedure, criminal law and procedure, judicial ethics, rules of evidence, human behavior, judicial administration, motor vehicle law, the Drug, Device and Cosmetic Act are covered. Of 107 people who took the course last year, 88 passed.

All District Justices must complete a minimum of 32 hours of continuing education each year. In 1980, 542 district justices completed the course, which is administered by AOPC under the Minor Judiciary Education Board. Subjects included judicial ethics, office procedures, actions in assumpsit, landlord/tenant matters, rules of civil and criminal procedures, rules of evidence, crimes code update, motor vehicle code and regulations update. Because of greater public awareness and growing evidence of abuse within the family, a special course studying some of the remedies provided by the Protection from Abuse Act was offered.

AOPC, putting to work funds from the Governor's Commission on Crime and Delinquency, taught 403 district justices and related personnel about retail theft processing procedures in 23 seminars.

The Administrative Office revised the District Justice Office Procedures Manual to improve efficiency in processing cases. The manual established standards of record keeping, financial accountability and office practices in general. Nearly 250 secretaries of District Justices participated in regular seminars given throughout the state and at the AOPC's Wilson College facility.

The year saw increased efforts to improve the constable system. Through funding from the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation, two statewide training programs were designed and implemented.

In the first, classroom instruction combined with field training to teach a small group of constables at 17 different locations how to serve warrants and perform their other day-to-day constable duties.

In the second, a 40-hour classroom program in selected locations throughout the Commonwealth taught constables how to serve warrants, trespass and assumpsit complaints, conduct of sales, landlord and tenant proceedings and how to serve an order of possession.

Each participant received a 50-page manual containing applicable rules and regulations. Each was tested before and after the course to measure the program's effectiveness.

Detailed information and statistics on each of the magisterial districts is available upon request by contacting the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts at: 1414 Three Penn Center Plaza Philadelphia, PA 19102 215-496-4500

District Justice Courts Judicial Case Volume 1980

I. Filings

1. Nearly two million cases - 1,934,933 to be exact - were filed in District Justice Courts in 1980, an increase of 7%* over 1979. Traffic citations were 64% of all filings, non-traffic citations represented 14% and summary complaints made up 7% of the whole. Misdemeanor/felony complaints are the most serious offenses before a district justice; these cases make up the smallest part of the total caseload, 5%. Civil complaints represented 10% of the volume, double the number of serious criminal cases filed at this level. (Figure 9)

2. Eighty-five percent of case volume pertains to summary level violations. The remaining 15%, which are the more serious cases, require more time per district justice.

II. Disposition

A. District Justices
District justice courts disposed of 1,728,984 cases last year. Of these, traffic citations accounted for 64%, non-traffic citations, 13%; summary complaints, 6%; misdemeanor/felony cases, 5%, and civil complaints, 11%. Overall dispositions were up 5% from 1979. As in the past, traffic citations represented the major part of dispositions statewide. (Figure 10)

B. Filing-to-Disposition Ratio
The number of dispositions divided by the number of cases filed yields a filing-to-disposition ratio. This ratio indicates what part of the total case volume for a given year is processed in that year and what part must be carried to the next year.

The filing-to-disposition ratios for 1980 were 89% for traffic citations, 87% for non-traffic citations, 82% for summary complaints and 97% for civil complaints. The overall filing-to-disposition ratio decreased by 2% between 1979 and 1980. These ratios ranged from a decrease of 7% for summary complaints to an increase of 2% for non-traffic citations.*

C. Statewide
Tables 24 and 25 show filings for Philadelphia Traffic Court and Pittsburgh Magistrates Court, in addition to the district justice data. In 1980, more than 3.3 million cases were filed in these courts. Traffic citations were 79% of these filings. The data indicate that there were almost as many traffic citations filed in the Philadelphia Traffic Court as were filed in the 550 district justice offices statewide.

Philadelphia Municipal Court Judicial Case Volume

In civil cases an 81% hike came in small claims filings, accompanied by an equally impressive 74% rise in dispositions. Compared to the caseload increase, the inventory has increased by a relatively modest 2,400 cases (Table 28).

Landlord and Tenant inventory remained low, relative to other civil cases. In 1980, it dropped by 17% (Table 28).

Preliminary hearings increased significantly: 14% for filings and 21% for dispositions. Inventory rose a relatively slight 4%. Nearly 9,000 cases were held for Common Pleas Court, while the judges were able to dismiss 5,463 cases at the preliminary hearing stage. Municipal Court judges sat for 1,268 days on preliminary hearings (Table 29).

