ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Many people have contributed their time and energy in preparing this Directory. We especially appreciate the cooperation and patience of the Federal personnel who provided information about their programs and answered our many questions. Not to be overlooked are the capable guidance and competent work of the Aspen's Communications Department staff. Special thanks go to Ronnie Mills and Gerri Cunningham who worked diligently to produce the Directory. Gary Blake, Director of Montgomery County Department of Corrections, Maryland, also contributed his professional knowledge in reviewing the draft. We also sincerely appreciate the work of our Government Project Officer, Nancy Sabanosh, who spent many hours reviewing the program entries.

FOREWORD

In the Spring of 1981, the National Institute of Corrections responded to an informational need of the field of Corrections, through the publication of the Directory of Federal Programs - Resources for Corrections.

Since the publication of the Directory, significant changes have taken place. A number of the programs originally listed have been either reduced in scope or eliminated. Some, although few, new programs have been identified and included in this revised edition.

At a time when resources are limited and budget cuts commonplace, it is essential that correctional administrators, personnel, and clients seek out and utilize whatever resources are available. The purpose of this revised Directory is to provide a guide for the correctional community that identifies Federal programs of possible assistance. We encourage you to explore those programs that appear relevant to your needs.

INTRODUCTION

Purpose of the Directory

This second edition of Resources for Corrections - Directory of Federal Programs contains 199 entries representing 27 Government departments and independent agencies. Each entry contains program description, eligibility requirements, past correctional assistance, type of assistance available, and several other categories of information. Entries focus on corrections through inclusion of specific examples of past or potential correctional assistance and by deemphasizing program features not relevant to corrections.

Since the publication of the first edition of the Directory (prepared by the Institute of Economic and Policy Studies) in Spring 1981, there have been major changes in Federal assistance—a significant shift from categorical to block grants, consolidation of grant programs, altered funding levels, and modifications in eligibility requirements and target populations.

Despite all of these changes and increasing inflationary pressures, a wide variety of support programs are still available. This Directory represents a complete update and revision of the first edition. It contains 57 new programs and deletes 85 programs from the 1981 edition, reflecting the major change in the types of assistance available.

The Directory is designed to lead users to programs of potential assistance. Users can contact the listed program officer to discuss needs and the program's relevance, and to obtain guidelines and application packets. The Directory is not intended to replace contacting the agency for specific program information.

Scope

The Directory contains programs of potential use to jails, probation and parole departments, community treatment facilities, and correctional facilities. The selection of programs was guided by the needs of three major constituencies:

1) administrators and personnel involved in either the operation of correctional programs and facilities, or the supervision, care, custody, treatment, or welfare of correctional clients; 2) individuals or organizations concerned with the functioning of the correctional system; and 3) the correctional clients themselves. Some programs overlap with other areas such as law enforcement, juvenile corrections, or topics more relevant to research in an academic setting. If these programs appeared useful to corrections, they were included; however, such programs were not a focus of our investigation. Many programs may seem only marginally relevant, but their potential to assist even one small component of corrections was considered sufficient for inclusion.

The types of assistance included in the Directory are classified into 15 major categories formulated by the Office of Management and Budget (see appendix B), ranging from project grants, insurance, and direct loans to provision of specialized services, advisory services and counseling, and training. Many programs that provide direct funds are being severely cut back, and some are being eliminated. Thus, programs providing other forms of nonfinancial assistance become even more valuable. Consequently, more information and technical assistance sources are included to provide the Directory's users with resources of available professional expertise and knowledge.

A greater number of formula grants are listed in the second edition of the Directory. Formula grants are awarded to States or their subdivisions according to a distribution formula. The allocation of funds to programs within the State may be guided by Federal restrictions placed on the funds or, in the case of many of the recently created block grants (which are still considered formula grants), may be expended almost entirely at the discretion of the State. These formula grants and the new block grants can still provide assistance to corrections, but since they are managed and administered by the States or their subdivisions, individuals interested in these funds must directly contact their State for information. Such funding programs are listed in this Directory to alert the user to their existence. To what extent these programs will actually be used by corrections remains largely unknown and most likely dependent on the initiative of individual administrators within their own States.

Methodology

The process of revising the Directory began with an evaluation of the entries in the first edition. Programs eliminated by budget cuts, reorganizations and consolidation of programs into block grants were identified. This step was followed by the identification of potential new sources of assistance.

A total of 306 questionnaires were mailed to 246 identified offices and programs to collect the data for each entry. (See appendix H for a sample questionnaire). Telephone contact with many of the programs verified or clarified information provided in the questionnaire and helped determine whether some programs should or should not be included in the Directory. Negative responses (i.e., self-exclusions) received through the mail were also followed up with telephone calls to verify that the program was not applicable. In some instances, outside professional opinion helped further assess a program's relevance to corrections. The Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance 1982 provided supplementary information for some entries. In some cases it was necessary to rely almost entirely on that Catalog for basic program information with supplemental information for such categories as past correctional assistance obtained through telephone interviews with program officials.

