SECTION I

INTRODUCTION - PURPOSE AND BACKGROUND

PURPOSE

This long range judicial facility plan is a comprehensive document providing statewide inventories, by county, of space used by the courts of the Colorado Judicial System. Its purpose is to:

1. Fulfill, in part, the requirements of C.R.S. 1973 13-3-108 for a long range construction plan by county.
2. Provide each board of county commissioners with architectural and space guidelines for court facilities, and estimated court facility needs to the year 2000.
3. Provide a definitive plan of workload, staff and facilities, for use as a management tool in the administration of the courts.

BACKGROUND AND ASSUMPTIONS

Expanding demands for court services have resulted in increasing requirements for court facilities. As the cost of providing facilities has become more burdensome, the need for more effective planning and use of these facilities has become a major concern of the courts and of those who provide the capital funds. One outcome of these concerns has been a requirement for increasingly explicit justification of proposals for the reallocation of existing space as well as for the construction of additional space. Thus, the process by which capital resources are allocated is becoming more dependent on quantitative evaluation of existing capacity and on carefully documented projections of future needs. This is the process used in this long range judicial facility plan.

The quantitative evaluation of existing facilities is a difficult task. It should be related to the quality of the facility from the standpoint of function as well as architectural and space standards.

There are no generally accepted techniques for measuring the quality or appropriateness of the environment in which courts operate or the effect of this environment on the operations of the courts. There are, however, architectural and space guidelines that have been developed, tested, and found acceptable for new facilities in a number of different court applications. This plan incorporates a modified version of these guidelines.

The major hazard is to assume that standards or guidelines which are reasonable when planning new construction are the sole measure of adequacy for existing facilities. It is extremely important that architectural and space standards, developed for new construction be used only as a rough gauge as to the suitability of existing facilities.

Colorado courts currently operate satisfactorily in buildings built as early as 1876 and as late as 1978. None of these buildings were built to any statewide set of standards. The facilities and internal circulation vary as widely as the dates of construction. In many cases the court facilities are completely inadequate when compared to the guidelines, yet the level of activity in the court is low enough so that the court can operate satisfactorily. In order to avoid unnecessary expenditures for either local or state taxpayers, each facility has been evaluated against the guidelines and the specific operations of the court.

It takes an average of five years for the complete development (determination of need to move-in) of a capital project. The economic life of facilities typically associated with courts is 30-40 years. Projections of need for only 5-10 years would not provide sufficient information for the best economic decisions on capital improvements, and could lead to inadequate facilities by the time they are completed. For these reasons, the projections in this plan have been made to the year 2000.

The projections of court facility needs are based on the projections of court workload and the staffing necessary to perform this workload. This staffing is established by applying staffing standards to projected filings as follows:

FILINGS/FTE
	District		County
	Urban	Rural	A&B	C&D
Judge	1023	888	4877	N.A.
Clerical	295	239	1210	897

Current and future year filings are considered, for the purpose of this plan only, to be directly proportional to current and future population estimates. A more sophisticated projection system for court workload is not available at this time. Population estimates are from the Department of Local Affairs, Division of Planning. Unfortunately, the 1980 census figures are not used by the Division of Planning in their population estimates at this time.

The plan and guidelines are based on the existing operations of the courts and the assumption that these operations will continue unchanged. Court operations, are not static. They are in a state of continuous change caused by actions within the judicial system and by action over which the courts have no control. Court proposed improvements in scheduling and use of personnel, equipment and spaces are some of the actions that can cause revised facility requirements. Changes in economic conditions, social attitudes, legislative and other governmental actions are beyond the control of courts and can cause significantly different operations and facility requirements.

The courts will make annual revisions to this plan to reflect those changing conditions which cannot be accommodated within the existing plan. In addition, it is recommended that all new facilities be designed with the capability of being modified economically to accommodate changes in court operations.

The following chart represents current space inventories and projected space needs for each county in Colorado.

Needs are based on design standards for new construction. Current inventory includes many older buildings with existing spaces larger than the standards. The difference in square footage between needs and inventory must be evaluated against the numbers and types of spaces to determine what must be added to meet the requirements.