Criminal trial cases dropped to 4,822 cases in 1980, the second straight decrease following a large rise in inventory in 1978. Nol pros and probation under the pre- or post-indictment program continue to dominate Municipal Court dispositions, and account for 73%* of total dispositions (Table 30).

(a) All 22 authorized judges for Philadelphia Municipal Court are members of the bar of the Supreme Court.

(b) These criminal cases are all trial cases and do not include preliminary hearings or summary proceedings.

(c) Under the Municipal Court Jurisdiction Act, there is no right of trial by jury, but the defendant has the right of appeal of trial de novo, (new trial) including the right of trial by jury to the Trial Division of the Court of Common Pleas.

(d) Includes 162 transfers to Family Court and 317 cases transferred to other jurisdictions.

(e) Includes 570 records placed in deferred status and 340 records reinstated.

(f) Common Pleas judges assigned to Municipal Court.

COURT FINANCES

The Courts of Pennsylvania are comparatively inexpensive to run. In Fiscal Year 1980-81, costs totalled $53 million, or one half of one percent of the expenditures for state government... Fees collected from filing costs by appellate courts are also included in the .5%.

The Courts of Pennsylvania are comparatively inexpensive to run. In Fiscal Year 1980-81, costs totalled $53 million, or one half of one percent (.5%) of the expenditures for State government. This figure does not include the county court reimbursement program.

A breakdown of the distribution of funds across the three branches of government is found in Figure 13. Table 31 shows where the money goes within the judiciary system.

Fees collected from filing costs by Appellate Courts are also included in the .5% of the State Budget which goes to the Judiciary Department. (See Table 31, Part b.) The total of all fees was $516,983 in FY 79-80 and $450,382 in FY 80-81. County Fees are not included.

The largest portion of State general funds is earmarked for the county reimbursement program (Table 31). Direct expenditures for the Courts of Common Pleas and District Justices make up the next largest expense; however, 99% of the costs of the lower courts are spent on salary and fringe benefit expenses. At the appellate level, these personal expenses account for 73% of the cost.

Where does the money come from? In Pennsylvania, the Courts are financed through a combination of federal, state, and county revenues. Furthermore, the federal contribution itself has two components. The first is federal revenue sharing as appropriated by the Pennsylvania Legislature. In Fiscal Year 79-80 the last year of the program, it amounted to $24 million. Federal grants, mostly from the Pennsylvania Commission on Crime and Delinquency, comprise the second component of federal funding (See Table 32).

Two other items in Table 32 deserve attention. The $2 million increase in the Superior Court is a result of its expansion from seven to 15 judges. A further increase in the FY 80-81 appropriations for all of the various courts comes from an increase in judicial salaries, the first since 1976. Inflation accounts for much of the remainder.

The state contribution to the Courts also has two components. First, State general funds, which totalled $50.5 million in Fiscal Year 80-81, directly underwrite court operations for the Appellate Courts, the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts, and the salaries for Common Pleas Judges and District Justices. Second, the State indirectly finances the courts through the county court reimbursement program by disbursing federal revenue sharing dollars in FY 79-80, and by using general fund monies in FY 80-81 to give a fixed sum of money to the counties in proportion to their court-related expenses. The largest portion of these reimbursements is based on expenditures for the Courts of Common Pleas.

The counties are responsible for appropriating money for all county court operating expenses, including the District Justices' offices. Judicial salaries, however, are paid by the State.

* Includes all expenditures for the appellate courts and the Administrative Office and salary costs for Common Pleas judges and district justices. The former includes Philadelphia Municipal Court and the latter includes the Philadelphia Traffic Court.

 For calendar year 1979 expenditures, but not including capital costs for any court, district justice office costs, or row office costs.

 For calendar year 1980 expenditures, but not including capital costs for any court, district justice office costs, or row office costs.

PENNSYLVANIA'S JUDICIARY

(AS OF 12/31/80)

Compared to the millions of people who come into contact with the Judicial System of Pennsylvania only 1,300 are directly employed by it. (See Table 33.) Of these 969 or 72% are elected judicial officers.

Sixty-one persons or 4.5% of the Commonwealth's judiciary employees staff the Administrative Office of Pennsylvania Courts; and an additional 311 or 21% serve as Appellate Court personnel, including staff on advisory committees of the Supreme Court. (Table 33)

Each justice on the Supreme Court and each judge on the Superior Court, Commonwealth Court and Common Pleas Court serves a 10-year term... The Pennsylvania Constitution provides that the person with the longest service on the Supreme Court automatically becomes chief justice.