On the basis of this intensive screening, 85 programs were eliminated from the directory: 46 of these programs were affected by budget cuts and reorganizations; (29 of them in the Departments of Education and Health and Human Services); 35 programs were determined to be unlikely sources of assistance for corrections; and 4 programs were consolidated into other program descriptions.

Organization of the Directory

The Directory includes a foreword, table of contents, introduction, program title listing, program entries, a functional index, a subject index, a glossary, and eight appendices.

The detailed program title listing names every program or service contained in the Directory. An attempt was made to reflect the organizational structure of the sponsoring agencies by specifying the subunits of the agency in which the programs are located. Numbers are assigned to each entry for easy reference.

The functional index allows the user to select one of 18 functional terms that describe general areas of interest and find the entry numbers of all the programs relevant to that term. Examples that delimit the scope of the functional terms are provided at the beginning of this index.

The subject index enables the user to look up a category of service, a beneficiary group, or a particular topic such as "apprenticeship programs," "handicapped persons," or "correctional industries." Entry numbers are listed with each subject index term.

Terms used in some entries, including budgetary terms used frequently in the Directory, may require further definition. Thus, the Directory includes a glossary.

Among the appendices, the List of Federal Information Centers and their telephone numbers is of particular use. The Resource List provides brief explanations of several publications valuable to the search for Federal assistance. The appendices are:

- A) Deletion List
- B) Types of Assistance
- C) Federal Information Centers
- D) Resource List
- E) Suggestions for Proposal Writing
- F) Eligibility of Adult Correctional Institutions in the Food Distribution Program
- G) State Abbreviations
- H) Sample Questionnaire.

The Directory's 199 entries are alphabetically listed according to their agency and location within that agency. The entry format is explained below, with a definition of each category.

Sponsoring Agency: The Federal Department, Agency, Commission, Council, or branch of the government under whose authority the program falls. Further subdivisions of the sponsoring agency are also listed to locate the program more accurately within the correct office, division, administration, or bureau of the sponsoring agency.

Program Title: The title of the program or the subunit of the sponsoring agency that is directly responsible for providing the service or monitoring the program funds.

CFDA No.: The number assigned to the program by the Office of Management and Budget in the Catalog of Federal Domestic Assistance.

Functional Area: The general program areas most relevant to the entry. The 18 functional areas have been assigned to as many programs as necessary. "Criminal Justice Planning" and "Management and Administration" are used in entries for which all 18 terms could be relevant due to the broad scope of the program. The Functional Index is based on these terms. See the list of Functional Areas for examples of topics included in each term.

Description: An outline of the general function performed by the program. Information and restrictions on the use of funds and examples of program activities are also included.

Objectives: A statement of what the program is intended to accomplish along with the goals toward which the program is directed.

Past Assistance: An example of how the program has assisted corrections in the past. The term is not used when there has been no past assistance provided to corrections.

Potential Assistance: An example of how the program could be potentially useful to corrections. Use of this category indicates that past assistance cannot be determined or has not been given by the program.

Eligibility: A description of who can apply to the program for assistance and the criteria the potential applicant must satisfy. Applicants and beneficiaries are addressed separately when the applicant group is responsible for using the Federal resources to provide assistance to a separate beneficiary group.

Scope of Assistance: The sequence in which the assistance is disseminated to the applicant/beneficiary and the form in which the assistance is received by the applicant/beneficiary. In the majority of cases, the assistance is transmitted directly from the Federal Government to the applicant, but in cases of formula grants, for example, the assistance is provided to the State or a central State agency for further dissemination to the applicants. The type of assistance can vary greatly, including project grants, training, or dissemination of technical information. Appendix B lists the 15 terms used with brief explanations of each.

Resources: The dollar amounts available in each listed fiscal year for the administration, management and/or support of the program. Many programs provide services rather than distribute or award funds, and in these cases, the amount shown indicates the salaries and expenses of the personnel providing the services or administering the program to give an indication of the size and resources of the program. The figures presented are estimates and could change due to ongoing budget revisions and cutbacks.

Match: The share or proportion of project costs not borne by the Federal Government and which the applicant must provide. Matching requirements are usually met through cash or in-kind contributions.

Fee/Costs: Any additional cost the applicant is required to pay in order to receive the desired service. This category is most relevant to clearinghouses and programs disseminating documents for which a purchase fee is charged.

Range/Average Assistance: The representative range (smallest to largest) of the amount of financial assistance available, as well as the approximate average amount of awards made in the past and current fiscal years.

Publications: Documents, pamphlets, brochures, or sources of publications prepared by or about the program being addressed. The Government Printing Office (entry no. 84) and the National Technical Information Service (entry no. 26) are the two central sources for the purchase of Government documents and should be consulted for ordering information.

Announcements: The method utilized by each program to announce the availability of funds, program services, or products of the programs. Most grants and contracts are announced in the Federal Register or Commerce Business Daily (see Appendix D for more information) or through agency program plans. For applicable programs offering non-financial assistance, the method or means of publicizing the service is provided.

Applications: The first step necessary to initiate the application process.

Contacts: The individual(s) who can best provide further program information. National Office contact individuals and their telephone numbers are provided for all programs; however, when regional contacts are more appropriate, the title of the regional contact person is also listed.