SECTION II

PLANNING GUIDELINES

PLANNING GUIDELINES
URBAN COURTS

District and County Court

In general, district and county courts have the following space needs;

Each Judge:

Courtroom
Jury Deliberation Room (can be used for attorney/client conference)
Chambers
Conference Room (can be part of chambers)
Division Clerk's Office
Reporter's Office
Bailiff's Office

Each referee:

Hearing Room
Office
Clerk's Office

For one (1) or more judges:

Court Clerk:

Supervisor's Office
General Office
Storage and Vault Space
Public Counter

Jury:

Assembly Room
Commissioner's Office
Clerk's Office (may be in assembly room)

Library:

Stacks
Reading Space
Office

Prisoner Holding Cell:

1 cell for every 3 courtrooms

RURAL COURTS

District Court

In most rural judicial districts, the judge has chambers in the county of his choice. In addition, space is required for his court reporter who often acts as a Division Clerk.

Each county is required to have a minimum of one district courtroom, jury deliberation room, chambers and attorney/client conference room, even if no district judge is chambered there.

In a county where more than one judge is chambered, additional courtrooms shall be provided when the district court workload exceeds 75 percent of the full workload for judges, as calculated on page 1 of plan. One jury deliberation room and attorney/client room is sufficient for each 2 courtrooms.

In rural courts with only one district courtroom, the design size should be 1447 square feet with public seating for 80.

Each county must provide one clerk's office which should include a general office, storage and vault space, and a public counter.

Each county must provide space for a law library.

A prisoner holding cell or some administrative procedure for handling prisoners acceptable to the court must be provided.

County Court

Each county has at least a part-time county court judge.

Each full time county court judge shall have a courtroom, jury deliberation room and chambers.

Counties with a combined percentage of full judge workload for district and county court that does not exceed 60 percent as calculated on page 1 of the plan, may request that the district courtroom and chambers be shared by both district and county court.

In combined courts, there is no requirement for a separate county court clerk's office.

A prisoner holding cell, or some administrative procedure for handling prisoners acceptable to the court, must be provided.

OTHER COURT FACILITIES

District Administrator

For each judicial district:

Administrator's office
Clerk - general office
Secretary/waiting room

Probation

For each major location in a judicial district, probation has space needs as follows:

Supervisor's office
Probation officer's private office
Secretary-reception area
General office space for clerks

Other needs

Witness waiting rooms and attorney conference rooms are needed in the courts, however, it is assumed that jury deliberation rooms can be used for these purposes if this is taken into account in the physical planning.

Some form of dining facility is needed for each major complex for use by staff and public.

SECTION IV

COURTHOUSE GENERAL GUIDELINES AND DESIGN STANDARDS FOR COURT FACILITIES

This section contains general architectural standards and guidelines

Adapted from

F. Michael Wong, "Space Management and the Court Design Handbook,"
Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice, 1973, Chapter three.

COURTROOM GUIDELINES

General

- A courthouse is a building in which justice is administered: its architecture should express the dignity and purpose of the court.
- Depending on site and location, a courthouse can be single-or multi-story.
- Floors nearest the entrance level usually are assigned as public spaces and may include clerical, administrative and jury assembly spaces. Excessive traffic load on elevators thus can be minimized.
- Separate entrances should be provided for judges, public and staff and prisoners. Prisoners can be transferred by secured elevators or stairs, physically separated from public or judges' elevators or stairs.
- Floors above those used by the public may house courtrooms and ancillary facilities, including conference rooms, robing rooms, witness rooms, temporary prisoner holding and interviewing facilities and offices for law assistants, court reporters and interpreters.
- Spaces on courtroom floors should be subdivided into public, restrictive, private and secured spaces. Courtrooms, public conference rooms and waiting rooms are readily accessible to the public; private conference rooms and departmental office are restrictive spaces; judges' robing rooms and chambers are private spaces; prisoner holding and interviewing facilities are secured spaces.
- Basement floors should accommodate records-storage and locker facilities, custodial offices, mechanical and electrical equipment rooms, and, possibly, temporary holding facilities.
- Greater adoption of computer systems and automation in courts will affect future personnel use, method of operation and space planning.