Each justice on the Supreme Court and each judge on the Superior Court, Commonwealth Court and Common Pleas Court serves a 10-year term. The mandatory retirement age is 70, but some who have reached that age or older continue to hear cases as senior judges.

Prior to the 1968 Constitutional reform, Supreme Court justices could serve for one term of 21 years each. After 1968, those with an unexpired 21-year term were allowed to serve the remaining time. The Pennsylvania Constitution provides that the person with the longest service on the Court automatically becomes Chief Justice.

Lawyers become judges in one of two ways:

1. by filling a vacancy, in which case they are appointed by the Governor and must be confirmed by the Senate. They must then run in the next general election if they wish to remain a judge.
2. by winning a general election.

After their 10-year term is up, they may run for retention on a simple yes or no ballot question.

District justices serve for a term of six years and may run for reelection every six years afterward.

GLOSSARY

Allocatur: It is allowed. A word denoting the allowance of a writ or order.

A.R.D. or Accelerated Rehabilitation Disposition: A program for non-violent offenders set up by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in 1972, involving the concept of probation supervision without conviction. Its purpose is to take offenders who have not yet made crime a way of life and encourage them to make a new start under the supervision of this program. Removing these first offenders from the criminal courts will, in turn, make those facilities available for the trial and rehabilitation of habitual or violent criminals.

Assumpsit: A promise of engagement by which one person assumes or undertakes to do some act or pay something to another.

Change of Venire: Bringing in a jury from one community to another.

Change of Venue: Change of place; moving the trial from one community to another.

Court of Record: A court that is required to keep a record of its proceedings and that may fine or imprison. Example: Court of Common Pleas, Appellate Courts. District Justice Courts are not courts of records. They have no court stenographers, no record of proceedings.

Declaratory Judgment: Where the plaintiff is in doubt as to his legal rights, the court issues a declaration of the rights and status of the litigants, which is conclusive and binding.

En Banc: Literally, full bench. Refers to a session where the entire membership of the court, as opposed to a single justice or panel of justices, will participate in the decision.

Equity: Justice administered according to fairness as contrasted with the strictly formulated rules of common law. The term "equity" denotes the spirit and habit of fairness, justness and right dealing which would regulate the relationships between people.

Felony: Crimes punishable by death or imprisonment in the state prison or penitentiary. The fundamental distinction between felonies and misdemeanors rests with the penalty and the power of imprisonment. In Pennsylvania, felonies are of the 1st, 2nd, or 3rd degree, depending upon their statutory designation and the length of their term of imprisonment.

Injunction: A prohibitive, equitable remedy used by a court requiring a party defendant to do or refrain from doing some act.

In Forma Pauperis: Permission given by a court to a poor person, an indigent, to proceed without liability for court fees and costs.

Judiciary Act Repealer Act (JARA): An act intended to eliminate numerous obsolete, unnecessary or suspended Pennsylvania statutory provisions.

Mandamus: Command issuing from a court of law of competent jurisdiction requiring the performance of a particular duty. The action is not available when the duty to be enforced is purely discretionary.

Misdemeanor: All crimes or indictable offenses not amounting to felonies, for which a punishment other than death or imprisonment in the state prison is prescribed by law, such as fines or imprisonment in the county jail. In Pennsylvania, they are divided into three grades, in reverse order of their severity. For example: a misdemeanor 3, giving cigarettes to a minor, is less serious than a misdemeanor 1 for the sale of firearms, or a misdemeanor 2 for carrying explosives.

Nol Pros: "Nolle Prosequi." Formal entry on the record by the prosecuting officer, or the plaintiff in a civil suit, declaring that he or she will not prosecute the case further.

Pro Se: In his or her own behalf. One who does not retain a lawyer and appears for himself in court.

Prothonotary: The title given to an officer who officiates as principal clerk of some courts.

Rule 145 of Criminal Procedure: Provides for the settlement of certain cases at the earliest possible stage before the District Justice.

Summary Offense: A minor offense that is adjudicated by a court not of record but is appealable to a court of record. It is punishable by a term of imprisonment not exceeding 90 days.

Tort: A private or civil wrong or injury, other than a breach of contract, for which the court will provide a remedy in the form of an action for damages.