Address: The mailing address to be used in correspondence concerning the program.

Regional Office: The location of the appropriate regional offices or the source that can provide such information.

Summary

The distribution among Federal agencies of programs offering resources to corrections has not changed substantially from the first edition. The Department of Justice still supplies the majority of funds available specifically to corrections. The Department of Education and the Department of Health and Human Services, both of which have been valuable sources of correctional assistance, have experienced major changes. Both Departments have undergone a consolidation of many programs into block grants, as well as a substantial reduction in funding levels for these and other programs.

Within the Department of Health and Human Services, the Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Administration has undergone the greatest change. Funds for treatment, prevention, and demonstration grants that have provided assistance to corrections in the past have been placed in the Alcohol, Drug Abuse, and Mental Health Services Block grant (see entry no. 85). Correctional administrators must make their needs known to State executives and planners to assure continued access to these funds. The priorities and concerns of each State and the initiative of users will determine whether these funds will remain a source of assistance for corrections.

The Department of Education expects more changes in the upcoming fiscal year, as indicated by the many program entries which show $0 for the estimated FY1983 budget. At the time of publication, however, FY1983 allocations had not been made final, so these figures may change. It is highly probable that more programs will be consolidated into block grants.

The Department of Labor has also been a reliable source of support for corrections. However, with the expiration of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act in September 1982, this situation could change. The Employment and Training Administration has already undergone reductions in funds and personnel.

Other Government agencies provide resources and services that may be relevant to only one or a few components of corrections and may be useful only in indirect ways. The potential value of programs such as the Department of Agriculture's Federal-State Marketing and Improvement Program (entry no. 7) and the Cooperative Extension Service (entry no. 12) or General Services Administration's National Audio-Visual Center (entry no. 82) should not be overlooked.

A tightening of eligibility requirements and a narrowing of target beneficiary groups can be expected if programs are to continue functioning with greatly reduced funds. Correctional administrators will have to be creative in their use of programs and services and be willing to cooperate with and coordinate efforts with other State and local programs and agencies. The usefulness and applicability of many of the listed programs are limited only by the potential applicant. To successfully locate and utilize Federal resources for corrections today, the user must be resourceful, creative, and somewhat bold in his/her search for support.

Functional Area: Employment/Work

Description

Provides informational, technical, and advisory services to assist in enlarging the contribution and participation of women in the workforce. The Bureau also works to improve legislation related to equal rights for women in employment. The assistance provided is usually indirect, in the form of technical assistance to the State agencies or referrals.

Objectives:

To reduce discrimination in employment based on sex and race, and to enlarge economic rights and opportunities of women through the promotion of improved working conditions, expanded job opportunities, better training, improved vocational counseling and community services, and more extensive use of women's volunteer services in Federal and community programs. Special focus is on establishing direct linkages with women's organizations and specific groups of women(e.g., minority, mature, low-income, youthful, rural, teen mothers, and offenders) who are not likely to be reached through the usual communications channels. Another major effort is to encourage the movement of women into nontraditional jobs, including apprenticeship, and their advancement to more skilled and responsible jobs in the economy.

Past Assistance:

The Bureau advocates and assists in establishing apprenticeship programs for women in Federal and State correctional facilities; also works with State agencies in setting up programs in prisons. Also supports a network of female offenders which meet quarterly and includes people in projects and programs for women offenders.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PROPOSAL WRITING AND FOLLOWING GRANT APPLICATION PROCEDURES

I. INTRODUCTION

This section is designed to assist persons and institutions seeking a grant from a Federal assistance program.

The ideas and suggestions in this section are not all-inclusive. They are intended as a general guide. The material applies to most assistance proposals. Applicants should remember that the basic requirements, application forms, information and procedures vary with the Federal agency making the grant award.

The legislative intent and the administrative guidelines of Federal programs (the Authorization section of the Catalog program description) are useful as a starting point in considering if and how a proposal matches the needs of the Federal granting agency. The remaining sections of the Catalog program description further define features of the Federal program.

A telephone call or a letter to the Federal agency contact person (the Information Contacts section of the Catalog program description) can provide invaluable help in the beginning stages of proposal development. The potential applicant should consult the program's information contact person before developing a proposal to determine whether an application should be made, if there is money available, applicable deadlines, and the process used by the agency in accepting applications. It is important to identify any priorities the Federal agency considers significant. Agencies often prepare guidelines for specific programs to assist applicants in proposal development. These guidelines should be requested by the applicant.

Individuals without prior grant writing experience may find it useful to attend a grantsmanship workshop. A workshop can amplify the basic information presented here. Applicants requiring additional readings on grantsmanship and proposal development should consult the references listed at the end of this section and other library resources.