Environmental

- Ambiance of many courthouse spaces should be properly subdued—calm, dignified and business-like. But some contrasts in color, lighting and texture should be used to provide variations without fragmenting a unified architectural concept.
- In areas with more severe climate, all courthouse spaces should be air-conditioned, if possible. At the very least, conditioned air should be provided for courtrooms, chambers and jury spaces. All courthouse spaces in regular use must be heated where climate dictates.
- Chambers and private offices along building walls with extensive glass exposure should have undersill air-conditioning units with individual thermostatic control; internal spaces can be air-conditioned by a low-velocity, central-zoned system with centralized control.
- Because courtrooms, ancillary spaces and judges' chambers may be subject to irregular use, air-conditioning to these spaces should be controlled individually where feasible to minimize operating costs.
- Design of mechanical and electric systems should include adequate capacity to accommodate projected needs, including the use of computer equipment.
- Soundproofing of external and internal walls is essential in courtrooms, jury, grand jury and chambers spaces.
- Separating private spaces from public spaces by means of semi-private and private corridors would alleviate considerable noise transmitted from the public spaces.
- The natural environment (climate, vegetation, sunlight, wind, etc.) should be balanced against the man-made environment (mechanical, heating cooling and ventilation, artificial light, etc.) in the design of interior spaces—for example, the use of sun-shading devices to reduce internal load.
- Office spaces, judges' chambers and departmental offices should have external windows, both for natural lighting and for visual relief.
- Courtrooms can be without windows and artificially lighted to create a constant environment.

Security

- Security is a major consideration in the design of a court building; especially those for use in criminal and family or domestic relations cases.
- Security measures can be developed in terms of space planning concepts, detection and alarm equipment and systems, and personnel training and deployment techniques.
- Careful application of space planning concepts to increase security measures during planning of a new building costs very little and is more effective than providing adequate security after implementation.
- Security systems in courthouses should be analyzed and implemented as an integral part of the architectural design.
- Spaces requiring a similar level of security and privacy should be clustered on the same floors. Even in renovation projects, the relocation of departments, where feasible, to achieve this would be less costly, and, in many cases, equally if not more effective than providing security manpower and equipment.
- Access to private and secured spaces should be separated whenever possible from access to public spaces.
- Alarm systems activated by foot-lift and knee-touch devices in courtrooms should be evaluated and installed, whenever appropriate.
- Each courtroom should be equipped with an intercom system connected directly to a central security control station strategically located for rapid deployment of security personnel to spaces with security problems.
- Courtrooms and ancillary facilities operating after working hours should be located on the entrance level and lower floors. All upper floors should be closed to the public to reduce load on elevators and minimize vandalism and theft.

Implementation

- Projects can be implemented in phases, planned according to available budget.

Courtroom

- The courtroom should be a symbolic extension of the concept of justice; its architecture should express this ideal.
- Courtroom size and shape should be determined by functional and environmental requirements, the kinds of cases handled and routine number of participants and spectators.
- Floor to-ceiling heights of small-to medium-size courtrooms should be 10 to 15 ft.
- Courtroom appearance and ambiance should be restrained, yet cheerful, with adequate light and color contrast relieve monotony.
- Courtrooms should have separate entrances for spectators, press, litigants, witnesses (public); judge, jury, attorneys, court personnel, witnesses (private); and prisoners and court officers (secured).
- Entrances and exits for participants should be carefully grouped and located as close as possible to their stations in the courtroom.
- All participants in courtroom proceedings should be able to see and to hear each other clearly.
- Distance of movement and conflicting movement by participants during a trial or hearing should be minimized.
- A courtroom does not function in isolation; its necessary ancillary facilities include jury deliberation room, prisoner holding facility, witness isolation room and interview room.
- Courtroom furniture should be an integral part of the architecture, designed to accommodate human activities. Much of it can be movable for flexibility, colorful without being distracting and durable for wear and stain resistance.
- Heavy furniture such as the judge's bench, clerk's station, witness box, jury box and attorneys' tables can be constructed in modular sections for rapid assembly, when necessary. Movable chairs for the public should be avoided because of noise and pilferage problems.
- Provision should be made for central recording of court proceedings; microphones should be designed as an integral part of courtroom furniture, and space and personnel required for efficient operation should be planned in advance.
- Courtroom interiors should be designed to minimize acoustical problems: volume and distance should be reduced in very large courtrooms to control reverberation time (ideal, 0.8 to 1 second), thereby avoiding echoing effect.
- Courtroom shape, especially in the judicial area, should not be circular and constructed with reflective materials. Concave surfaces focus sound at the center.
- In the large courtrooms, walls at the front of the courtroom should be of reflective materials so that sound generated from judicial area is reflected to the public seating area at the rear of the courtroom. If the shape of the ceiling at the front of the courtroom were curvilinear, the ceiling could be reflective; but as it is normally flat, absorptive materials are preferred.
- Walls and ceiling at the rear of the courtroom (around the public seating area) should be finished with absorptive materials to prevent sound from reflecting back to the judicial area, creating echoing effects.
- The floor of the courtroom should be finished with carpet or padded vinyl, especially in the judicial area, for noise reduction.
- Every courtroom should have a sound lock or share one with an adjoining courtroom. By designing the sound lock so that one set of doors would generally be closed before the other set is opened, noise transmission level from public waiting or circulation spaces can be minimized.
- Fully air-conditioned courtrooms with sealed windows, especially the double-glazed type with internal venetian blinds, will have far fewer problems of high traffic noise and dust and grit level commonly associated with metropolitan centers.
- Courtrooms should be adequately air-conditioned and ventilated, and standard thermal conditions should be separately controlled in each courtroom or group of courtrooms.
- An adequate number of electrical outlets should be located near anticipated power equipment placement, e.g., sound recording equipment, amplifiers, projectors, x-ray viewer, desk lamps, and so on.
- A separate heating, ventilating and air-conditioning system should be installed to service night and weekend courts. The main plant can be shut down at night and during weekends.

Judge's Bench

- Symbolic of the administration of justice.
- The judge:
  - usually wears a bulky robe and requires a large armchair;
  - exercises protective influence over witnesses;
  - views and hears all participants in courtroom;
  - speaks loudly when addressing court, instructing jurors, admonishing spectators;
  - speaks softly when conversing privately with attorneys and court clerks;
  - passes exhibits and documents to attorneys and court clerks.
- The height and area of the judge's bench and platform should appropriately express the role of the judge and the dignity of the court. The judge's eye level when he is seated should be higher than any other participant or spectator, standing or seated.
- The judge's bench can be constructed in modular sections for ease in moving.
- The judge's bench should be equipped with (or provision be made for) a microphone connected to an amplifier controlled either by the judge or the clerk.
- The judge should be able to communicate with his secretary in chambers directly by a telephone/intercom system.
- The judge should be able to alert, without detection in the courtroom, a central security control room. Court officers should be able to hear, and even see, the problem in any courtroom to take appropriate steps. They should also be able to communicate with the judge or with other court participants through a loudspeaker system during an emergency.

Attorneys' and Litigants' Stations

- Attorneys usually are deeply involved during court procedures, and the physical environment should be conducive to this condition.
- Attorneys and litigants should be able to confer in private at their stations without being overheard by jurors, opposing attorneys, opposing litigants or by others in the courtroom.

- Attorneys should be able to move easily from their stations to a lectern, the judge's bench, court clerk's station, court reporter's station, jury box and witness box.
- Attorneys and litigants should be able to see, hear and be seen and heard by judge, witnesses, court clerk, jurors and court reporter.
- Distance should be approximately equal between the attorneys' stations or lectern, witness box, jury box and judge's bench.
- Attorneys handle and examine exhibits and legal documents; their stations should be adequately lighted to enable them to read fine print on legal documents.