II. INITIAL PROPOSAL DEVELOPMENT

A. The Concept Paper

After outlining the idea for a proposal, it is useful to develop a concept paper (preliminary proposal) perhaps one or two pages in length. The paper should attempt, at a minimum, to outline proposed goals, rationale, population to be served, estimate of cost, and expected program achievements. The author periodically should revise the paper as ideas about the proposal or grant requirements of the Federal program change. The paper should be distributed to interested persons and agencies in the community. They can be helpful by providing both review and comment on the proposal contents. Select someone who knows and someone who does not know about the subject matter of the paper. This procedure will serve to provide at least two perspectives on the contents: first, a substantive review of the material, and, second, insight into the clarity of the writing style and gramatical accuracy. Further, a review by someone who has submitted a proposal to the funding source in the past will yield information regarding experience with the agency's proposal preferences. The concept paper may be used later for both clearinghouse review (Notification of Intent), and if necessary, for the proposal summary page of the application which is usually one of the most important pages in the grant package. (Refer to the application kit for details on the development of the proposal summary page.) When developing an idea for a proposal it is important to determine if the idea has been or is now being considered in the applicant's locality or State. A careful check should be made with legislators and area government agencies and related public and private agencies which may have (or have had) grant awards or contracts to do similar work. If a similar program exists (or has existed in the past), the applicant may need to reconsider submitting the proposed project particularly if duplication of effort is perceived. Provided significant differences can be established between the existing and proposed project it may be unwise to pursue Federal assistance. The applicant must strive to select a 'fundable' project which can be supported in view of the local need. Alternatives, in the absence of Federal support, should be pointed out. The influence of the project both during and after the project period should be explained. The consequences of the project as a result of funding should be highlighted.

B. Community Support

Community support for most proposals is essential. Once an outline or concept paper has been developed, look for individuals or groups representing academic, political, professional and lay organizations who may be willing to support the proposal in writing. The type and caliber of community support is critical in the initial and subsequent review phases. Numerous letters of support can be persuasive to a grantor agency. Do not overlook support from local government agencies and public officials. Letters of endorsement detailing exact areas of project sanction and commitment are often requested as part of a proposal to a Federal agency. Several months may be required to develop letters of endorsement since something of value (e.g., buildings, staff, services) is sometimes negotiated between the parties involved. Many agencies require, in writing, affiliation agreements (a mutual agreement to share services between agencies) and building space commitments prior to either grant approval or award. A useful method of generating community support may be to hold meetings with the top decision makers in the community who would be concerned with the subject matter of the proposal. The forum for discussion may include a query into the merits of the proposal, development of a contract of support for the proposal, to generate data in support of the proposal, or development of a strategy to create proposal support from a large number of community groups.

C. Identification of a Funding Resource

A chart is provided in the Introduction (see, How to Use the Catalog) to guide users through Catalog sections and retrieve all pertinent program information available in the Catalog. For new Catalog users this chart may be consulted first for an orientation to the suggested method for identifying Federal financial assistance in the Catalog. A review of the Objectives and Uses and Use Restrictions sections of the Catalog program description can point out which programs might provide funding for an idea. Do not overlook the related programs as potential resources. Both the applicant and the grantor agency should have the same interests, intentions and needs if a proposal is to be considered an acceptable candidate for funding. Once a potential grantor agency is identified, call the contact person/number identified in Information Contacts and ask for a grant application kit. Later get to know some of the grantor agency personnel. Ask for suggestions, criticisms and acvice about the proposed project. In many cases the more agency personnel know about the proposal the better the chance of support and of an eventual favorable decision. Sometimes it is useful to send the concept paper to a specific agency official in a separate cover letter, and ask for review and comment at the earliest possible convenience. Always check with the Federal agency to determine its preference if this approach is under consideration. If the review is unfavorable and differences cannot be resolved, ask the examining agency (official) to suggest another department or agency which may be interested in the proposal. A personal visit to the agency's regional office or headquarters is also important. A visit not only establishes face to face contact, but also may bring out some essential details about the proposal or help secure literature and references from the agency's library or clearinghouse. At the outset, applicants whose proposals are subject to OMB Circular No. A-95, Part I, are reminded that contact with Federal agency officials prior to project clearance does not circumvent the A-95 process. Such communication should occur only when specific advice is sought or clarification is required about the contents of the proposal, regulations and/ or legislation. Applicants should be aware of and comply with OMB Circular No. A-95 requirements when applicable (see Catalog Introduction).

It may be useful to consider consulting the State Central Information Reception Agency (SCIRA) to learn the types and dollar amounts of programs approved or rejected in the applicant's State. This organization is coordinated through the Governor's office in each State. Federal agencies are required to report funding information as funds are approved, increased or decreased among projects within a given State depending on the type of required reporting (see, Treasury Circular 1082 in the Catalog Introduction). Also, consider reviewing the Federal Budget for the current and budget fiscal years to determine proposed dollar amounts for particular budget functions.

The applicant should carefully study the eligibility requirements for each Federal program under consideration (see the Applicant Eligibility section of the Catalog program description). The applicant may learn he or she is required to provide services otherwise unintended such as a service to particular client groups, or involvement of specific institutions. It may necessitate, in some way, the modification of the original concept in order for the project to be eligible for funding. Questions about eligibility should be discussed with the program officer of the Federal program of interest.

The timing used by the applicant in implementing Part II Section A, B and C above depends upon the stage of development of each section. The applicant should carefully balance the knowledge and understanding of each part prior to determining the first step and before proceeding to the formal development of the proposal.

III. WRITING AND DEVELOPING A PROPOSAL

A. Gathering Applicant Organizational Data

The applicant should gather data about its organization from all available sources. Most proposals require a description of an applicant's organization to describe its past and present operations. Some features to consider are:

- 1. A brief biography of board members and/or key staff; and
- 2. The organization's goals, philosophy, track record with other grantors and any success stories.

The data should be relevant to the goals of the Federal grantor agency and should establish the applicant's credibility.

B. Problem Statement Development

One of the key elements of a proposal is a clear, concise and well-supported statement of the problem to be addressed. The best way to collect information about the problem is to conduct and document both a formal and informal needs assessment for a program in the target or service area. There is a considerable body of literature on the exact assessment techniques to be used. Any local, regional or State government planning office or local university offering course work in planning and evaluation techniques should be able to provide excellent background references. Types of data that may be collected include: historical, geographic, quantifiable, factual, statistical, unobstrusive and philosophical information as well as studies completed by colleges, and literature searches from a public or university library. Local colleges or universities which have a department or section related to the proposal topic may help determine if there is interest in developing a student or faculty project to conduct a needs assessment. It may be helpful to include examples of the findings for highlight in the proposal. The information provided should be both factual and directly related to the problem addressed by the proposal. Areas to document are:

- 1. The purpose for developing the proposal:
- 2. The beneficiaries, who they are and how they will benefit;
- 3. The social and economic costs to be affected;
- 4. The nature of the problem (provide as much hard evidence as possible);
- 5. How the applicant organization came to realize the problem exists, and what is currently being done about the problem.
- 6. The alternatives when the funding is over. Explain what will happen to the project and the implications;
- 7. Most important, the specific manner through which problems might be solved. Review the resources needed, how they will be used and to what end.

IV. ACT OF WRITING

A. Preorganization

Prior to any formal development of a proposal the applicant should first complete the task of accumulating information, and then begin writing the proposal. The applicant should also have the grant application kit in hand.

One of the first steps in the development of an application is to identify a coordinating person and have this person thoroughly review the application kit. This task is best performed by the person with the major responsibility for the coordination of the proposal development tasks and may or may not be the person who knows the most about the proposal subject area. These are often two different persons. Make an outline of the forms, copy each one and put the originals in a secure file. Use these copies only when ready to type the final draft. Then substitute the filed copies in the application kit. It may be useful to develop a milestone chart (a type of schedule which charts significant events in the development of a proposal over time) to address and identify the implementation dates of the following:

- 1. Formatting the available information not requiring additional development;
- 2. Gathering data necessary for development of the proposal and where to get it:
- 3. Who and when staff will be available to assist with the project;
- 4. Item—by—item development to the first draft;
- 5. Schedule for the completion of the second and final drafts to be inspected by the coordinator.

Whenever steps in the milestone chart are delayed it is advisable to immediately negotiate the earliest possible new deadline with the affected parties. Care should be exercised to guarantee that the newly selected date does not throw off the entire project schedule. Most grant proposals will need to be copied four times or more. The original and copies will go to to the Federal grantor agency's program and/or grant office. Other copies may go to to single State agencies, regional and local government officials and board members (if any). If the copying is done internally it may be wise to identify a backup copy machine is case of mechanical failure. This may be critical when working against strict deadlines. Typist should be notified and scheduled in advance if possible. Prepare to commit enough financial resources to producing a proposal. It is difficult to gauge how much money, material and personnel will be needed, but some considerations are: person power (writers, typist, clerks, researchers, statisticians, consultants, etc.), supplies (typewriter, paper, copy machine, postage, binders, pencils and pens, correction fluid, types of stylus apparatus for charts, etc.), office space, a telephone and office equipment.

B. Getting Organized to Write the Proposal

Throughout the proposal writing stage keep a notebook handy to write down ideas. Periodically, try to connect ideas by reviewing the notebook. Never throw away written ideas during the grant writing stage. Maintain a file labeled 'Ideas' or by some other convenient title and review the ideas from time to time. The file should be easily accessible. The gathering of documents such as articles of incorporation, tax exemption certificates, bylaws, etc., should be completed, if possible, before the writing begins.

C. A Note on Special Technical Services

States and political subdivisions can obtain technical information services from Federal agencies when preparing proposals. A written request from the chief executive officer (governor, mayor or county executive) is required. Services are provided according to the Federal agency's special capabilities, mission and authorization by law. Assistance may include: statistical or other studies and compilations, development projects, technical tests and evaluations, technical information, training activities, surveys, reports and documents. All services must relate to either current or future needs of the Federal Government. Some form of proof is required to ensure that these services can be procured reasonably and expeditiously by the requesting agency through ordinary business channels. Federal agencies may require considerable time in supplying information. Consider such possible time lags when requesting assistance.

The following information (Sections D, E, F and Parts V and VI) is generally adaptable to all proposals, and will test both creativity and resourcefulness of the applicant.