Witness Box

- Many volunteer witnesses testify at personal sacrifice of time and money and at a risk of being harmed; they deserve the courtesy of the court and of trial participants.
- When not testifying, witnesses in controversial trials should be isolated for their safety and protection.
- Witnesses may be under emotional strain; consequently, the environmental conditions in which they wait should be calm and cheerful.
- Witnesses are entitled to the protection of the court and the judge who serves as the impartial arbiter.
- Non-encroachment distance between attorneys and witnesses should be at least 6 ft.
- Witnesses should be able to see, and be seen as close to full face as possible, and to hear attorneys, judge, court clerk and jurors.
- When answering attorney's questions, witnesses should be clearly seen and heard by attorneys, judge, jurors and court reporter.
- Witnesses on the stand receive, examine, and return exhibits. A fixed or hinged shelf for this purpose should be part of the witness box design.
- Witness box should be movable and, perhaps, constructed as a modular unit.
- Floor level of the witness box should be slightly lower than that of the judge's bench.
- The witness box should be equipped with a microphone connected to an amplifier controlled by the judge or the clerk. Many witnesses are nervous and tend to speak very softly. Amplification of witness' testimony is of special importance to the court reporter.

Jury Box

- Jurors often serve at personal sacrifice of time and money; they deserve the courtesy of the court and of trial participants. The facilities in the courtroom should be adequate, unobstructive and well-designed for their needs.
- Jurors should be adequately separated from the public to avoid interference and improper influence.
- A bailiff or court officer should be located between jurors and the public to prevent communication between them.
- Jurors should be adequately separated in distance—a minimum of 6 ft.—from attorneys and litigants to prevent their overhearing private conversations.
- In criminal trials, juries are selected and impaneled in court before the judge.
- In civil trials, juries can be selected and impaneled either in courtrooms or in jury impaneling rooms.
- Jurors should be able to see, be seen and to hear attorneys, judge, witnesses, court clerk.
- During examination of witnesses, all jurors should be able to see attorneys and witnesses as a close full face as possible.
- Jurors receive, examine and return exhibits; fixed or hinged shelves should be designed as an integral part of the jury box on its outside surface for resting large exhibits.
- Jury box can be constructed in easily movable modular sections to facilitate a more flexible and efficient use of space.
- Jurors should be located on the same side of the judge as is the witness.
- Floor level of the highest tier of the jury box should be slightly lower than that of the judge's bench.
- Depending on the layout of the courtroom, it is possible to substitute the traditional "modesty rail" in front of the jury box with a table surface 28-29 in. above floor level so that the front row of the jury box can be used by either the plaintiff or the defendant during a non-jury trial.
- The front row of the jury box should be on the same floor level as the judicial area; if all juries are reduced from 12 to 6 members, the front row of seats could be removed without extensive renovation.

Court Reporter's Station

- The Court reporter:
  - is responsible for recording court proceedings by shorthand, by stenographic machine or by automatic sound recording devices;
  - must see the facial expressions of witness, attorneys, and judge, and hear every word spoken;
  - should be located close to the witness box approximately equidistant from judge, attorneys and jurors so all hear him equally well when he reads back to the court at the judge's request parts of the transcript;
  - is usually responsible for marking and identifying exhibits before they are passed to the court clerk for safekeeping;
  - should be as inconspicuous as possible, especially to the witness who should not be made to feel that every word he utters is being recorded in evidence;
  - at times has to record the answers of an emotional witness by indicating his expression and the movement of his head and hands.
- Of all trial participants, the witness is most unfamiliar to the reporter. The locational relationship between the court reporter and the witness is therefore most important.
- It is important that the furniture and equipment used by the court reporter be designed as an integral part of courtroom furniture. Design should maintain court dignity, providing for orderly stacking of steno-tapes, and so on.
- When an interpreter is required, he should be located to one side of the witness, facing the court reporter, and be easily seen by judge, attorneys and jurors.

Court Clerk's Station

- The court clerk:
  - serves the court and judge;
  - assists in efficient operation of courtroom procedures;
  - checks case files, passes them to and receives them from the judge;
  - makes records of case determinations;
  - is responsible for the custody of exhibits;
  - calls prospective jurors to the jury box and swears-in impaneled jurors for jury duty;
  - calls witnesses to the witness box and administers the oath.
- The court clerk's station:
  - adjoins the judge for ease of communication and for passing documents;
  - accommodates a large number of case files and other legal documents and exhibits, thus requiring maximum allowable work surface area;
  - should be lower in height and less significant than the judge's bench and the witness box;
  - can be constructed in modular sections for ease of movement, when necessary.
- The court clerk's station should have the same alarm/intercom system as the judge: a direct intercom line to a central security control room activated by the touch of a button under the work surface.