D. Developing Program Objectives

Program objectives refer to specific activities in a proposal. It is necessary to identify all objectives related to the goals to be reached, and the methods to be employed to achieve the stated objectives. Consider quantities or things measurable and refer to a problem statement and the outcome of proposed activities when developing a well stated objective. The figures used should be verifiable. Remember, if the proposal is funded, the stated objectives will probably be used to evaluate program progress, so be realistic. There is literature available to help identify and write program objectives.

E. Writing the Solution — A Program Design

The program design refers to how the project is expected to work and solve the stated problem. Sketch out the following:

- 1. The activities to occur along with the related resources and staff needed to operate the project (inputs).
- 2. A flow chart of the organizational features of the project. Describe how the parts interrelate, where personnel will be needed and what they are expected to do. Identify the kinds of facilities, transportation and support services required (throughputs).
- 3. Explain what will be achieved through 1 and 2 above (outputs); i.e., plan for measurable results. Project staff may be required to produce evidence of program performance through an examination of stated objectives during either a site visit by the Federal grantor agency and or grant reviews which may involve peer review committees.
- 4. It may be useful to devise a diagram of the program design. For example, draw a three column block. Each column is headed by one of the parts (inputs, throughputs and outputs), and on the left (next to the first column) specific program features should be indentified (i.e., implementation, staffing, procurement, systems development, etc.). In the grid specify something about the program design, for example, assume the first column is labeled inputs and the first row is labeled staff. On the grid one might specify under inputs five nurses to operate a child care unit. The throughput might be to maintain charts, counsel the children, set up daily routine, etc., and outputs might be to discharge 25 healthy children per week. This type of procedure will help to conceptualize both the scope and detail of the project.
- 5. Wherever possible, justify in the narrative the course of action taken. The most economical method should be used that does not compromise or sacrifice project quality. The financial expenses associated with performance of the project will later become points of negotiation with the Federal program staff. If everything is not carefully justified in writing in the proposal, after negotiation with the Federal grantor agencies, the approved project may resemble less of the original concept. Carefully consider the pressures of the proposed implementation, that is, the time and money needed to acquire each part of the plan. A Program Evaluation and Review Technique (PERT) chart could be useful and supportive in justifying some proposals.
- 6. Highlight the innovative features of the proposal which could be considered distinct from other proposals under consideration.
- 6. Whenever possible use appendices to provide details, supplementary data, references, and information requiring indepth analysis. These types of data, although supportive of the proposal, if included in the body of the design, could detract from its readability. Appendices provide the proposal reader with immediate access to details if and when clarification of an idea, sequence or conclusion is required. Time tables, work plans, schedules, activities, metodologies, legal papers, personal vitae, letters of support, endorsements, etc. are examples of appendices.

F. Evaluating the Program

Most Federal agencies now require some form of program evaluation among grantees. The requirements of the proposed project should be explored carefully. Evaluations may be conducted by an internal staff member, an evaluation firm or both. The applicant should state the amount of time needed to evaluate, how the feedback will be distributed among the proposed staff, and a schedule for review and comment for this type of communication. Evaluation designs may start at the beginning, middle or end of a project, but the applicant should specify a start-up time. It is practical to submit an evaluation design at the start of a project for two reasons:

- 1. Convincing evaluations require the collection of appropriate data before and during program operations; and,
- 2. If the evaluation design cannot be prepared at the outset then a critical review of the program design may be advisable.

Even if the evaluation design has to be revised as the project progresses, it is much easier and cheaper to modify a good design. If the problem is not well defined and carefully analyzed for cause/effect relationships then a good evaluation design may be difficult to achieve. Sometimes a pilot study is needed to begin the identification of facts and relationships. Often a thorough literature search may be sufficient.

Evaluation requires both coordination and agreement among program decision makers (if known). Above all, the Federal grantor agency's requirements should be highlighted in the evaluation design. Also, Federal grantor agencies may require specific evaluation techniques such as designated data formats (an existing information collection system) or they may offer financial inducements for voluntary participation in a national evaluation study. The applicant should ask specifically about these points. Also, consult the Criteria For Funding Proposals section of the Catalog program description to determine the exact evaluation methods to be required for the program if funded.

V. BUDGET FORMULATION

A. Planning the Budget

Funding levels in Federal assistance programs change yearly. It is useful to review the appropriations over the past several years to try to project future funding levels (see Financial Information section of the Catalog program description).

However, it is safer to never anticipate that the income from the grant will be the sole support for the project. This consideration should be given to the overall budget requirements, and in particular, to budget line items most subject to inflationary pressures. Restraint is important in determining inflationary cost projections (avoid padding budget line items), but attempt to anticipate possible future increases. Some vulnerable budget areas are: utilities, rental of buildings and equipment, salary increases, food, telephones, insurance and transportation. Budget adjustments are sometimes made after the grant award, but this can be a lengthy process. Be certain that implementation, continuation and phasedown costs can be met. Consider costs associated with leases, evaluation systems, hard/soft match requirements, audits, development, implementation and maintenance of information systems and accounting systems and other long-term financial commitments.

A well prepared budget justifies all expenses and is consistent with the proposal narrative. Some areas in need of an evaluation for consistency are: the salaries in the proposal in relation to those of the applicant organization should be similar; if new staff are being hired additional space and equipment should be considered, if necessary; if the budget calls for an equipment purchase it should be the type allowed by the grantor agency; if additional space is rented the increase in insurance should be supported; if an indirect cost rate applies to the proposal the division between direct and indirect costs should not be in conflict, and the aggregate budget totals should refer directly to the approved formula; if matching costs are required the contributions to the matching fund should be taken out of the budget unless otherwise specified in the application instructions.

It is very important to become familiar with Government-wide circular requirements. The Catalog identifies in the program description section the particular circulars applicable to a Federal program, and summarizes circular requirements in Appendix I. The applicant should thoroughly review the appropriate circulars since they are essential in determining items such as cost principles and conforming with Government guidelines for Federal domestic assistance.

VI. REVIEW

A. Criticism

At some point, perhaps after the first or second draft is completed, seek out a neutral third party to review the proposal working draft for continuity, clarity and reasoning. Ask for constructive criticism at this point, rather than wait for the Federal grantor agency to volunteer this information during the review cycle. For example, has the writer made unsupported assumptions or used jargon or excessive language in the proposal?

B. Signature

Most proposals are made to institutions rather than individuals. Often signatures of chief administrative officials is required. Check to make sure they are included in the proposal where appropriate.

C. Neatness

Proposals should be typed, collated, copied and packaged correctly and neatly(according to agency instructions, if any). Each package should be inspected to ensure uniformity from cover to cover. Binding may require either clamps or hard covers. Check with the Federal agency to determine its preference. A neat, organized and attractive proposal package can leave a positive impression with the reader about the proposal contents.

C. Mailing

A cover letter should always accompany a proposal. Standard U.S. Postal Service requirements apply unless otherwise indicated by the Federal agency. Make sure there is enough time for the proposals to reach their destinations. Otherwise, special arrangements may be necessary. Always coordinate such arrangements with the Federal grantor agency project office (the agency which will ultimately have the responsibility for the project), the grant office (the agency which will coordinate the grant review) and the contract office if necessary (the agency responsible for disbursement, grant award notices, etc.).

VII. ADDITIONAL SOURCES OF INFORMATION

Below are resources for more detail about grants and grantwriting. There are several very good private resources available which can be identified by consulting a public library.

A. Research Tools

THE FEDERAL REGISTER

The Federal Register, published daily, is the medium for making available to the public Federal agency regulations and other legal documents of the Executive Branch. These documents cover a wide range of Government activities. Here, Government requirements are published which involve environmental protection, consumer product safety, food and drug standards, occupational health and safety, and many more areas of concern to the public.

Perhaps more importantly, the Federal Register includes proposed changes in regulated areas. Each proposed change published carries an invitation for any citizen or group to participate in the consideration of the proposed regulation through the submission of written data, views, or arguments, and sometimes by oral presentations. Through the publication of proposed rules and notices of public meetings, citizens are given the opportunity to be informed about and participate in the workings of their Government.

The Federal Register Index is based on a consolidation of entries appearing in the issues of the Federal Register together with broad references. It is published monthly and is cumulated for 12 months. All Federal Register publications are available for purchase from the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, DC 20402.

THE CODE OF FEDERAL REGULATIONS

The Code of Federal Regulations (CFR) is a codification of the general and permanent rules published in the Federal Register by executive departments and agencies of the Federal Government. It includes all statutory regulations of Federal agencies, and is divided into 50 titles which represent broad subject areas of Federal regulations (e.g., Housing and Urban Development, Public Health, Public Welfare, or Transportation). Each title is divided into chapters which usually bear the name of the issuing agency. Each chapter is further subdivided into parts covering specific regulatory areas. The number preceding the CFR citation is the title or volume number. The CFR is kept up-to-date by the individual issues of the Federal Register, these two publications must be used together to determine the latest version of any given rule. Individual volumes of the CFR are revised at least once each calendar year and issued on a staggered quarterly basis. The CFR thus serves as a convenient reference for the citizen desiring a comprehensive source for general and permanent Federal regulations.

A General index to the entire Code of Federal Regulations, the CFR Index, is revised as of July 1 each year. The numerical Finding Aids, a cumulative list of CFR Sections affected is publised monthly and is cumulated for 12 months, keyed to the revision dates of the various CFR volumes.

The Federal Register and the Code of Federal Regulations are available in Federal depository libraries and most major libraries or Federal bookstores. Individual copies may be purchased from the Government Printing Office

THE FEDERAL BUDGET

The following four budget documents are briefly described below: The Budget of the U.S. Government, the Budget Appendix, The Budget in Brief, and the Special Analyses of the Budget.

The Budget provides information on the President's budget proposals, ongoing programs, the budget system and summary tables on the budget. For program identification, the last three digits of the identification code in the Financial Information section of the program description in the Catalog is the functional code. The codes and functions are contained in the back section of the Budget (Budget Outlays by Function).