Bailiff's or Court Officer's Station

- The bailiff or court officer is responsible for:
  - security of the courtroom and safety of participants;
  - keeping order in the courtroom;
  - safety, security, and privacy of judge and jurors;
  - safety and security of detained defendants;
  - removal of persons causing disruptions during court proceedings;
  - calling and escorting witnesses;
  - announcing entry of the judge;
  - running errands for the judge during trial or hearing.
- The bailiff should be strategically placed to perform the above duties effectively.
- The bailiff should be able to see all participants and public.
- The bailiff requires a small table (on the order of 2 x 2.5 ft.) with gavel used for calling the court to order as the judge enters the courtroom.

Press Facilities

- The press has the right to attend and report trial proceedings, except juvenile and adoption cases, the records of which are kept confidential.
- Spaces for the press can be reserved in the front row of the public observation area or to the side of the courtroom, the location often determined by local policy.
- Press reporters should be no closer than 9 ft. to attorneys and litigants who may want to engage in private conversation.
- Adequate telephone facilities should be made available to the press in close proximity to courtrooms on each floor.
- A pressroom should be made available in close proximity to the building entrance.

Public Facilities

- The public:
  - has the right to attend all trials and hearings in the role of spectator;
  - need not be relegated to the traditional position in the rear half of the courtroom where only backs of attorneys and litigants and sides of jurors can be seen;
  - should be able to see and hear all participants as clearly as possible;
  - should remain inconspicuous and unobtrusive as possible to trial participants;
- Size of the public observation area should be determined to a large extent by the number of prospective jurors in a panel brought into the courtroom for jury selection and impaneling.
- The public observation area in a criminal trial courtroom generally requires more space than in a civil trial courtroom.
- Floors should be carpeted where possible to minimize impact noise.
- Public entry into courtrooms should be via soundlock to minimize airborne sounds from public corridors or waiting spaces. One set of doors normally would be closed before the other were opened.

Other Courtroom Facilities

The following facilities should be installed where applicable:

Display Exhibits

- White magnetic board for charting, drawing and for holding paper exhibits.
- White tack board for cardboard exhibits.
  - Both exhibit boards can be portable.
  - Each board should be at least 34 x 42 in. at 36-in. minimum height above floor level.
  - Angle of vision subtended at the boards should be greater than 45 degrees for clear viewing. Below 30 degrees, viewing becomes difficult.
  - Pointer 36-42 in. long (can be collapsible).
  - Battery-operated light pointer for explaining slide or film displays in a darkened courtroom.
  - An adequate supply of magnetic strips, water-color markers and cleaning cloths.

Projection of Images of Exhibits

- Slide and movie projectors should be stored at a central location for use in courtroom, on request. Projection screen can be portable.
- If the magnetic board cannot be used as a projection screen, then a roll-up screen could be installed above the board, recessed into the wall.
- The angle of vision subtended at the display boards applies also to projected images.

- An electrical outlet should be provided at the expected location of projectors.
- A portable projector stand should be collapsible for easy storage; a built-in stand should be recessed into a wall.
- An x-ray viewer or a shadow box for presenting medical evidence likewise can be integrated with courtroom wall design.

Clock

- An integral part of wall design, the clock should be located opposite the judge's bench.
- All clocks in a court building should be synchronized with a master clock.

Storage

- Space of at least 25-30 sq. ft. should be provided for storage of items such as display equipment and folding chairs. Interior shelves of various depths and heights from floor to ceiling should be adequately lighted -- 15-20 ft-candles (ft.-c). Storage space should be locked when not in use.
- Adjoining courtrooms and those with access through a private corridor can share storage spaces.

Judges' Chambers

- Chambers:
  - are spaces where judges conduct private research, hold conferences, receive visitors, handle correspondence, work on pending cases and relax;
  - should be accessible by private judges' corridor or staff corridor; the public should not have direct access to the judge's chamber.
- The judge's private chamber should:
  - be quiet, with low background noise level (room finishings of high sound absorption value);
  - have windows for natural lighting and for visual relief;
  - directly adjoin the secretary's and the law assistant's offices;
  - have an alternate access which enables the judge to enter a judge's corridor without passing through his secretary's office;
  - have walls, ceiling and floor of soundproof construction to aid private conversation and to reduce sound transmission to adjoining spaces;
- The judge's chamber or the secretary's office could open directly into a courtroom.
- Judge's and law assistant's work areas should be well-lighted, quiet and finished in colors and textures that create an atmosphere conducive to reading and writing legal documents.
- Judge's conference area, which can be a separate room adjoining his chamber, should be well-lighted with moderately low background noise with greater contrast in color and texture than the work area.