The Appendix provides detailed information on Federal programs, and identifies specific amounts (as shown in the budget) for each existing or proposed program. Supplemental proposals and amendments for the current year are also identified.

The Budget in Brief is designed for use by the general public. This document is a less technical overview of the budget, and provides graphic displays, a summary and his orical tables on the Federal budget.

The Special Analyses, Budget of the U.S. Government contains analyses that are designed to highlight specific program areas or provide other significant presentations of Federal budget data.

The budget documents are available for purchase from the Government Printing Office.

STATE CENTRAL INFORMATION RECEPTION AGENCIES

A State Central Information Reception Agency (SCIRA) is an office or unit of State government designated by the Governor to receive notification of grant awards issued under the provisions of Treasury Circular 1082. Federal agencies are required to notify the appropriate SCIRA in each State of Federal financial assistance awarded and subsequent related transactions including changes in the value or duration of a grant. For basic reporting (grants awarded to States or political subdivisions), Federal agencies submit a Report of Federal Action to the appropriate SCIRA using SF 424. Supplemental reporting (all other Federal assistance to any recipient) is submitted to the SCIRA using individual agency procedures. (See Appendix I of the Catalog for programs designated as basic or supplemental.) The SCIRA in each State is set up primarily to serve the Governor and the legislature. The extent to which it is equipped to serve others such as local governments or the general public varies from State to State.

Eligibility of Adult Correctional Institutions in the Food Distribution Program

I PURPOSE

This Instruction sets forth the policy concerning eligibility of adult correctional institutions and related facilities to receive USDA-donated foods.

II DEFINITIONS

- A Adult correctional institution means:
- l A public, tax-supported, residential institution for the confinement and rehabilitation of adult offenders.
- 2 A public or private, uonprofit residential halfway has or prerelease center which provides rehabilitative services to adult offenders or exoffenders.
- B Rehabilitative program means any continuing activity conducted or approved by authorities of correctional institutions for the purpose of restoring inmates usefully to society through education, vocational training, employment, counseling services, and health therapy.
- C Sentenced inmates means persons who have been committed by a court to an adult correctional institution as the result of conviction in formal criminal proceedings.

III POLICY

- A Fligibility. Adult correctional institutions are eligible to receive donated foods as charitable institutions, i.e., to the extent of needy persons served, if they conduct rehabilitation programs which are:
- Available to either a majority of the total inmate population (including inmates awaiting trial or sentencing) or to a majority of sentenced inmates, and
- Of sufficient scope to permit participation by either a majority of the total inmate population or a majority of sentenced inmates for a minimum of 10 hours per week per inmate.

FNS INSTRUCTION 706-3

(III)

B Needy Persons Served. Inmates in correctional institutions may be considered to be in need of food assistance by virtue of having been removed from any legitimate means of livelihood. Thus, eligible correctional institutions may receive donated foods in accordance with section VI B 1 of FNS(FD) Instruction 706-1, Rev. 1, Participation of Charitable Institutions in the Food Distribution Program. They may receive foods on behalf of all inmates including those awaiting trial or sentencing.

IV TYPES OF REHABILITATIVE PROGRAMS

A General. In determining whether a program is rehabilitative, the decisive factor must be whether the inmate or the institution is the principal beneficiary of the activity. If an activity is intended to prepare an inmate for return to society, it may be considered to be rehabilitative. However, work whose primary function is to produce income for the institution or otherwise to assist financially in its administration may be considered to be rehabilitative only if inmates performing the work are thereby gaining skills, attitudes, or work habits which will help them become useful citizens.

The burden of proof as to whether or not a given program or activity is rehabilitative must be on the institution itself. Standards by which correctional institutions may evaluate rehabilitative activities are contained in the Manual of Standards for Adult Correctional Institutions and the Manual of Standards for Adult Community Residential Services issued in 1977 by the Commission on Accreditation of the American Correctional Association. The latter publication is applicable to halfway houses and prerelease centers.

- B Flizible Categories. Participation by inmates in the following activities may be considered to be rehabilitative:
- 1 Academic education courses at elementary, high school, college or postgraduate levels, including study release programs.
- 2 Vocational education or training formal courses or on-the-job training in trades.
- 3 Employment work experience involving the acquisition, maintenance, or improvement of trade or professional skills, including work release programs.
- 4 Clinical or counseling services psychiatric therapy and psychological or other counseling, including chaplaincy services.
- 5 Health therapy treatment of physical handicaps including drug or alcohol addiction which may have contributed to an inmate's breaking the law.

V RESPONSIBILITIES

A Distributing Agencies shall:

- 1 Before executing an agreement for donation of foods to an adult correctional institution, require the institution's director or other responsible the eligibility criteria of section III, above.
- As a condition of continued distribution of donated foods to any adult correctional institution, require that the extent of eligibility be redetermined and the certification statement referred to in subparagraph 1, above, be resubmitted at least every 12 months.
- 3 Otherwise observe the responsibilities outlined in section X of FNS(FD) Instruction 706-1, Rev. 1.
- B Regional Offices shall insure that distributing agencies properly interpret and apply the provisions of this Instruction.