Jury Facilities

- The jury system ideally provides the court with an impartial tribunal that is representative of the people.
- The jury deliberates on matters of fact; the judge rules on matters of law.
- Many jurors serve jury duty at personal sacrifice of time and money, and sometimes at the risk of being harmed. They deserve the courtesy of the court, court personnel and trial participants.
- An integrated, directional sign system should be devised to guide prospective jurors to jury assembly spaces.
- The main jury assembly area should be planned, not as large space housing row-upon-row of benches, but in small spatial units with movable lounge or office furniture, arranged so as to stimulate interaction between prospective jurors. But the spatial arrangement of this area should not be overfragmented to the extent that chaotic movement and activity results.
- Adequate space should be provided close to the jury assembly area for jury clerks to call jury panels, prepare jury lists and arrange payment to jurors.
- By carefully planning the location of a jury control station, part of the large jury assembly area in existing buildings can be used as a courtroom or hearing room.
- Because some prospective jurors may wait long periods before being called, assembly rooms should be cheerful and spacious and be equipped for activities such as reading, television and games such as chess or checkers.
- Some prospective jurors may desire to do personal work while waiting to be called.
- A cafeteria should be provided to serve jurors and court personnel.
- A jury box should be on the same side of the courtroom as the witness so that the attorney questioning the witness will not block the jury's view of the witness.
- A jury deliberation room should be directly and privately accessible from the jury box. The jury should not have to pass in front of the public seating area when moving to the jury deliberation room.
- Unless jury deliberation rooms are internal spaces, they should not be located on the ground or main floor where the public can see or even hear jurors or gain access to them—a probable basis for a mistrial.
- If possible, toilets for both men and women should be accessible from an entrance lobby. Direct access to toilets from the jury deliberation room, especially for women jurors, should be avoided whenever possible.
- Toilets can be used as soundlocks between the jury deliberation room and other private and public places.
- Whenever possible, jury deliberation rooms should not adjoin attorney conference or witness rooms; if they must adjoin, then common walls have to adequately soundproofed so that raised voices will not be heard.
- All jury spaces, including jury deliberation rooms, should be well-ventilated, air-conditioned, well-lighted and completely soundproof.
- A drinking fountain is essential in every jury deliberation room. It should be recessed and designed as an integral part of the toilet plumbing system.

- Adequate consideration needs to be given the activities and space requirement of the bailiff responsible for security and safety of jurors during jury deliberation. A recessed alcove adjoining the jury deliberation room could be designed for this purpose.
- Where alcove is inadequate for the bailiff, a seat hinged to the wall with a spring device to raise the seat to a vertical position when unused can be provided outside the jury deliberation room.
- A push button should be provided at the jury foreman's station in jury deliberation room that, then activated, would start a blinking light and/or buzzing sound at the bailiff station.

Prisoner Holding Facilities

- Air-conditioning and ventilating registers and lighting fixtures should be secured in place to prevent their removal and use as weapons.
- Each prisoner holding facility should have a combined wash basin and toilet unit constructed of stainless steel. This unit should be installed along the wall on the corridor side of the facility so that repairs can be made from the outside.
- Distance of movement of prisoners from temporary detention facilities to courtrooms should be as direct as possible.
- All prisoner holding facilities and secured interview spaces should be properly ventilated, well-lighted and reasonably maintained.
- Prisoner holding facilities adjoining courtrooms entered by prisoner secured access should be designed as compactly as possible to minimize distances between these facilities and the courtrooms and detention facilities.
- The prisoner should enter the courtroom as close as possible to his station at the defense attorney's table.
- Defense attorneys should have easy access to the prisoner holding facility behind the courtroom to interview clients in spaces provided for this purpose.
